ye have not offered me sacrifices in obedience to my commands, or for my glory, but for some selfish respects; and have even grudged the expense of them, while ye were liberal in the service of idols; ye have abused my revelations, ordinances, and bounties of providence, to encourage you in wickedness, till I can no longer bear with you. 25. Nevertheless, merely for my own name's sake, I still offer you a full and free forgiveness of all your iniquities through the blood of my Son. 26. Let this my gracious pardon and promise be pleaded by you; or, if you think you have a righteousness of your own to plead upon, which I have not observed, point it out if you can. 27, 28. Ye cannot plead the merits of your ancestors, or rulers in church or state, as all of them have been sinners, and most of them notorious transgressors. Yea, on that very account have I exposed your chief priests to contempt and ruin, and your whole nation to dreadful misery and ignominy.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLIII.—O how grace much more abounds where guilt and ignominy had abounded! Thrice happy are those troubles which occasion the peculiar presence, supports, and comforts of a reconciled God! How important that relation which is the source and foundation of such divine favours! Happy are they whom God has chosen for himself! Neither opposition, guilt, nor distance, shall be able to prevent their access to and enjoyment of him. But unhappy are they who stand in the way of their mercy. Incomparably better is JEHOVAH than any of his rivals, both enemies and friends being judges. And great and glorious things his people ought to attest concerning him in their profession and practice; for mighty are the things which he hath showed or done, or will do, for them! Marvellous is the change which his grace in the gospel makes on hearts and nations. And every mercy received is but a pledge of another. Surely then we should, with the most ardent affections, show forth his praise! But, alas! by what fearful sins of omission and commission many professors provoke him, to their own and their neighbours' destruction! Yet transcendently sovereign are his unlimited pardons. And hopeful is the case if, under a deep sense of our own and our fathers' iniquities, we supplicate for and receive them.

CHAP. XLIV.—Ver. 2. God formed the Jews into rational creatures, and into a church for himself: and forms believers, and renders them members of Christ's mystical body and gospel church. 3—5. I will publish my gospel, and pour out my Spirit in an abundant manner, upon corners and persons destitute of them; that, being rooted and grounded in Christ, they may quickly grow in grace and good works, and may be determined solemnly to devote themselves to the faith, profession, and obedience of Christ, and the fellowship of his church. 7, 8. Which of the heathen idols can foretel, and in order accomplish, events as I have done, since the creation, or the taking of Israel into covenant with me? And why then do you fear that any of them should hinder me from fulfilling my present promises, when they have never been able hitherto to hinder the predicted events which have befallen you. 21—28. Consider, my people, whom I have chosen, called, regenerated, and will never forsake, the vanity of idols, and madness of their votaries, and the judicial blindness to which they are given up; and return to me, your Redeemer, by faith and repentance, in the view of my having graciously pardoned all your great and numerous transgressions. And let all the inhabitants of heaven and earth, and particularly the Gentiles, praise God for the deliverance of the Jews from Babylon, and the redemption by Jesus typified thereby. The God who hath promised is he who made and governs all things, who can easily frustrate the predictions of the Chaldean soothsayers, and blast all the political designs of their statesmen; and who takes pleasure to fulfil that which he has foretold by his prophets concerning the rebuilding of the Jewish cities, and the removal of impediments out of his way, and drying up the Euphrates, that Babylon may be taken by Cyrus the Persian, whom he has appointed for releasing his people, and causing them to rebuild his temple at Jerusalem.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLIV.—Thrice happy are the people saved by the Lord, in their manifold relations to him, and blessings received from him! Happy are they who are, both themselves and their seed, interested in the new covenant! Infinite is the fulness of the Holy Ghost; and liberally God bestows him upon destitute, withered, and wretched men. His influences bring them effectually to God, and render holiness, and the most solemn dedication of themselves to God, as a Saviour, Husband, and Governor, their delight! What madness is it to forsake JEHOVAH, the fountain of living waters, whose unbounded excellencies are unnumbered, and to choose or form an idol in his room! When men are given up to their own heart's lusts they soon become sottish and diligent in sin! And unpardoned iniquities greatly interrupt our fellowship with God. But it is pleasant to return to him in the view of his full forgiveness and effectual redemption, and with thankful joys to contemplate what he is to us, and has done, and will do for us! And even angels rejoice at the conversion of men. What pleasure God takes to disgrace false teachers, and to honour his ministers of truth! Easily he can retrieve the most forlorn condition, and find proper instruments for his work. And it is an honour for the greatest of men to be his agents in doing good to his people.

CHAP. XLV.—Ver. 1—3. I, the Lord will assist Cyrus, and enable him to overthrow far greater armies than his own. I will dispirit and weaken his opposers; procure him entrance into Babylon and other fortified cities; remove all obstructions out of his way; and give him the wealth of the Lydians, Chaldeans, &c. 5, 6. I will make him strong and active, and will fit and dispose him for these great undertakings. 7. Comfort and calamity, prosperity and adversity, are all formed, in all their circumstances, by my power and wisdom. 8. * How can the creature command his Maker? Observe, he is first to ask the Holy One, consequently, by the holy Spirit; (Rom. 8. 26.) and concerning sins, consequently, by addressing a Father; and thus, not striving against his Maker, but bowing to his Redeemer, the march of providential events moves onward at the prayerful command of the believer.—ED.

† Who is this? It has been applied to Cyrus—but he was not "raised up in righteousness;" and though overruled to fulfil God's purposes, God could not be said to "direct all his ways;" neither did he build the city of Jerusalem, but aidedmerely to the laying of the foundations of the temple. Is not the whole rather a description of Messiah, the Adam of the foregoing verse, who, when sent forth upon earth, made of a woman, was manifested in creature-condition and servant-form—truly raised in righteousness, Spirit-led in "all his ways," the builder of the "New Jerusalem," and the free-grace deliverer of "the captives" of sin and death? § God is essentially invisible, manifest only in providence, but hid as it were behind second causes;—manifest in his silent word, but hid from the wise and prudent; —"manifest in the flesh," but hid behind "the form of a servant;" or, "seen of angels" in glory, but hid from all but the eye of faith and hope.—ED.

‖ Israel shall be saved in the Lord—in the very person of JEHOVAH, who, when "manifest in the flesh," wrought out righteousness and salvation by their engraftment into him by the Spirit, and abiding in him by faith and love. John 15. 5. 1 John. 4. 16.—ED.

¶ This summons refers to a time still future, when "in the Lord shall all the seed of Israel be justified, and shall glory," ver. 25. By the word escaped, it indicates that the return of the Jews will be as much against the will of oppressing nations, as was the Exodus from Egypt; and, by the reference to "graven images," that idolatry will still be prevalent amongst an ignorant people "perishing for lack of knowledge."—ED.

A. M. cir. 3298. B. C. cir. 706.

* When this verse is compared with Rom. 14. 8—12, the reader finds (ver. 8.) that we live or die unto the Lord; he also finds (ver. 9) that this Lord is Jesus—we all then find ourselves "at the judgment-seat of Christ;" and thus (ver. 11, identical with Is. 45. 23.) we find ourselves before that tribunal, fulfilling this prophecy and bowing to JEHOVAH, confessing to God. And surely it is impossible to weigh these things, and continue to deny that Jesus is "God manifest in the flesh."—ED.

procedure, humbly ask of me whatever information or blessings you or my church need, and you shall have your request granted. 13. I have qualified Cyrus to manifest my righteousness, truth, and goodness, in the punishment of the Chaldeans, and the gratuitous deliverance of the Jews. 14. Part of the wealth of the Egyptians, Ethiopians, Arabians, &c., shall be bestowed upon the temple at Jerusalem; and multitudes of them shall humbly join themselves to the gospel church. 19. Not in the manner of the heathen oracles or idols, but in the most public and plain manner, and for your real advantage, I have promised what is true, and commanded what is just and good. 20—25. Ye who have escaped in the devastation of countries, inflicted to punish their abominable idolatries, and who can produce nothing to support the cause of your idols, know that I, the alone God and Saviour, have foretold these things. Renounce all your idols; believe in and acknowledge me as your only, almighty, and effectual Saviour: thus shall ye be infallibly delivered from sin, and all the miseries which it entails, and advanced to everlasting happiness.—I have sworn, and will most faithfully perform my promise, to manifest myself the true God, and make multitudes of all nations submit to my government and worship: and they shall, each one for himself, heartily receive, and solemnly acknowledge, that all their righteousness, for justification, was performed by me, and all their strength, for the performance of duties, is conveyed from me. Even to me shall all my chosen ones come; and all my implacable enemies shall be overwhelmed with misery and ignominy. In a state of union to my person, and through my righteousness, shall all the peculiar people of God have their sins pardoned, and their persons accepted; and in me shall they rejoice and boast.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLV.—God, for the welfare of his church, often casts down the great and mighty, and raises up the weak and obscure. Uncertain are all the enjoyments of this world: it is therefore proper that they all be used for the glory of God, and in kindness to his people. But let me never forget Jesus, who hath ascended up on high, and led captivity captive, and hath received gifts for men, even the rebellious, that God the Lord may dwell among them. Let him order all my crosses and my comforts as he pleases. And while I look up for his abundant blessings, let me never strive with him. Who hath hardened himself against God his Maker, and prospered? Let me be careful for nothing, but in everything by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, make my requests known unto God. Depending upon his infinite mercy, power, and faithfulness, let me expect whatever liberty, provision, honour, victory, or salvation, he has promised. In the firm faith of the gospel, published to all the ends of the earth, let me, let thousands, with holy boasting, avow that in Jesus, the man who is JEHOVAH'S fellow, we have righteousness and strength. But God forbid that we should incur the guilt, the shame, the ruin of such as are incensed against a divine Saviour!

CHAPTER XLVII.

God's judgment upon Babylon and Chaldea, for their effeminacy, cruelty, pride, and superstition.

COME [a] down, and sit in the dust, O virgin daughter* of Babylon; sit on the ground: there is no throne, O daughter of the Chaldeans; for thou shalt no more be called tender and delicate.

2 Take the millstones, and grind meal:† uncover thy locks, make bare the leg, uncover the thigh, pass over the rivers.‡

3 Thy nakedness shall be uncovered, yea, thy shame shall be seen: I will take vengeance, and I will not meet thee as a man.§

4 As for our Redeemer, The LORD of hosts is his name, the Holy One of Israel.

5 Sit thou silent, and get thee into darkness, O daughter of the Chaldeans: for thou shalt no more be called, The lady of kingdoms.‖

6 I was wroth with my people; I have polluted mine inheritance, and given them into thine hand: thou didst show them no mercy; upon the ancient hast thou very heavily laid thy yoke.

7 And thou saidst, I shall be a lady for ever: so that thou didst not lay these things to thy heart, neither didst remember the latter end of it.

8 Therefore hear now this, thou that art

* Virgin daughter—a title still given to cities that have never been conquered.—Ed.

† That meal still continued, even in the time of our Saviour, to be commonly ground by women in small hand-mills, is evident from Mat. 24. 41. It was generally the work of captives and slaves. Ex. 11. 5. Judg. 16. 21.—Ed.

‡ Referring to the unfrequency of bridges in the East.—Ed.

§ I will not meet thee as a man, seems perfectly unintelligible: "Neither will I suffer man to intercede with me," as Abraham did for Sodom, is agreeable to the original, and is perfectly plain.—Ed.

‖ There is a great tendency in all nations to be proud of their capitals, and to bestow upon them great swelling titles: "lady of kingdoms," indicating beauty and delicacy! What a name for a heap of rubbish, the habitation of serpents and wild beasts!—"The eternal city," the fond title of imperial Rome, indicating a certainty of unchangeable splendour! what a name for the ruins that encumber her seven hills, and typify the judgments that are ready to sweep her away!—Ed.

* Babylon was of such prodigious strength, and possessed of such resources, both of provisions and men, that Belshazzar, and the city and army were engaged in the revelry of a festival: in "a moment," and without a blow struck in self-defence, the city was taken, and the kingdom overthrown, about 540 years before the Christian era.—Ed.

† The Babylonians afterwards rebelled against the Persians, and Darius Hystaspes besieged them. For the purpose of prolonging their means of defence, they resolved that all who were incapable of aiding in the defence, including their wives and children, should be put to death. Thus fulfilling, by their own decree and hand, the terrible doom of loss of children which God had denounced against them.—Ed.

‖ Babylon, during all its history, was the fruitful parent of idolatry, lewdness, and debauchery. These were accompanied with high pretensions to the knowledge of occult sciences, called "sorceries and enchantments," (Dan. 2. 2.) by which ignorant and superstitious minds were kept in mental and bodily subjection to a wicked priesthood and tyrannical government.—Ed.

* Heb. viewers of the heavens.

† Judicial astrology, or the pretence of foretelling the future fortunes of children from the position of the planets at the hour of their birth, still holds its place in India; and was, at one period, very prevalent in Europe, from some parts of which it is scarcely yet completely banished. Such alas! has been, and continues to be, the folly and the presumption of men!—Ed.

given to pleasures, that dwellest carelessly; that sayest in thine heart, I am, and none else besides me; I shall not sit as a widow, neither shall I know the loss of children:

9 But these two things shall come to thee in a moment in one day,* the loss of children† and widowhood: they shall come upon thee in their perfection, for the multitude of thy sorceries, and for the great abundance of thine enchantments.

10 For thou hast trusted in thy wickedness; thou hast said, None seeth me. Thy wisdom and thy knowledge, it hath perverted thee; and thou hast said in thine heart, I am, and none else besides me.

11 Therefore shall evil come upon thee; thou shalt not know ‡from whence it riseth: and mischief shall fall upon thee; thou shalt not be able to §put it off: and desolation shall come upon thee suddenly, which thou shalt not know.

12 ¶ Stand now with thine enchantments, and with the multitude of thy sorceries, wherein thou hast laboured from thy youth; ‖if so be thou shalt be able to profit, if so be thou mayest prevail.

13 Thou art wearied in the multitude of thy counsels. Let now the *astrologers,† the star-gazers, ‡the monthly prognosticators, stand up and save thee from these things that shall come upon thee.

14 Behold, they shall be as stubble; the fire shall burn them; they shall not deliver themselves from the power of the flame: there shall not be a coal to warm at, nor fire to sit before it.

15 Thus shall they be unto thee with whom thou hast laboured, even thy merchants,§ from thy youth: they shall wander every one to his quarter; none shall save thee.

Reflections upon Chap. XLVI.—Desolating strokes clearly manifest the vanity of idols. In every period of the Jewish church and nation God was their Protector, Supporter, and Deliverer: in every period of life he is such to every particular saint; and his former kindness ought to make us hope for further favours. It is only necessary to make use of our reason to observe the absurdity of idol worship; and it becomes us to ponder how wickedly we have acted, if we have joined in it. It is absurd to doubt of God's existence, or to neglect revering his almighty power and Godhead, which are so manifest. Firmly fixed are his purposes, and exactly fulfilled in every dispensation of providence; the tumultuous capture of cities, and overthrow of nations, not excepted. But infinitely great is the mercy, that not the worst of plagues or wickedness can debar us from Jesus Christ and his offered salvation!

Chap. XLVII.—Ver. 1—5. Glorious and unconquered kingdom of Babylon, bewail thy approaching calamities: thou shalt be reduced very low: thy dignity and authority taken from thee; thy luxury and delicacy shall be exchanged for afflicting straits and oppressing miseries; thy wretched inhabitants shall be reduced to grind at the mills, or to perform other pieces of the basest drudgery, or driven in herds of captives before their cruel conquerors; they shall be exposed to scorn and disgrace in every form. I, the Almighty God and Redeemer of Israel, by the irresistible effects of my just vengeance, will render your city and country desolate and miserable. 6—8. Because ye have cruelly murdered and oppressed the Jews, and presumptuously boasted that your empire could never fall, never be equalled in power and wealth, and never want a king and people to defend it. 14, 15. No comfort shall be left you;—and your merchants and hired troops shall flee away to their respective countries.

Reflections upon Chap. XLVII.—God delights to abase the proud, and to deal in severity with the unmerciful. And, alas! the mightiest nations soon sink under the hand of an angry but righteous God, and the weight of their manifold sins. The very sins in which they had gloried or laboured, or by which they had hoped to save themselves, become the principal causes of their ruin. Yea, the mischiefs which sinners least dreaded often come fatally upon them. And false teachers, who are the instruments in deceiving others, shall themselves feel the heaviest strokes of vengeance.

by the name of the LORD, and make mention of the God of Israel, but [a] not in truth, nor in righteousness.

2 For [b] they call themselves of the [c] holy city,* and stay themselves upon the God of Israel; The LORD of hosts is his name.

3 [d] I have declared the former things from the beginning; and they went forth out of my mouth, and I showed them; I did them suddenly, and they came to pass.

4 Because I knew that [e] thou art † obstinate, and thy neck is an iron sinew, and thy brow brass;

5 [f] I have even from the beginning declared it to thee; before it came to pass I showed it thee: lest thou shouldest say, Mine idol hath done them; and my graven image, and my molten image, hath commanded them.

6 Thou hast heard, see all this; and [g] will not ye declare it?‡ I have showed thee new things from this time, even [h] hidden things, and thou didst not know them.

7 They are created now, and not from the beginning; even before the day when thou heardest them not;§ lest thou shouldest say, Behold, I knew them.

8 [i] Yea, thou heardest not; yea, thou knewest not; yea, from that time that thine ear was not opened; for I knew that thou wouldest deal very treacherously, and wast called [k] a transgressor from the womb.‖

9 ¶ [l] For my name's sake will I defer mine anger, and for my praise will I refrain for thee, that I cut thee not off.

10 Behold, I have refined thee, but not * with silver;† I have chosen thee in the furnace of affliction.

11 For mine own sake, even for mine own sake, will I do it: for how should my name be polluted? and [m] I will not give my glory unto another.

12 ¶ Hearken unto me, O Jacob and Israel, my called; I am he: I am the first, I also am the last.

13 [n] Mine hand also hath laid the foundation of the earth, and ‡ my right hand hath spanned the heavens; [o] when I call unto them, they stand up together.*

14 All ye, assemble yourselves, and hear; which among them hath declared these things? The LORD hath loved [p] him:† he will do his pleasure on Babylon, and his arm shall be on the Chaldeans.

15 I, even I, have spoken; yea, I have called him: I have brought him, and he shall make his way prosperous.

16 ¶ Come ye near unto me, hear ye this; I have not spoken in secret from the beginning; from the time that it was, there am I; and now the Lord GOD, and his Spirit, [q] hath sent me.‡

17 Thus saith the LORD, thy Redeemer, the Holy One of Israel, I am the LORD thy God which teacheth thee [r] to profit, which leadeth thee by the way that thou shouldest go.

18 Oh that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments! then had thy peace been as a river,§ and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea:‖

19 Thy seed also had been as the sand, and the offspring of thy bowels like the gravel thereof: his name * should not have been cut off nor destroyed from before me.

20 ¶ [s] Go ye forth of Babylon, flee ye from the Chaldeans; with a voice of singing declare ye, tell this, utter it even to the end of the earth; say ye, The LORD hath redeemed his servant Jacob.†

21 And they thirsted not when he led them through the deserts: he caused the waters to flow out of the rock for them; he clave the rock also, and the waters gushed out.

22 There is no peace, saith the LORD, unto the wicked.‡

Jacob and Judah his most honourable son, and are citizens of Jerusalem, and profess much, though feigned, confidence and dependence on God. 3—8. By foretelling and accomplishing events, I have given you the most undeniable proofs of my true Godhead, because I knew you were so stubborn and untractable. I have even so timed my predictions, as to leave you no ground to pretend that either you or your idols then foresaw the events; for I knew you were so long hardened in perverseness, that you would choose to ascribe your information to any other than to me. 9—11. From regard to the honour of my own perfections, covenant, and promises, I will not utterly destroy you. Nevertheless, in order to purge you from your sins, particularly your gross idolatries, I must try you in a furnace of moderate affliction in Chaldea, and there renew my choice of you for my peculiar people. 14, 15. God manifested his love to Cyrus by employing him in such honourable services, and giving him such prosperous success in destroying the Chaldeans. 16. From the very beginning I have plainly and publicly foretold future events, and have been always ready to fulfil my predictions. And now I am appointed of God to foretell, and in due time to execute, things relative to Cyrus and Babylon, and the redemption prefigured by it. 17—19. I am your divine instructor and leader in what conduces to your peace and prosperity; and if ye had but hearkened to my commandments, your peace, and the prosperity flowing from your piety and virtue, had been abundant and lasting; your children should have been greatly increased; nor should they have been carried captive out of my land. 20, 21. Ye shall certainly be delivered from Babylon, and shall be provided for in your return, as well as your fathers were in their departure from Egypt.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLVIII.—Of how small avail are all possible connexions or appearances in religion, if there be not a work of real grace in the heart! God knows our hearts; and his word is intended to show us our sinful and miserable condition by nature. No providences, whether smiling or severe, can make obstinate sinners practise their duty. But what care God takes to prevent his people's apostasy, and to leave them inexcusable therein; great things will he do either in mercy or judgment for his name's sake. With care and pity he refines his people in the furnace of trouble; and restrains the remainder of his wrath, which would not tend to his praise! His perfections and promises are a sure foundation of deliverance, even when we deserve destruction. Tender and powerful are the instructions of Jesus Christ: and we lose multitudes of blessings by our disobedience to them. It is comfortable and safe to be under his care and protection: but infinitely dangerous to remain obstinate in wickedness amidst all the means of his grace.

In consequence of my excessive debasement and trouble among the Jews, JEHOVAH will highly exalt me, seasonably grant whatever assistance and protection I need for myself or members, and grant me a numerous seed through the whole world, saved from all their misery and bondage, and richly supplied with the precious and comfortable oracles, ordinances, and blessings of the new covenant, while both angels and men shall rejoice in their happiness. 14—23. mightiest devils or persecutors be able to hinder their conversion and salvation; since God, as their Redeemer, will exert his almighty power for their deliverance, and the tremendous ruin of their enemies.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLIX.—What important truths are notified to men by the gospel of Christ! And great is the mercy that the Gentiles have so deep concern in it, and such abundant access to know and receive it. Enlarged gifts and grace are necessary to qualify men for the ministry. And exalted ought to be their ends, earnest their care, and assiduous their labour, in winning souls to Christ. Glorious and certain shall be the reward of their faithful service, even though it should not have the wished success with men. But infinite is the mercy of God, in calling his own Son to his mediatorial office, and qualifying him for it; —in freely giving him for us as a Ransom, and to us as an effectual Saviour! By it JEHOVAH'S declarative glory, and the everlasting happiness of men, are wonderfully advanced. Alas! that ever he should be rejected, and his grace received in vain;—that his salvation, so extensive and suitable, should be so undervalued and refused!—In his days of power, God effectually enlightens the mind, looses the bonds, supplies the wants, protects the persons, comforts the hearts, and makes plain the paths of his people. His work of redemption, his saving of multitudes, demands our highest praise: and the assurances of his constant and everlasting kindness, and his promises to remove everything hurtful, give ground of encouragement to the most despondent. Thrice pleasant is it to behold the church extending her limits, and mightily increasing her members; and to discern how almighty power and grace protects and blesses it, notwithstanding all opposition!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. L.—How common is it, but as absurd, for self-ruined, and even obstinate sinners, to lay the blame of their misery on God, who is infinitely able and ready to save!—Yea, infinite is the fitness of Jesus Christ to instruct, quicken, and comfort our souls. Great was the cheerfulness and boldness with which he endured the suffering, and performed the obedience, necessary in the work of our redemption. Wonderful was the pleasure of JEHOVAH in assisting, supporting, and honouring him in it: and infinite is his tenderness towards distressed and disconsolate souls, and his indignation against presumptuous sinners. Never let me pretend to teach others till God has taught myself. And embracing every opportunity of fellowship with him, let me always act in his service under the influence of a gracious good will to it. Never let me shrink at doing or suffering for Jesus Christ, who has done and suffered so much for me. In every difficulty of work or warfare, let me firmly believe that he will do great things for me. In deeps, in nights of desertion, temptation, trouble, and grief, let me never fear, but only believe that, while I sit in darkness, the Lord will be a light unto me, and will bring me to the light. And let me stand in awe, lest confidence in my own wisdom and righteousness should entail upon me everlasting damnation.

CHAP. LI.—Ver. 1—3. established and attended by his power, shall be effectual for converting multitudes to Christ, and for revealing and bestowing upon them his everlasting righteousness and salvation. 9—16. The almighty power of God, which plagued the Egyptians and divided the Red Sea, shall bring the Jews from Babylon and their present dispersion with great joy, and deliver the church from heathenish or antichristian oppressors.—And for your comfort against the threatened fury of oppressors, the almighty Creator has given you his promises, and has protected you, that he may re-establish you as his church and people; and has raised up and qualified Jesus Christ in order to the erection and establishment of his gospel church. 17—23. Let not therefore the Jews, or the Christian church, despair under the terrible and destructive, and even stupifying judgments of God inflicted upon them: he will, in his proper time, deliver them, and pour out his vengeance upon the Chaldeans, Syro-grecians, Romans, Antichristians, and Turks, who cruelly oppressed them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. LI.—The perfections, relations, covenant promises, and providences of God are an infinite source of consolation to his saints. With ease he accomplishes the most remarkable events in mercy. And yet it is hard to make those who are in anguish of spirit, to hearken to his words of comfort, or to review what he has done for them, either for their humiliation or encouragement, or for their excitement to holiness. How strangely God connects his mercies and his judgments! But there is little reason to regard either the reproaches or terrors of wicked men, when JEHOVAH and his blessings are ours, and near to us. And quickly will our waiting, weeping, and working for him, be graciously rewarded with unutterable and everlasting joys. How easily can JEHOVAH renew and restore souls, and form and re-establish churches, by the word of his power! But terrible are even his paternal chastisements. And unfaithfulness to him is often punished by the unfaithfulness of our relations to us. By sinfully quarrelling with his providences we but entangle and torment ourselves. None can comfort when God wounds us. But though he cause grief, he will have compassion. Whom he loveth he will love unto the end. And if judgments begin at the house of God, where shall the ungodly sinner and persecutor appear?

CHAP. LII.—Ver. 1—6. Rejoice, ye Jews, in hopes of being graciously delivered from your heathen oppressors and corrupters, without any ransom, even as you have already been from the Egyptians and the Assyrians. And as I get nothing by your misery but blasphemous reproaches, as if I could not, or cared not, to deliver you, I will make you quickly to experience the fulfilment of all my promises. And, in like manner, rejoice, thou gospel church, in hopes of thy extension, purification, and deliverance from every enemy, heathen, popish, or Mahometan. 7—12. Great joy and harmony, hearty renunciation of idols, and a composed return of the Jews to their own land, shall be produced by the proclamation of Cyrus, and the Lord's powerful appearance for their relief; and much more by the publication of the gospel by Jesus Christ and his apostles, and by the effectual redemption of multitudes from heathenism, popery, Satan, and their own lusts, by an ascended Redeemer. 13—15. The infinitely well-qualified Messiah, in consequence of his inexpressible ignominy, debasement, and suffering, shall be highly exalted as Head over all things to his church; and shall, by his word, his Spirit, and blood, purify multitudes of sinful Gentiles from their iniquities; and even kings, and other great ones, shall with reverence hear his gospel truths, which had been hid from former generations, and shall submit to his laws.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. LII.—God's grace and our duty, his glory and our salvation, are marvellously connected. Both saints and sinners ought to bestir themselves when he offers deliverance. And thrice happy is the church when she is duly separated from the world, which lieth in wickedness. And yet how averse are many to partake of this blessedness: how averse to accept of an offered deliverance from corrupt lusts, or from corrupt societies and synagogues of Satan! But blessed are the effects of Jesus' gospel and government in the world, powerful the influence of his offices and states, and effectual the manifestation of his person, sufferings, and glory, for the conversion of the most hardened sinners.

CHAP. LIII.—Ver. 1—3. How few truly believe the gospel record concerning Jesus Christ! How few experience his effectual power, or behold his heart-captivating glory;—who, in his humbled estate, under the special care and protection of JEHOVAH, sprung from the debased family of David, in the likeness of sinful flesh, without any external glory or pomp,—and was all along oppressed with miseries and griefs, and quite contemned and hated by men, especially the Jewish rulers and people! 4—9. But notwithstanding our reckoning him persecuted by God as a notorious criminal, he, as our Surety, to whom it had pleased the Lord to impute our iniquities, suffered, in the most patient manner, the punishment due to our sins, that he might expiate them, and purchase our eternal salvation:—to manifest which, JEHOVAH not only allotted him an honourable interment, but quickly released him from his grave, and made him the mediatorial Parent of multitudes of Jewish and Gentile converts, in that very age so remarkable for wickedness. 10—12. In consequence of bearing our iniquities, and the punishment thereof, which his Father, in love to us, inflicted upon him in his soul and body, that he might thereby make full atonement for our sin, he is rewarded with everlasting life and honour; and has, to his infinite satisfaction, a numerous seed of Jewish and Gentile converts, whom he instructs, and through his own righteousness justifies and saves. And while he is enthroned far above all principalities and powers, he erects, extends, and establishes his spiritual kingdom on earth, and his kingdom of glory in heaven.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. LIII.—Alas! that Jesus Christ, and his gospel, should be so little known to the hearers of it! But nothing less than almighty grace can make us either know or believe in him. God exactly verified his predictions and promises in the whole debasement and exaltation of our Redeemer. Though carnal apprehensions of him lead men to contemn, reject, and blaspheme him, infinite was his love in undertaking, obeying, and suffering, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God! How great was his Father's love in transferring our sins, and with pleasure punishing them, on his infinitely well beloved, his only begotten Son! And sweet, full, firm, and lasting is that forgiveness, that redemption, which comes through the blood, the intercession of God in our nature, and from JEHOVAH'S infinite and unchangeable love. In the ratified promises of the new covenant, an extensive and firm foundation is laid for that faith, by which we do and must receive Jesus Christ, as made of God to us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption. And the rewards of our obedience of faith are all gloriously wrapped up in the purchased rewards of Jesus Christ!

CHAP. LIV.—Ver. 1—5. Rejoice greatly, ye Gentiles, who have hitherto produced few converts to Christ; for now greater multitudes of you shall be born again than ever were in the Jewish church: greater multitudes shall be converted to Christ, after his departure to heaven, than while his church enjoyed his bodily presence. The gospel church, that tabernacle of God, shall be greatly enlarged by the conversion of entile nations on every side. No more shall they be reproached, as rejected by and strangers to God: for now shall the divine Jesus, and his Father, espouse to himself a peculiar people in all places of the world. 6—10. And however destitute and wretched in themselves, despicable in their first appearances, or distressed and persecuted in after ages, as the Jewish church was during the captivity in Babylon and the Syro-grecian persecution, yet will I never cast them off, nor withdraw my affectionate regard, but after occasional frowns, still manifest new tokens of my favour. 11—17. Notwithstanding her terrible distress, persecution, and inward perplexities, I will render her glorious in oracles, ordinances, gifts, and graces, officers, and members, and in spiritual knowledge, peace, and holiness; and, in due time, will grant full deliverance, and destroy all her enemies, spiritual and temporal, heathen, popish, or Mahometan; and that graciously, through my own righteousness imputed or displayed on them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. LIV.—Wretched was the state of religion in the world for many ages before Christianity was established. And great power in God, and care in men, are necessary for spreading the gospel, and enlarging the church. But surely it is much to be lamented that some, who have most of the means, have least of the power, of grace. It is great matter of joy to the long-rejected Gentiles, that Jesus, our Maker, is now our God and our Husband, able to save us to the uttermost. May we ever walk as his bride, loving, cleaving to, and trusting in him! He condescends to our wretchedness in dealing with our souls. And wisely he mingles his favours and frowns, that we may neither be proud under the one, nor despair under the other. But there is great matter of joy, and sure ground of faith, in the absolute unchangeableness of his love and covenant of peace. Graciously he remarks his people's distresses, and balances them with his mercies unnumbered. His instructions effectually render us pious and peaceful. And safe are those, amidst millions of enemies, who have Jesus' righteousness imputed to their conscience, and JEHOVAH, the Manager of the world, in him, their Protector, and the Revenger of the injuries done to them.

CHAP. LV.—Ver. 1—5. Ye sinners of mankind, who are not, but wish to be, happy, come ye, however guilty or polluted, to the ordinances of the gospel, and by faith freely receive all the blessings and privileges graciously offered in it. Why do ye lay out your gifts, parts, and opportunities, in pursuit of worldly enjoyments, superstitious devotions, or self-righteousness, which can afford you no solid satisfaction? Carefully listen to and believe my gospel offers and invitations; and let your souls with pleasure receive and live on the substantial, satisfying, strengthening, and sanctifying blessings therein conferred. By faith embrace these offers, as the means of your spiritual and eternal life; and I will establish with you the everlasting covenant of grace, which contains, bequeaths, and ensures all the free blessings promised to David; but purchased by and lodged in Jesus Christ for the salvation of miserable sinners!—Behold with faith, love, and admiration, I have freely granted him to publish and attest every gospel truth to ignorant and unbelieving men, to instruct and guide them to salvation, to rule and defend them, and to restrain or conquer their enemies. And at his invitation, through the influence of the Holy Ghost, and in order to glorify him, shall multitudes of Gentiles, who had neither been acknowledged by him nor known him, receive and submit to him. 6—13. Importunately seek after and heartily embrace him as your Saviour and portion, while he earnestly offers himself to you in his word and ordinances. Let even the greatest sinner detest, and turn from his self-contrived methods of relief, as well as from his courses and purposes of wickedness, in the sure faith of the unbounded mercy and pardoning grace of God: for in riches of mercy, h purposes, words, and works, infinitely transcend everything similar, and eve conception among men; and his promises cannot be defeated, but always issue i blessings to mankind.—And as, with great joy, the Jews shall be divinely conducte from Babylon, and their present dispersion, to their own country, and shall plan multiply, and flourish in the same, so shall multitudes, to the public and lastin honour of God, be delivered from their spiritual bondage of heathenism, poper Satan, or their lusts; and while themselves are converted from mischievous sinne into agreeable and useful saints, they shall be delivered from whatever is hurtf and offensive.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. LV.—Think now, my soul, how all the blessings salvation are framed to answer our need!—The most trifling cumberers of God vineyard, nay, the most notorious sinners, are expressly, are earnestly invited l him to receive the same, without any conditions. Infinite is his grace, who, infinite expense, provides these favours for his enemies, his betrayers, and mu derers, and thus offers them to his despisers. But infinitely criminal must be th unbelief which treads on such grace, and doubts the fulfilment of his infallible pr mises. And base is the heart, and cruel the preacher, who gives JEHOVAH the lie; and pretends that self-formed qualifications of sensibility and sincerity must render us welcome to his market of GRACE.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. LVI.—God's kindness powerfully binds and constrains to holiness in all manner of conversation. And if I share of his grace, it becomes me to hate evil; to love him with all my heart, soul, mind, and strength; carefully to observe all his institutions, and do to my neighbours of mankind as I would they should do to me. Always should I rest contented with my earthly lot, as now no natural defects can debar me from the congregation of the Lord: and the fulness of Jesus' covenant can sufficiently balance my want of children, or anything beside. Yea, let me greatly rejoice that Gentile sinners are now not only invited, but divinely drawn to God's holy mountain, and the gospel church, with its divine and life-giving ordinances. But fearful is the presage of impending ruin when ministers and magistrates become monsters, and patterns of wickedness.

CHAP. LVII.—Ver. 3—12. Answer ye my charge, ye who, descended from wicked parents, have abandoned yourselves to witchcraft, adultery, and idolatry. Why do ye contemptuously deride me and my prophets, abandon yourselves to vices, and yet hypocritically pretend to serve me? Ye are violent and eager upon your idolatrous worship, and sacrifice your children to Molech. Ye can hardly see a smooth stone in a river but you fancy it to be a god, and offer oblations to it. Can this fail to provoke me? Ye build temples and altars on every high place, and toil yourselves to go up and sacrifice there. Every corner of your houses is stored with memorials of your idols; and by coveting whatever you have seen among heathens, ye have exceedingly multiplied them. By courting alliances with heathen princes, even on the basest terms, ye have partook with them in their idolatrous worship. Without ever being convinced by your disappointments, ye have wearied yourselves in foreign embassies and wickedness; and obtaining present ease, have never repented of your conduct. Without any proper ground of fear, ye have thus acted treacherously towards me, never regarding my relation to you, or the great things which I have done for you; and my patience exercised and forbearing, has but tempted you to disregard me the more. Therefore, by my fearful judgments executed upon you, will I manifest how criminal and ruinous your conduct has been. Nor shall your idols, or heathen allies, be able to protect either themselves or you. 13—21. But such as believe my word, and trust in my perfections, shall return from their captivity to Canaan by my providence; and Cyrus, by his proclamation, shall remove every hinderance in their way. For however high and lofty I am as the Holy One who inhabits eternity, yet am I infinitely condescending towards persons destitute, distressed, and broken in spirit: nor will I continue my judgments till such be utterly ruined or discouraged.—For their injustice, and other abominations, I have indeed punished them by the Chaldeans, Syro-grecians, Romans, and others; and yet, under their affliction, they have become worse and worse. I will therefore, by an extension of sovereign grace, forgive and reform them, lead them back to their duty and their country, and restore comforts to them; and by my prophets publish peace and prosperity to them, that their lips may be filled with my praise. But by their own lusts, guilt, and fears, and the judgments which I inflict, the wicked shall always remain in a restless, shameful, and loathsome condition.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. LVII.—God kindly hides his people in heaven from his terrible judgments on earth. And great is the folly and ignorance of men, that such alarming warnings are often so little regarded. Dreadful indeed must be our inward corruption, which can thus push us to the utmost wickedness in every form, notwithstanding all the laws, mercies, and judgments which God lays in our way to hinder it. And when God himself is thus contemned and insulted, his faithful ministers must not hope to escape. But he will not always suffer our sins to pass unpunished. When he is wroth, not any created helper can in the least avail us. But an abiding faith will secure a blessed portion, both in time and eternity: and God himself will undoubtedly pity and relieve us in our depths of distress. Great is the happiness of those hearts in which he dwells. No evil can approach, no good be absent.—Alas! how covetousness provokes God and ruins men! But infinite is that grace which heaps mercies on the richest deservers of hell. Delightful is the new covenant connexion betwixt pardon, conversion, comfort, peace, and holy gratitude. But fearful is the guilt, and tremendous the misery, of such as perish in their sins amidst the offers and influences of God's GRACE.

CHAP. LVIII.—Ver. 1—7. Why complain ye so loudly that I do not reward your fasting, while therein you but gratify your own inclinations, oppress your poor servants, promote contention and oppression of the innocent, reproach your debtors, servants, or neighbours, or content yourselves with mere outward noise and show?—whereas the fasting which I delight in, is to repent of, and reform you from, your wickedness; particularly your usurious exactions and cruel oppressions, and to bestow necessary supplies upon your poor brethren. 8—12. If you forbear and restrain oppression of your neighbours, threatening and derisive contempt, hypocritical dissimulation, and do kindly pity and relieve the destitute and afflicted, great shall be your gracious reward; great shall be your comfort, prosperity, and glory. God shall, by his presence and providence, protect you; he shall readily accept and grant your requests; he shall direct you in all your ways, and while others are distressed with want, ye shall be plentifully provided for, and rendered the honoured instruments of re-establishing your nation, repairing your long desolate cities, and of the erection and re-establishment of the gospel church. 13, 14. And if ye carefully abstain from all carnal labour and recreations on the sabbath, and with pleasure observe it in the spiritual exercises of my worship, ye shall enjoy unbounded comforts in me, as your God, in my ordinances; and with safety, honour, and pleasure, continue in the possession of Canaan, till at last ye be exalted to the felicities of the heavenly inheritance.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. LVIII.—There is great need that ministers should deal closely with the consciences of their hearers, particularly nominal professors; and that all should seek, by a thorough self-examination, the evident marks of grace. For what alarming lengths in religious appearances do hypocrites sometimes go, and that merely to gratify their own legality and pride! Many flatter themselves that God will reward the services which, in fact, he abhors. And such are often greatly exasperated to have the vanity of their self-confidence exposed. There is much need of great brokenness of heart for, and of reformation from, sin, in our humiliation for it: otherwise our demure looks will but provoke God to abhor us. Nor can we have a deep sense of Jesus' grace without having our hearts and hands opened towards our poor and distressed brethren: and what is lent to the Lord, by relieving his people, he repays with usury. Let us likewise be careful that our hearts are sanctified and divinely influenced, in order to a proper sanctification of the Lord's day. Multitudes undergo the most alarming

CHAPTER LIX.

(1) God mighty to save: 1. (2) Sin justly separates from God: 2—8. (3) National calamities arising from national sins: 9—15. (4) Salvation in extremity: 16—19. (5) The Redeemer and his covenant: 20, 21.

A. M. cir. 3306. B. C. cir. 698.

BEHOLD, the LORD's hand is not shortened, that it cannot save; neither his ear heavy, that it cannot hear:[a]

2 But your iniquities have separated between you and your God, and your sins [t] have hid his face from you, that he will not hear.[‡]

3 For your hands are defiled with blood,[§] and your fingers with iniquity; your lips have spoken lies, your tongue hath muttered perverseness.

4 None calleth for justice, nor any pleadeth for truth: they trust in vanity, and speak lies; they conceive mischief, and bring forth iniquity:

5 They hatch [l] cockatrice' eggs, and weave the spider's[e] web: he that eateth[†] of their eggs dieth, and [z] that which is crushed breaketh out into a viper.

6 Their webs shall not become garments, neither shall they cover themselves with their works: their works are works of iniquity, and the act of violence is in their hands.

7 Their feet run to evil, and they make haste to shed innocent blood: their thoughts are thoughts of iniquity; wasting and [a] destruction are in their paths.

8 The way of peace they know not; and there is no [b] judgment in their goings: they have made them crooked paths; whosoever goeth therein shall not know peace.

9 Therefore[f] is judgment[‖] far from us, neither doth justice[*] overtake us: we wait for light, but behold obscurity; for brightness, but we walk in darkness.

10 We grope[†] for the wall like the blind, and we grope as if we had no eyes: we stumble at noon-day as in the night; we are in desolate places as dead men.

11 We roar all like bears,[‡] and mourn sore like doves:[§] we look for judgment, but there is none; for salvation, but it is far off from us.

12 For our transgressions are multiplied before thee, and our sins testify against us: for our transgressions are with us; and as for our iniquities, we know them;

13 [c] In transgressing and lying against the LORD, and departing away from our God, speaking oppression and revolt, conceiving and uttering from the heart words of falsehood.

14 And [d] judgment is turned away backward, and justice standeth afar off: for truth is fallen in the street, and equity cannot enter.

15 Yea, truth faileth; and he that [e] departeth from evil [f] maketh himself a prey:[*] and the LORD saw it, and [†] it displeased him that there was no judgment.

16 ¶ And he saw that [g] there was no man, and wondered that there was no intercessor: [h] therefore his arm brought salvation unto him; and his righteousness[‡] it sustained him.

17 [i] For he put on righteousness as a breastplate, and an helmet of salvation upon his head; and he put on the garments of vengeance for clothing, and was clad with zeal as a cloak.

18 According to their [§] deeds, accordingly he will repay, fury to his adversaries, recompense to his enemies; to the islands he will repay recompense.[‖]

19 So shall they fear the name of the LORD from the west, and his glory from the rising of the sun:[*] [k] when the enemy shall come in like a flood, the Spirit of the LORD shall [†] lift up a standard against him.

20 ¶ And [l] the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the LORD.

21 As for me, [m] this is my covenant with them, saith the LORD; My Spirit that is upon thee,[‡] and my words which I have put in thy mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, saith the LORD, from henceforth and for ever.

miseries in time and eternity, as the just punishment of their profanation of it; while in keeping his commandments there is a great reward.

CHAP. LIX.—Ver. 5, 6. With the utmost labour and care they frame villanous schemes of doctrine or practice, by which their neighbours and partners are destroyed, and themselves nothing profited.——9—11. To punish our iniquity, men deny us justice, and God refuses to plead our cause. When we expect deliverance and prosperity, our miseries are increased, our spirits are overwhelmed with despair, and our anguish and grief inexpressible. 16—21. Finding that there are scarcely any left to stand up for injured honesty and truth, or even to plead for mercy, God will exert his immediate power in the righteous and faithful salvation of his people, and the destruction of their enemies, Chaldeans, Syro-grecians, Romans, Papists, or Mahometans; and thus shall the nations around be awed by, or turned to, the Lord. Whenever Satan, or his instruments, make any assault, God, by the preaching of the gospel, and by his providence, shall effectually and suddenly repress their attempts. Jesus, the almighty Redeemer, shall not only appear in his debased estate in the Jewish church and temple, but shall dwell in his gospel church, and at last convert to himself the remnant of the Hebrew nation along with the fulness of the Gentiles. And the Spirit and oracles of God, granted to him and his church, shall always, especially in the happy millennium, abide with his ministers and people, to direct and instruct them in every thing necessary.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. LIX.—It is in vain to expect favours from God while we indulge ourselves in sin; and absurd to love that which separates us from our God, and entails his vengeance on our heads. Dreadful is that root of original corruption which springs up in so many abominable courses; miserable their condition, who have their own conscience upbraiding them, while JEHOVAH and his instruments are punishing them; and awful the situation when the universal prevalency of wickedness is attended with general wretchedness, perplexity, and anguish! Thrice happy is it to reflect, that where sin abounded, grace doth much more abound; and that our whole salvation, and the destruction of our enemies, depend on God himself, and not on us: that Jesus Christ and his Spirit are appointed to accomplish the whole work of our conversion and salvation, nothing being left to the prudent care and good management of our own free will.

CHAP. LX.—Ver. 1, 2. Be enlightened, comforted, and glorious, O church, for not only is thy deliverance out of Babylon effected, but the Son of God is come in our nature, to enlighten the world, and glorify God in the salvation of men. earth, and gross darkness the people: but [a] the LORD shall arise upon thee, and his glory* shall be seen upon thee.

3 And the Gentiles shall come to thy light, and kings to the brightness of thy rising.†

4 [b] Lift up thine eyes round about, and see; all they gather themselves together, they come to thee: thy sons shall come from far, and thy daughters shall be nursed at thy side.‡

5 Then thou shalt see, and flow together,§ and thine heart shall fear, and be enlarged; because the [c] abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee, the [d] forces of the Gentiles shall come unto thee.

6 The multitude of camels shall cover thee, the dromedaries of Midian and Ephah; all they from Sheba shall come: they shall bring gold and incense, and they shall show forth the praises of the LORD.

7 All the flocks of Kedar shall be gathered together unto thee, the rams of Nebaioth shall minister‖ unto thee: they shall come up with acceptance on mine altar, and I will glorify the house of my glory.

8 Who are these ° that fly as a cloud, and as the doves to their windows?

9 Surely the isles shall wait for me, and the ships of Tarshish first, to bring thy sons from far, their silver and their gold with them, [e] unto the name of the LORD thy God, and to the Holy One of Israel, because he hath glorified thee.

10 And the sons of strangers shall build up thy walls, and their kings shall minister unto thee: for [g] in my wrath I smote thee, but in my favour have I had mercy on thee.*

11 Therefore thy gates shall be open† continually; they shall not be shut day nor night; that men may bring unto thee the [h] forces of the Gentiles, and that their kings may be brought.

12 [i] For the nation and kingdom that will not serve‡ thee shall perish; yea, those nations shall be utterly wasted.

13 The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir-tree, the pine-tree, and the box together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary; and I will make the place of my feet glorious.

14 [k] The sons also of them that afflicted thee shall come bending unto thee; and all they that despised thee shall bow themselves down at the soles of thy feet; and they shall call thee, The city of the LORD, The Zion of the Holy One of Israel.

CHAPTER LXI.

(1) The Spirit-anointed prophet proclaims his commission: 1—3.
(2) Zion restored, the Gentiles converted: 4—11.

A. M. cir. 3308.
B. C. cir. 696.

THE Spirit of the Lord GOD is upon me; because the LORD hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound;*

2 To proclaim the acceptable year of the LORD, and the day of vengeance of our God; to comfort all that mourn;†

3 To appoint unto them that mourn in Zion, to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness; that they might be called Trees of righteousness, The planting of the LORD, that he might be glorified.

4 ¶ And they shall build the old wastes, they

* The quotation of this passage (Luke 4. 18.) identifies the speaker with Christ. The announcement comes in direct fulfilment of the closing prediction of the previous chapter: "I the LORD will hasten it in HIS time," who, though to the eyes of men, "a little one and a small one," is here anointed with the Spirit, and invested with the mighty power of God.—Ed.

† How blessed the contrast, a "day of vengeance"—"the acceptable year of the Lord"! A vengeance that specially began upon Jerusalem, (Mat. 23. 37, 38. & 24. 21.) which continues the emblem of that series of judgments by which God broke in pieces the heathen Roman empire, and by which he destroys that mystical Babylon that has so long been permitted to "make war with the saints." Rev. 13. 7.—Ed.

you. 3—14. The accession of proselytes, and bounty of kings and princes, to the Jewish church, after their return from Babylon, shall be no more than an earnest of the multitudes of princes and others, even of the most savage nations, that shall heartily accede to the gospel church, and devote their substance to, and labours in, the service of it. 15—22. And great shall be her honour, stable and lasting her joys, abundant her prosperity, excellent her ordinances, gifts, and graces, upright and peaceful her officers, complete her safety, lasting and divine her glory, eminently pure, holy, happy, and numerous her members, and quick her enlargement;—all seasonably effected by JEHOVAH himself.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. LX.—Where sin had abounded grace much more abounds; and, through Jesus' righteousness, reigns unto eternal life, where sin had reigned unto death. But they who live destitute of the gospel are plunged into the greatest misery and darkness. And infinite is the mercy when Jesus Christ, the light of life, and the glory of his people, manifests himself in his incarnation and ordinances. The remarkable favour of God, the clear light of the gospel, and the shining lives of professors, powerfully attract members to the church. And with inexpressible pleasure and wonder do the lovers of Christ behold multitudes crowding to him as their refuge, and to the ordinances of his grace. And if we truly give him our heart, we shall liberally employ our wealth, honour, and influence, for promoting his cause. How abundant and constant is the access of sinful men to Jesus and his gospel church! Quickly and unexpectedly can he turn her corruption, contempt, poverty, oppression and misery, shall raise up the former desolations, and they shall repair the waste cities, the desolations of many generations.*

5 And [a] strangers shall stand and feed your flocks, and the sons of the alien shall be your ploughmen and your vine-dressers.

6 But ye shall be named the Priests of the LORD: men shall call you the Ministers of our God: [b] ye shall eat the riches of the Gentiles, and in their glory shall ye boast yourselves.

7 For your shame ye shall have double;† and for confusion they shall rejoice in their portion: therefore in their land they shall possess the double; [c] everlasting joy shall be unto them.

8 For [d] I the LORD love judgment, I hate robbery for burnt-offering: and I will direct their work in truth; and I will make an everlasting covenant with them.

9 [e] And their seed‡ shall be known among the Gentiles, and their offspring among the people: all that see them shall acknowledge them, that they are [f] the seed which the LORD hath blessed.

10 I will greatly rejoice§ in the LORD, my soul shall be joyful in my God; for he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, he hath covered me with the robe of righteousness, as a bridegroom [g] decketh himself with ornaments, and as a bride adorneth herself with her jewels.

11 For as the earth bringeth forth her bud, and as the garden causeth the things that are sown in it to spring forth; [h] so the Lord GOD will cause righteousness and praise to spring forth before all the nations.

into holiness, comfort, honour, wealth, happiness, and safety. What then must heaven be, where no evil can enter, and where God himself shall be our everlasting light, our everlasting glory, and our ALL IN ALL.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. LXI.—Clear is the call, and unbounded the spiritual furniture, of our Lord Jesus for his saving work; and wonderful the instruction, healing, deliverance, protection, and comfort, which he gives us by the gospel. He effectually roots and grounds sinners of mankind in himself, and in a new covenant state; raises temples to God out of the ruined lodgings of lusts; makes the bond-slaves of Satan free indeed; the servants of sin priests and ministers to God; and fraudulent wanderers upright followers of truth.—Thrice happy are they whom he delivers from redoubled misery and shame; whom he enriches with his grace, and gives full contentment and joy in himself; and to whom he is a God and guide, even unto death. And sweet and honourable to exercised souls are Jesus' imputed righteousness and applied salvation, with all the holiness and comfort which proceed therefrom.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. LXII.—Great fervour and perseverance, particularly in preaching and prayer, are necessary in the ministers of Christ. How near to theirs, and especially to Jesus' heart, lie the important concerns of the church! And great and numerous are the blessed fruits of their intercessions. Thrice happy is it, when not only churches are vindicated, but Jesus' righteousness and salvation are clearly exhibited and distinctly perceived; when church members are spiritually joined to the Lord, and to one another in him; are an honour and pleasure to him; and bring forth the fruits of righteousness, to the praise of his glory; and when divine oracles, ordinances, officers, gifts, and graces, and practical holiness, meet together! Thrice happy is it that in the work of our salvation, and of rearing, reforming, and ruling the church, Jesus Christ, and JEHOVAH in him, are ALL and IN ALL. Infinite is the condescension, mercy, power, wisdom, care, and faithfulness which he manifests in his work. And such as he has once redeemed and sanctified shall never be lost nor forsaken.

CHAP. LXIII.—Ver. 1—6. Who is this that cometh from the slaughter and destruction of his people's enemies, temporal or spiritual, having almighty power to perform his will whithersoever he goes? It is I, the Messiah, who promise

2 Wherefore [a]art thou red in thine apparel, and thy garments like him that treadeth in the wine-fat?

3 [b] I have trodden the wine-press alone, and of the people there was none with me: for I will tread them in mine anger, and trample them in my fury; and their blood shall be sprinkled upon my garments, and I will stain all my raiment.

4 ¶ For since the beginning of the world men have not heard, nor perceived by the ear, neither hath the eye [‡] seen, O God, besides thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him.

nothing but what I faithfully perform, and who, through my own finished righteousness, am able to save to the uttermost.——I, by myself alone, without needing any created assistance, have utterly subdued and destroyed mine enemies: and I will quickly honour myself in the tremendous ruin of such as still remain: for the seasons appointed for the destruction of mine enemies, and the deliverance of my people, are fixed in my purpose and view. And though none be found able or willing to espouse their quarrel, or attempt their deliverance, my power and zeal shall save them, shall wrathfully destroy their opposers, and even render them astonished at the greatness of their calamities.——8. They will not deal falsely and deceitfully in their covenant with me.——14. The Lord carried them gently and surely, as on plain ground, through the Red Sea and the wilderness, till, to render himself famous in the earth, he brought them into the quiet possession of Canaan. 16—19. Abraham cannot either take notice of our troubles, or afford us any relief.—Why hast thou given us up to a spirit of error and obstinacy, and left us to the bent and bias of our own corrupt hearts, that we cannot fear thee in a filial and reverential manner? O be reconciled, and show thyself favourable to us. Instead of possessing Canaan for ever, as was promised to the patriarchs, we, thy peculiar people, have enjoyed it but a little while; and our adversaries, who were never in such covenant relation to thee, have destroyed thy temple and thy land.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. LXIII.—Wonderful is Jesus Christ in the view of all that know him. And yet he indulges his servants and people in the most familiar inquiries and requests. Blessed are the periods which God hath fixed for showing mercy to his elect, and distributing vengeance to their enemies. And with the greatest zeal, fervent affection, and care, he accomplishes every promise or threatening. Nor can the inability or unconcern of others in the least discourage our almighty Saviour, or hinder his success: but thrice dreadful is their destruction in which his glory must be exalted!—Never ought we to remember God's mercies but with minds lost in love, in wonder, and in praise. And every blessing of providence, grace, or glory, in time or eternity, ought to be viewed as having its sole rise in his infinitely rich and sovereign mercy. Alas! how base is it to lie, to deal treacherously, to rebel and vex the Holy Ghost, in opposition to that infinite pity and manifold salvation of God's dear Son! But wonderfully God mingles his sharpest corrections of his people with his gracious comforts. And it is comely when recounting of mercies, confession of iniquities, and pleading of promises, are rightly connected; and when supplicants complain chiefly of spiritual judgments, and fill their mouths with arguments before him.

CHAP. LXIV.—Ver. 1—5. Oh that thou wouldest, in some awful manner, appear for the ruin of thine enemies and the relief of thy people, as in the destruction of the Egyptians and Canaanites, or as at mount Sinai! For whatever great things thou hast done, we believe that thou wilt still do greater, in the incarnation of thy Son, the spread of thy gospel, and the erection, preservation, and perfection of the New Testament church.—Thou preventest, with thine unsearchable blessings, them who with pleasure receive thy favours, obey thy laws, and hold fellowship with thee in thy ordinances. And though our sins have

7 Your iniquities, and the iniquities of your fathers together, saith the LORD, which have burnt incense upon the mountains, and blasphemed me upon the hills: therefore [c] will I measure their former work into their bosom.‡

8 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, As the new wine is found in the cluster, and one saith, Destroy it not; for a blessing § is in it: so will I do for my servants' sakes, that I may not destroy them all.

9 And I will bring forth a seed out of Jacob, and out of Judah an inheritor of my mountains: and mine elect shall inherit it, and my servants shall dwell there.

10 And [d] Sharon ‖ shall be a fold of flocks, and the valley of Achor a place for the herds to lie down in, for my people that have sought me.

12 [f] Therefore will I number you to the sword, and ye shall all bow down to the slaughter: because when I called, ye did not answer; when I spake, ye did not hear; but did evil before mine eyes, and did choose that wherein I delighted not.

13 Therefore, thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, my servants shall eat, but ye shall be hungry: behold, my servants shall drink, but ye shall be thirsty: behold, my servants shall rejoice, but ye shall be ashamed:‡

14 Behold, my servants shall sing for joy of heart, but ye shall cry for sorrow of heart, and shall howl for § vexation of spirit.

15 And [g] ye shall leave your name for a curse unto my chosen: for the Lord GOD shall slay thee, and call his servants by another name:‖

16 That he who blesseth himself in the earth,

long provoked thee to anger, thy ways of mercy are perpetual, and therefore we hope for thy salvation. 6—12. We are indeed wholly corrupted, and our best works abominable in thy sight. Our sins have brought on these wasting and captivating judgments. And very few, with fervent importunity, labour to prevent thy departure, or plead for the removal of thy consuming judgments. But notwithstanding our unworthy carriage towards thee, do thou, our Father and Creator, sovereignly remember and spare us, moderate and shorten thy corrections, since we are thy covenant people. When Jerusalem and our other cities are laid desolate, and thy temple, in which our fathers long worshipped thee, is burnt, and all our pleasant palaces and structures are destroyed, let thy bowels of compassion make thee hasten to our relief.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. LXIV.—In trouble the almighty God must be implored for our relief: and he will make himself known to all; to his people in mercy, and to his enemies in judgment. There is infinite need of his gracious descents to awaken, enlighten, pardon, purify, protect, regulate, direct, and comfort his church. What mercy he keeps, and what stores of blessedness he has laid up, for such as cheerfully wait on him, and walk with him, in all his ordinances, laws, and dispensations of providence! He bears with unnumbered provocations, and graciously forgives them, in the best of his people. But shameful are our sinful pollutions, and greatly criminal our want of earnestness in dealing with God; nor is there a surer token of a graceless heart, than neglect of, and even indulged carelessness in, prayer. But while we are pining away in our iniquities, nothing is more fit than by faith to throw ourselves entirely upon the sovereign mercy of God. And if the disorders and desolations of churches lie so heavy on the heart of saints, how near must they go to the heart of the Saviour!

CHAP. LXV.—Ver. 1—7. I am now manifested to, enjoyed, and worshipped by, the Gentiles, who for many ages have continued ignorant of, and careless about, me, and stood in no saving relation to me. But since, notwithstanding my long continued offers of grace, vouchsafement of oracles and ordinances, and the strivings of my Spirit and providence, the Jews continue in their obstinate rejection and blasphemous contempt of me, since they still approve the sins of their fathers, or do what is equally horrid, and yet boast, to my high provocation, of themselves, as if they were the only holy people on earth; I will now, in the most tremendous and lasting manner, punish on them their own and their fathers' iniquities. 8—10. Nevertheless, I will not utterly destroy the nation, as there is among them, and in their loins, a number of elect persons, who, in the apostolic and millennial periods, shall be converted to Christ and his church, and become very useful to others. 11—16. But as for the body of that nation, since they have apostatized from my truths and service, and have, at least, in approbation of their shall bless himself in the God of truth; and he that sweareth in the earth, shall swear by the God of truth; because the former troubles are forgotten, and because they are hid from mine eyes.

17 ¶ For, behold, I create new heavens, and a new earth:* and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind.

18 But be ye glad and rejoice for ever in that which I create: for, behold, I create Jerusalem a rejoicing, and her people a joy.

19 And I will rejoice in Jerusalem, and joy in my people: and the voice of weeping shall be no more heard in her, nor the voice of crying.

20 There shall be no more thence an infant of days, nor an old man that hath not filled his days: for the child shall die an hundred years old; but the sinner, being an hundred years old, shall be accursed.†

21 And they shall build houses, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and eat the fruit of them.

22 They shall not build, and another inhabit; they shall not plant, and another eat: for as the days of a tree are the days of my people, and mine elect ‡ shall long enjoy the work of their hands.

23 They shall not labour in vain, nor bring forth for trouble: for they are the seed of the blessed of the LORD, and their offspring with them.

24 And it shall come to pass, that before they call, I will answer; and while they are yet speaking, I will hear.

25 The wolf and the lamb shall feed together, and the lion shall eat straw like the bullock: and dust shall be the serpent's meat.§ They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, saith the LORD.

* New heavens and a new earth cannot here mean the new and eternal state; for it appears from ver. 20, that after the new creation here predicted, death will still be in the world; whereas in the new and eternal state "there will be no more death." Rev. 21. 4. "The new heavens and new earth" here foretold represent a new state of governments and people, produced by an outpouring of converting and renewing grace upon the hearts of Israel and the Gentile churches and kingdoms.—ED.

† Though it were presumptuous to affirm that God may not, or will not, hereafter restore mankind to antediluvian longevity; yet, as the "new heavens and new earth" seem decidedly emblematic, and not literal, is there not reason for concluding that "infant" and "old man" are likewise emblematic? Thus the whole Christian church are called "little children" by Christ himself, by Paul, and John. (John 13. 33. Gal. 4. 19. 1 John 2. 1—5. 21.) According to this authorized language, the verse will be interpreted thus: "There shall no more be in my visible church any who abides "an infant of days," any who continue "children in understanding" (1 Cor. 14. 20.) nor "an old man," a father in Christ, (1 Cor. 14. 15. 1 John 2. 13.) who shall not have knowledge and experience in grace; but even "the child," the youngest believer, shall die in the Christian ripeness of old age. And such shall be the purity and vigour of godly discipline, that "the sinner" who "loves not the Lord Jesus Christ," whatever may be his rank and attainments, shall be cut off and cast away as an accursed thing from the fellowship of the renovated church. 1 Cor. 5. 4, 5, 7, 9. 11. 1 Cor. 16. 22.—ED.

9 Shall I bring to the birth, and not § cause to bring forth? saith the LORD: shall I cause to bring forth, and shut the womb? saith thy God.

fathers' conduct, offered sacrifices to multitudes of idols, and have obstinately rejected the Messiah, I will most terribly destroy them by the Romans and others, and by famine, while the Christians shall be protected and nourished. They shall be miserable, detested, and infamous, while the Christians shall be joyful, respected, and happy, in the worship of their Redeemer; and idolatry, carnal ceremonies, and vexing miseries, shall be abolished. 17—25. For, to the inexpressible comfort of my people, whether Jews or Gentiles, I will, in the apostolic, and especially in the millennial period, and still more gloriously in the heavenly state, establish my church in a new form; in which spiritual joys, noted advances in holiness, happy continuance in life, sanctified enjoyment of the blessings of providence, remarkable blessings from God, and delightful fellowship with him, remarkable change of men's dispositions and tempers, happy peacefulness, mutual affection, and freedom from persecution, shall amazingly abound.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. LXV.—Sovereign is JEHOVAH in the disposal of his favours; and graciously he converts sinful men by the offers and communications of his saving graces and comforts. But rebellious dissemblers with God, and rejecters of his Son, provoke him to give them up at last to the most terrible rejection and ruin. Though he bear long, he will not bear always; and nothing is more odious in his sight than a sinner vaunting of his holiness, and looking down with contempt on others. Yet how loath is he utterly to abandon a people who have been once devoted to his honour! And how liberally sinners expend their substance to gratify their lusts! Awful and lasting are the proofs we have of Jesus' Messiahship, and of the truth of the Christian religion, in the tremendous miseries, and still continued dispersion and disgrace of his Jewish rejecters. But O what unspeakable blessings, for Jews and Gentiles, are still wrapt up in God's promises. If I must die without seeing their fulfilment, let me live and die in the firm faith of it. If I am dispirited by the remarkable dishonours of God and ruin of souls which now prevail, let me hope for that happy period, in which the kingdoms of this world, Jews and Gentiles, shall become the kingdoms of my Lord, and of his Christ.

CHAP. LXVI.—Ver. 1—4. I do not regard your temple in all its glory, but the law-fulfilling Messiah, and broken-hearted believers in him. Your sacrifices offered up without faith in, nay, in opposition to, his, I esteem as infinitely criminal and detestable. And since ye obstinately cleave to your abominable righteousness and superstitions, I will give you up to the lusts of your hearts, and bring upon you the miseries which ye attempt to avoid. 5—14. And while God shall marvellously protect the Jewish Christians, who have been persecuted by their brethren, terrible judgments shall be executed on the Jewish nation, city, and temple. ‡ The bones are the emblems of strength and the mechanical instruments of motion. They abide in the grave when the flesh is decayed, as the root of an herb abides in the ground when the flower is faded, the leaf withered, and the stem cut down. The marginal translation, "one after another" —the literal, "after one betwixt"—may probably suggest the true meaning, "successively," or "promiscuously."—ED.

And while the obstinate Jews, Heathens, Papists, and Mahometans, shall be, in the most terrible manner, punished by the judgments of God, and set up as distinguished monuments of wrath, in time or eternity, the Jewish preachers, and others, shall spread the gospel into all parts of the world, and shall become noted instruments of the enlargement, purification, and lively devotion, of the gospel church.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. LXVI.—Let my care be to have my heart right with God, and a meet habitation for him through the Spirit. And making Jesus my pattern, let me, with a contrite heart, tremble at his word. God forbid that I should ever value myself on account of external performances in religion, which may be so detestable to him; or that ever he should abandon me to the power and rage of my own lusts, and the fearful vengeance attending the same. Hypocrites and church rulers are frequently the most cruel persecutors. But saints may bear injuries with patience when God will so quickly overbalance them with deliverance and comfort. And the church's remarkable deliverances, enlargements, and joys, are ordinarily introduced, or attended by the most tremendous judgments on hypocritical professors and open enemies. All labour and suffering are well bestowed that issue in the conversion of multitudes to Christ. And notwithstanding all that his enemies can do, the word of the Lord hath had, and will have, free course, and be glorified. The ends of the earth shall be made to remember and turn to the Lord. And the grace of God, which bringeth salvation, shall teach men to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, and to live soberly, righteously, and godly in this world. But what dreadful spectacles of divine vengeance have been the Jewish and Roman, and shall be the Popish and Turkish persecutors of the church Let therefore the British nation stand in awe and tremble!

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF ISAIAH.

Isaiah is placed at the head of the glorious prophetic company, not because his prophecy was first in point of time—for he was preceded by Jonah, Amos, and Hosea, and was contemporary with Joel and Micah—but because of the overwhelming importance of his subject, and his frequent references to the coming and kingdom of Christ. Upon this account Isaiah has been distinguished by the title of "the evangelical prophet." Concerning his family nothing certain is known, though some suppose him to have been of the blood-royal, and that his father was the son of Joash, and brother of Uzziah. There is a tradition among the Jews, and it has been adopted by many Christian writers, that Isaiah lived till the time of Manasseh, by whom he was sawn asunder. That some one of the prophets so suffered, the apostle affirms, Heb. 11. 37; but of the individual we are uncertain. If Isaiah lived till the time of Manasseh, he must have exercised the prophetic office during, at least, sixty-one years—a period by no means improbable, when compared with that during which many ministers of the gospel have continued to discharge the most laborious duties of their offices. It is, however, certain that he lived till after the fifteenth year of Hezekiah, which makes the continuance of his office beyond all question —calculating from the first of Uzziah—to have been not under forty-eight years.

The name of Isaiah, when interpreted, is, in some measure, descriptive of the nature of his divine message. It signifies, "the salvation of Jehovah;" and was bestowed with singular prophetic propriety upon him who was commissioned to foretell and describe, so vividly and impressively, the glorious advent of Messiah, through whom "all flesh shall see the salvation of God." See Is. 40. 5. comp. with Luke 3. 6. Acts 4. 12.

Called into office during a period of great national declension from truth, purity, and godliness, one great object of the prophet was to establish, beyond controversy, the divine origin of the Jewish institutions. This he effects by foretelling some events nigh at hand, "coming home to men's own lives and bosoms," and which the living witnesses of his own generation must have been able either to falsify or verify by their own observation. The verification of the prediction, including events most improbable at the time, fulfilled the Mosaic test of the divine commission of a prophet, and left unbelieving idolaters and apostates totally without excuse, (see Deut. 18. 21, 22); while others of his prophecies, stretching far into futurity, have continued to receive an exact but progressive fulfilment during centuries; and others look forward still, and give assurance, by the experience of the past, that all that remain will be accomplished.—ED.

ADDITIONAL EDITORIAL NOTES ON THE BOOK OF ISAIAH.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 1. In that day.—What is meant by "that day?" Looking backward in the prophecy, chap. 2. 2. introduces "the last days," (see note) within which period again and again recurs "that day." It occurs, chap. 2. 11, 12, 17, 20, characterized as "the day of the Lord of hosts," (comp. chap. 6. 1, 3, with John 12. 41.) as the time "when the LORD shall shake terribly the earth," which generally signifies the land of Judea—"when the LORD alone shall be exalted," the day when "a man shall cast his idols to the moles and to the bats"—and in chap. 3. 7, 18, 25, when a man, on account of the universal poverty, shall refuse to become a ruler—and the "bravery" of female apparel shall be utterly taken away. Farther, it is characterized (chap. 3. 25. & 4. 1, 2, 30.) by the destruction of men, and unprotected state of women—and by blessings to them that are "escaped"—and by the terrible judgments inflicted by the Gentiles on account of the unfruitfulness of Israel. Now, does it not hence appear, that "that day" is not any one day or period in which all these events meet, (for that is impossible,) but any day or period within the "last days," marked by its own specific event, whether past or future?

CHAP. V. Ver. 4. I looked that it should bring forth grapes, brought it forth wild grapes?—The choice vine would not bear wild grapes—some other plant must therefore have sprung up, as the tares among the wheat, Mat. 13. 27, 28. The plant called "wild grapes" is generally supposed to be a species of the deadly nightshade which grows profusely in Egypt and Palestine.

CHAP. VII. Ver. 13. Is it a small thing for you to weary men, but will ye weary my God also?—Ye weary the patience of men by your maladministration; will ye weary God also, by neglect of opportunities, distrusting his promises, and abusing his ordinances?

CHAP. IX. Ver. 6. The everlasting Father.—Or, "Father, author of the future or everlasting age," the Christian dispensation.—Lowth.

CHAP. XI. Ver. 10. His rest shall be glorious.—His church glorified by the possession of his word of truth, his ordinances, promises, and Spirit. See Ps. 132. 14. Col. 1. 27.——Ver. 11. The Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people; so called as somewhat similar to the first deliverance from Egypt. See ver. 16.

CHAP. XVIII. Ver. 2. That sendeth ambassadors by the sea, even the vessels of bulrushes.—That the Egyptians employed vessels of bulrushes, coated with bitumen, is evident from Exod. 2. 3, as well as from general history. And it appears their Ethiopian neighbours employed them likewise.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 7. The paper reeds by the brooks.—The papyrus, (whence the English word paper,) from which were manufactured rolls for writing, cordage, baskets, boats, &c.

CHAP. XXI. Ver. 10. O my thrashing, and the corn of my floor.—O! my brethren, the sowing and harvest of the Lord, whom I have laboured to thrash out of your chaff, and winnow into cleanness: lo! I have declared unto you the whole revelation of God!

CHAP. XXIII. Ver. 3. The seed of Sihor, the harvest of the river, is her revenue.—Grain from the banks of the Nile, (1 Chr. 3. 5.) The river, most probably the Euphrates, as the channel of Indian commerce.

CHAP. XXV. Ver. 6. A feast of fat things, a feast of wines on the lees.—The gospel is frequently represented under the emblem of a feast. Mat. 8. 11. Luke 14. 16. & 22. 29, 30. Fat things—the emblem of abundance and prosperity. Gen. 41. 26, 29. Wines on the lees—wine, the emblem of the restorative power of the gospel promises. Is. 45. 1, 2. On the lees—refined mechanically by rest, and chemically by mutual agency of the parts, from all turbid and feculent mixture, the emblem of a church purified from "all false doctrine, heresy, and schism."——Ver. 7. The vail that is spread over all nations.—I will remove the "vail of Moses" from the Jew, and enable him to see Christ in all the sacrifices, the only "end of the law for righteousness;" and I will remove the vail of prejudice and antipathy through which the Gentiles have hitherto looked upon the Jews.

CHAP. XXVII. Ver. 5. Let him take hold of my strength, that he may make peace with me:—The vineyard replies—"I have no wall for my defence! O! that I had a defence of the thorn and the brier!" JEHOVAH speaks—"Against them should I march in battle, I should burn them up together. Ah! let her rather take hold of my protection!" The VINEYARD replies—"Let him make peace with me, peace let him make with me!" JEHOVAH speaks—"They that come of the root of Jacob shall flourish."—Lowth.

CHAP. XXVIII.—Ver. 1. Wo to the crown of pride, to the drunkards.—Not merely habitual drunkards from wine, but persons intoxicated with pride and self-will beyond reasoning, and regardless of warning.

CHAP. XXXII.—Ver. 2. The shadow of a great rock in a weary land.—Not merely a shadow to protect from the heat, but the shadow of a great rock to defend from enemies.

CHAP. XXXIII. Ver. 7. Their valiant ones.—Verses 5 and 6 being taken as a parenthesis, the "valiant ones" are the former spoilers upon whom the new spoiler (ver. 4.) makes his tumultuous assault.——Ambassadors of peace.—The messengers of the first spoiler attempting peace with the second.——Ver. 8. He hath broken the covenant.—The new spoiler who had made a false peace with the messengers.

CHAP. XXXIV.—Ver. 9. The streams thereof shall be turned into pitch, and the dust thereof into brimstone.—Emblems of an overthrow as complete as that of Sodom and Gomorrah; while it is not improbable that the description may have been literally realized in volcanic eruptions.

CHAP. XXXVI. Ver. 1. Sennacherib king of Assyria came up against all the defenced cities of Judah, and took them.—Most part of this narrative will be found in the contemporary portion of the book of 2 Kings 18. and 2 Chr. 32. It is here repeated to show how history and prophecy reflect mutual light upon each other.

CHAP. XL. Ver. 1. Comfort ye my people.—The parties exhorted to give comfort, are such as hear "the voice in the wilderness," (ver. 3.) and in faith of his coming, "prepare in the desert a highway for their God."—Note. It is thus the duty of believers to comfort one another. 1 Thes. 4. 18.——Ver. 12. Weighed the mountains.—Every planet takes its place and orbit in exact proportion to its weight; the earth is depressed at the poles and elevated at the equator in virtue of its weight and rotation; and, so far as known to man, every object on earth and in the heavens is literally "weighed in a balance."

CHAP. XLI. Ver. 6. They helped every one his neighbour.—The nations associated against the truth, and in support of idolatry. See Ps. 83. 2—8, 12.

CHAP. LII. Ver. 14. As many were astonished at thee; his visage was so marred more than any man.—There is a want of grammatical correspondence, and consequent obscurity, in the translation of this verse. "As" requires either another "as" to follow, or a "so" to correspond, expressed, or understood. May not this be rectified by placing the "so" where it stands in the Hebrew, at the commencement of the second clause? And is not the meaning as follows: "As many were astonished at thee," O Jerusalem, (ver. 9.) when thy visage was marred in the dust, and thy form in chains, (ver. 2.) "so his (my servant's) visage was marred more than any man," &c.

CHAP. LIV. Ver. 6. A wife of youth, when thou wast refused.—As Ruth was refused by the next of kin, according to the law, (Deut. 24. 5—10. Ruth 4. 1—8.) even so, the world to which the backslider has turned for comfort and protection, refuses it; and when, through grace, the backslider "comes to himself," he is accepted of God. See Hos. 2. 7. Luke 15. 17.

CHAP. LV. Ver. 12. The mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing.—"Mountains and hills"—empires and kingdoms.——Trees of the field.—Believers everywhere throughout the world. Is. 61. 3.

CHAP. LVI. Ver. 7. Them will I bring to my holy mountain.—From Dan. 2. 35. it is evident that the "mountain of the Lord" is the emblem of the church exalted by Messiah; that the "house of prayer" has ceased to be confined to Jerusalem, and is found wherever there is a worshipper "in spirit and in truth;" (John 4. 20—24.) that the "offerings and sacrifices" are prayer, praise, and beneficence; (1 Pet. 2. 5. Heb. 13. 15, 16.) and that "the altar," is the spiritual and living altar and sacrifice, Christ. Heb. 13. 10.

CHAP. LX. Ver. 1. Arise, shine.—This is a prophecy of the birth and ministry of Jesus, in whom was "light," and in whose reflected splendour Zion is called to shine.

CHAP. LXI. Ver. 3. Give unto them beauty.—"A diadem," a royal crown.

CHAP. LXII. Ver. 1. For Zion's sake will I not hold my peace.—Poole ascribes these words to the prophet Isaiah; Aben Ezra, to Israel in captivity; the Targum, to God resolved not to be silent, nor give the nations rest till the coming of the deliverer. By following the grammar of the preceding and subsequent passages, which all uniformly speak in the name of one person, there can be no hesitation in applying these words to Messiah, "God manifest in the flesh."

CHAP. LXIII. Ver. 1. Who is this that cometh from Edom, with dyed garments from Bozrah?—The Lord hath a sacrifice in Bozrah, and a great slaughter in the land of Idumea, Is. 34. 6. &c.; see also Jeremiah 47. 7—22. Ezek. 25. 12—14. & 35. 1—15, in which predictions there appears a wonderful contrast between Jacob and Esau; for though Jacob be scattered throughout all lands, he can still be found and known, while in truth there is not any remaining of the house of Esau. "Edom is cut off for ever"—The question in this prophecy seems therefore to refer to this predicted period of "vengeance," and furnishes, most probably, an emblem and specimen of those national judgments with which God forewarns and threatens all nations which becoming, through agriculture and commerce, prosperous and great, as Edom, forget God, become proud of their wealth, unkind, cruel, and idolatrous.

CHAP. LXIV. Ver. 1. That the mountains might flow down at thy presence.—"Flow down" as mountains are wont to do when the sun melts the winter snows, (see Is. 2. 2. Joel 3. 18.) when springs and rivers issue from their bosom, or flocks and herds descend from them as streams, chap. 65. 9, 10.——Ver. 2. As when the melting fire burneth.—"As when the fire kindleth dry fuel."—Lowth.——Ver. 3. Thou camest down.—This cannot refer to God's coming down on Sinai; for then the people looked for the "terrible things" that were done, Exod. 19. 3—25. Moreover, upon that awful occasion, mention is never made of "mountains," but of "the mount;" (Exod. 19. 11—13, 16, &c.) does it not therefore rather refer to some of those unexpected deliverances which God at different times so signally wrought for his people, as by his judgments on Pharaoh, Sennacherib, and other enemies?——Ver. 4. Neither hath the eye seen, O God, besides thee, what he hath prepared for him that waiteth for him.—"Nor hath eye seen a God besides thee, who providest such things for them that trust him."

CHAP. LXV. Ver. 4. Which remain among the graves.—Frequent the graves of dead men, whom they elevate into demigods or "saints," whose relics they venerate as things peculiarly holy, and to whom they address their prayers as possessed of tutelary power.——Which eat swine's flesh.—Swine's flesh being forbidden to the Jew for reasons ceremonially instructive, the eating of "swine's flesh" was the emblem of all unhallowed indulgence and epicurean idolatry of appetite. Phil. 3. 19.——Ver. 22. As the days of a tree are the days of my people.

—Oaks, cedars, and olives, are of such known longevity, that no one can tell at what age they die. It is by no means improbable that the remnants of the "cedars of Lebanon" may have been contemporary with Solomon; or the trees of the "mount of olives" contemporary with our Lord.

CHAP. LXVI. Ver. 7. Before she travailed, she brought forth; before her pain came, she was delivered of a man-child.—When Christ, as "a child born, a son given," came in the flesh, a remnant were, doubtless, expecting and praying for his appearing; but as a nation and church, the Jews neither expected nor desired such a Redeemer.——Ver. 8. For as soon as Zion travailed.—"But as soon as Zion travailed," &c.—ED. Of which see the wonderful conversions produced by a single apostolic address (Acts 2. 41. & 4. 4); and surely what God has effected once, he is able to accomplish again.—Note. Let believers pray for that outpouring of the Spirit from on high; for neither by "might nor by power" of man shall this work be effected, "but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." Zech. 4. 6.——Ver. 23. From one new-moon to another, and from one sabbath to another, (that is, perpetually,) shall all flesh come to worship before me," not necessarily in Jerusalem—for that were physically impossible—but "in spirit and in truth," where the eye of faith seeth him in the temple of his universal presence. John 4. 20—24. Heb. 11. 1.

THE BOOK

OF THE

PROPHET JEREMIAH.

JEREMIAH was a priest descended from Aaron, very early called to the prophetical office, (chap. i.) and continued forty or fifty years faithfully discharging it. Living in a period of great dissimulation with God, and of notorious rebellion against him, the miseries which he foresaw, and the persecutions which he endured, rendered his condition extremely afflicted and sorrowful; chap. ix. 1; xi. 18, 19; xv. 10, 15; xvii. 14—18; xviii. 18—23; and xx. 7—18; and, excepting some promises of deliverance from Babylon, or redemption through Jesus Christ, and happiness to his church, in chap. iii, xxx—xxxiii. xxiii. 3—8; xxiv. 4—7; xxix. 10—14; and l. 4—8, 19, 20, 33, 34; he is continually engaged in charging men's sins upon them, or denouncing the judgments of God against them;—as the ruin of the Jewish nation, Egyptians, Philistines, Tyrians, Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Syrians, Arabians, and Persians, by the Chaldeans; and then of the Chaldeans themselves; chap. xxv, xxvii, xlvi—li, &c. His first four sermons are generally plain; chap. ii—xii. The following sixteen are generally introduced by some typical emblem; xiii—xxxv.

[It is the opinion of the most learned commentators, that the prophecies of Jeremiah, having been written upon separate parchments, have not been placed as they were delivered, and the following, among other attempts, has been made to arrange them in chronological order:—after Chap. xx, xxii, xxiii, xxv, xxvi, xxxv, xxxvi, xlv, xxiv, xxix—xxxi, xxvii, xxviii, xxi, xxxiv, xxxvii, xxxii, xxxiii, xxxviii, xxxix. 15—19. xxxix. 1—14. lx—lxiv, lxvi.—Blayney. After Chap. xx, xxii. 1—24. xxvi, xlvi. 1—13. xxxv, xxv, xxxvi. 1—9. xlv, xxxvi, 9 to end, xxii, 24 to end, lii. 1—4. xxiv, xxix. 1—15. xxix. 16—21. xxix. 15. xxix. 21 to end, xxx, xxxi, xxvii, xxviii, xlviii, xlix. 1—51. xxxix. 1. xxxvii. 1—5. xxxiv. 1—11. xxxii, xxxiii, xxxvii. 5—47. xxxvii. 6—11. xxxiv, 11 to end, xxxvii, 11 to end, xxi, xxxviii, xxxix. 15 to end, lii. 5, 6. xxxix. 3. lii. 7—12. xxxix. 11—15. lii. 24—28. lii. 12—15. lii. 17—24. lii. 15, 16. xxxix. 10. lii. 4. xxxix. 2—10.—Townsend.

Of the comparative value of these suggested arrangements, it is unnecessary to speak, inasmuch as they are, at best, conjectural; but they are important as specimens of the indefatigable pains bestowed by their respective authors in "searching the Scriptures."—ED.]

THE words of Jeremiah the son of [a] Hilkiah, of the priests that were in Anathoth[*] in the land of Benjamin:

2 To whom [b] the word of the LORD [†] came in the days of Josiah the son of Amon king of Judah, in the thirteenth year of his reign.

3 It came also in the days of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, unto [c] the end of the eleventh year of Zedekiah the son of Josiah king of Judah, unto the carrying away of Jerusalem captive in the fifth month.

4 ¶ Then [d] the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

5 Before I [e] formed thee in the belly I knew thee; and before thou camest forth out of the womb I sanctified thee, and I [‡] ordained thee [f] a prophet unto the nations.

6 Then said I, Ah [g] Lord GOD! behold, I cannot speak; for I am a child.

7 But the LORD said unto me, [h] Say not, I am a child: for [i] thou shalt go to all that I shall send thee, and whatsoever I command thee thou shalt speak.

8 [k] Be not afraid of their faces: for [l] I am with thee to deliver thee, saith the LORD.

9 Then the LORD put forth his hand, and [m] touched my mouth: and the LORD said unto me, Behold, I have put my words in thy mouth.

10 See, I have this day set thee over the nations, and over the kingdoms, to [n] root out, and to pull down, and to destroy, and to throw down, to build, and to plant.

11 ¶ Moreover, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Jeremiah, [o] what seest thou? And I said, I see [p] a rod of an almond-tree.*

12 Then said the LORD unto me, Thou hast well seen: for [q] I will hasten my word to perform it.

13 And the word of the LORD came unto me the second time, saying, What seest thou? And I said, I see [r] a seething-pot,† and the face thereof is ‡ toward the north.

14 Then the LORD said unto me, § Out of the north ‖ an evil ‖ shall break forth upon all the inhabitants of the land.

15 For, lo, I will [t] call all the families of the kingdoms of the north, saith the LORD; and they shall come, and they shall set every one his throne* at the entering of the gates of Jerusalem, and against all the walls thereof round about, and against all the cities of Judah.

16 And [u] I will utter my judgments against them touching all their wickedness, who have forsaken me, and have burnt incense unto other gods, and worshipped the works of their own hands.

* Moral courage, arising from a sense of obedience to God, a love for the souls of sinners, a "conscience sprinkled from dead works," with deep self-denial that "Christ may be all in all," is an indispensable qualification of every one who would seek to convert sinners and build up believers to salvation. Like all other good qualities, it is the gift of God. Be expeditious, and diligent, bold, resolute, and faithful, in delivering my messages, however severe or awful; for I will protect, strengthen, and stablish thee, that none of their persecutions shall hurt thee.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Great are the pains and patience that God exercises to prevent the destruction of his professed people. And it is honourable to be early chosen, sanctified, and prepared for the ministerial service of God. How fixed are all his purposes relative to men's persons and offices! He can easily qualify men for his service, and enable them to speak intelligibly and powerfully, notwithstanding all weakness or opposition, and though their message issue in the ruin of some and deliverance of others. And with great care doth God render his mind plain to his servants and people, and condescendingly vouchsafes them his presence in their work. In what different forms he warns men before he inflicts his remarkable judgments! And ministers had need to consider the infinite importance of their charge, the great danger of unfaithfulness in it, and God's promises of his presence to enable them to perform it, and to protect them in it, as a balance to all the power and threatenings of their persecutors.

CHAP. II.—Ver. 2, 3. I remember the kindness which I showed to your nation when it was but forming, and when in the Arabian wilderness, by solemn covenant, I espoused you first of all the nations of the world to be my holy and peculiar people, and the affectionate regard which your fathers professed for me. And then I severely punished the Egyptians and others, who attempted to do them wrong. 13—18. They have rejected me in my oracles, ordinances, and fulness, who am the freely bestowed, everlasting and unbounded source of all grace, consolations, and blessings, and have, with inexpressible fatigue, procured to themselves idols which cannot give them the smallest relief. No wonder that they are basely enslaved, and cruelly spoiled. The Assyrians, like outrageous lions, have wasted the country of the ten tribes, and murdered and carried captive the inhabitants. And the Egyptians have treacherously disappointed you, or shall murder Josiah, depose Jehoahaz, and impose a tribute. And will you, nevertheless, still send messengers to Egypt or Assyria, to form new alliances, or to borrow new idols? 20—28. When I formerly delivered you from the Egyptians, and other oppressors, ye engaged to keep my commandments, yet ye commit idolatry everywhere. I originally formed your nation of pious patriarchs, and established among you my pure oracles, ordinances, and worship; how then are ye become superstitious, idolatrous, and every way corrupt, in both church and state? can all your excuses, evasions, or pretences to reformation, conceal the manifest tokens of your wickedness from me. How can ye deny it, when the valley of Hinnom, where ye have burnt your children to Moloch, and other valleys where ye have worshipped your idols, manifest it? Ye have, even with madness and fury, run after idols empty as wind, one after another; and till fearful distress restrain you, ye appear quite irreclaimable. I have warned you to repent of your lewd, idolatrous, and foolish courses, and of hunting after alliances with heathens, which will bring you to captivity and misery; but ye desperately cleave to your strange gods. Yet all of you at last shall be ashamed of your idols, when ye find that, notwithstanding their multitudes, they can do nothing to save you from disgrace or punishment. 29—37. No excuse can be offered for your conduct; and all of you are guilty. Warnings and judgments have not in the least reclaimed you; nay, ye have cruelly murdered the prophets who admonished you. Did not I plentifully provide for and comfort you while ye continued obedient; why then do ye reject me, as if now, self-sufficient, ye had no need of me? Why thus so long forget me, who have been your chief glory and ornament? Why take such tedious journeys in pursuance of idolatrous courses, and become patterns and teachers to the very heathens in wickedness? Why, in every corner of your land, publicly sacrifice your children to idols, and murder the innocent, and yet hope to pass unpunished? Why thus change your idols and heathen allies? The Egyptians shall no more help you than the Assyrians did; but ye shall be led forth into a mournful and miserable captivity; and the curse of God shall render all your projected methods of relief unprofitable and ruinous to you.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—It is honourable for nations, families, and persons, to be early beloved by God, and addicted to his service: and safe to be followers of him through every difficulty. But very absurd is it for those, who have shared his distinguished favours, to apostatize from him to idols, and render him hatred for love; for church-officers to be ringleaders in guilt; and for men at once to belie their profession, affront their God, and cheat themselves out of happiness. Alas! in what slavery, poverty, and disappointment, and endless wandering after idols, do unbelief and forsaking of God issue! With denial of guilt, eagerness, obstinacy, and impudence, do men, abandoned by God, proceed from evil to worse. And it is common for sinners to supplicate relief from God when their idols cannot help them. But dreadful is their case, who, under his word, rod, or favours, grow insolent and imperious in wickedness; and when, forgetting God, notwithstanding checks unnumbered, they abound in impiety.

17 At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the LORD; and [n] all the nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the LORD, to Jerusalem: † neither * shall they walk any more after the ‡ imagination of their evil heart.

18 In those days the house of Judah shall walk § with the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land that I have ‖ given for an inheritance unto your fathers.

19 But I said, How shall I put thee among the children, and give thee a * pleasant land, a goodly heritage of the hosts of nations? And I said, Thou shalt call me, My father; and shalt not turn away † from me.

20 ¶ Surely as a wife treacherously departeth from her ‡ husband, so have ye dealt treacherously with me, O house of Israel, saith the LORD.

21 A voice was heard upon the high places,‖ weeping and supplications of the children of Israel: for they have perverted their way, and they have forgotten the LORD their God.

22 [p] Return, ye backsliding children, and I will heal‖ your backslidings. Behold, we come unto thee; for thou art the LORD our God.

23 Truly [q] in vain is salvation hoped for from the hills,* and from the multitude of mountains: truly in the LORD our God is the salvation of Israel.

24 For [r] shame† hath devoured the labour of our fathers from our youth; their flocks and their herds, their sons and their daughters.

25 We lie down in our shame, and our confusion covereth us: for we have sinned against the LORD our God, we and our fathers, from our § youth even unto this day, and have not obeyed the voice of the LORD our God.

committing it, in all the corners of your land, and have impudently gone to your very uttermost, in speaking and acting the most horrid abominations; yet, without a moment's delay, return unto me as your infinitely gracious Husband and Father. 11. The sins of the ten tribes, who had been long ruined or in a miserable captivity, were far less aggravated than those of Judah, being committed against fewer warnings, mercies, judgments, vows, &c. 12—25. These predictions began to be accomplished in and after the deliverance from Babylon; but will be much more fully accomplished in the future return of the twelve tribes to Canaan, and in the glories of the Christian church; especially in the millennium, when converts shall be numerous, ministers and magistrates faithful, ceremonies laid aside, and peace, harmony, faith, and godly sorrow prevail.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—How base, eager, active, abounding, and impudent in wickedness, apostates from God become! And if we would seriously repent, we must take a particular view of our sins and their aggravations. Unbounded is the mercy of that God of grace with whom we have to do: he is averse to punish with severity: and opens his arms and heart to receive the most enormous transgressors, who attempt returning to him by faith. But sad is the case when God's judgments upon our neighbours do not awaken us to detest and avoid their sins; and that, when God bestows reforming magistrates and ministers, many, who join in reformation, do but dissemble with him. Few backsliders from God are ever recovered. And obstinacy in sin lays bars in the way of our mercies, that nothing less than uncommon stretches of mercy can remove. Earnest are JEHOVAH'S calls to faith and repentance; and strong and moving his gracious encouragements; and it is the assured faith of his special mercy that will most effectually produce a true and gracious repentance. Peaceful, harmonious, well governed, conspicuous, and pure, is the gospel church when every thing in her is according to God's word. And when his Spirit draws men to himself, deep is their sense of their guilt and folly in departing from and rebelling against him; and cordial their dependence on him, and justification of his judgments.

2 And thou shalt swear, The LORD liveth, in truth, in judgment, and in righteousness: and the nations[a] shall bless themselves in him, and in him shall they glory.

3 ¶ For thus saith the LORD to the men of Judah and Jerusalem, Break up your fallow ground, and sow not among thorns.

4 Circumcise yourselves to the LORD, and take away the foreskins of your heart, ye men of Judah and inhabitants of Jerusalem; lest my fury come forth like fire, and burn that none can quench it, because of the evil of your doings.

5 Declare ye in Judah, and publish in Jerusalem, and say, Blow ye the trumpet in the land: cry, Gather together, and say, Assemble yourselves, and let us go into the defenced cities.

6 Set up the standard toward Zion: retire, stay not; for I will bring evil from the north,[†] and a great destruction.

7 The lion[‡] is come up from his thicket, and the destroyer of the Gentiles is on his way; he is gone forth from his place to make thy land desolate; and thy cities shall be laid waste, without an inhabitant.

8 For this gird you with sackcloth, lament and howl; for the fierce anger of the LORD is not turned back from us.

9 And it shall come to pass at that day, saith the LORD, that the heart of the king shall perish, and the heart of the princes; and the priests shall be astonished, and the prophets shall wonder.

10 Then said I, Ah Lord GOD! surely thou hast greatly deceived[§] this people and Jerusalem, saying, Ye shall have peace; whereas the sword reacheth unto the soul.

11 At that time shall it be said to this people and to Jerusalem, A dry wind of the high places in the wilderness toward the daughter of my people, not to fan, nor to cleanse,[‖]

12 Even a full wind from those places shall come unto me:[*] now also will I give sentence against them.

13 Behold, he shall come[†] up as clouds, and his chariots shall be as a whirlwind; his horses are swifter than eagles. Wo unto us! for we are spoiled.

14 O Jerusalem, wash thine heart from wickedness, that thou mayest be saved: how long shall thy vain thoughts lodge within thee?

16 Make ye mention to the nations; behold, publish against Jerusalem, that watchers come from a far country, and give out their voice against the cities of Judah.

[a] Every one who has studied the prophecies of the Old and New Testaments, and carefully noted the history of nations, must have seen how wonderfully the fate of nations is interwoven with the condition of the Jews. Here the repentance of Israel would not only have suspended or superseded their own captivity and exile, but would have expedited and secured the conversion and happiness of the Gentiles. They did not repent—they were scattered—and but a few of the Gentiles have yet "blessed themselves in him."—Note. After a man's own personal salvation, few things should more occupy his thoughts, than the present and eternal influence his conduct may exercise over others either for good or evil, happiness or misery. "A word in season" may be instrumental to convert and "save a soul alive"—a word may poison the heart of the hearer, and be followed by death and misery.—ED.

† Babylon did not lie towards the north, but east of Judea. But no army could find supplies in marching directly through the deserts of Arabia. The Babylonian invaders would, according to convenience and custom, cross the Euphrates at Zuphiah, and enter Judea from the north, by way of Syria and Damascus.—ED.

‡ A lion was the emblem of the Babylonian power, Dan 7. 4.—ED.

§ The prophet neither says nor means that God had "deceived" the people by telling them any flattering untruth—the ordinary meaning of deception—such an imputation would be insulting to the truth and holiness of God, and unworthy of the divine wisdom of the prophet. But the meaning is, "that while God had promised peace to a penitent people forsaking their idolatry and returning to the Lord," the Jews appropriating the promise without realizing the character, have been deceived; and, in this sense only, were deceived by the Lord. In another view God is said to have "deceived the people;" that is, false prophets prophesied, saying, "Peace, peace! when there was no peace;" but the people loved and preferred these false prophesyings, and detested the truth, wherefore God "gave them up to strong delusions," and is therefore said to have done that which he judicially condemned an unbelieving, impenitent, and self-willed people to underlie.—ED.

[a] Grain fields, early ripe require, in most countries, protection against birds, which, when affrighted from one part of the field, fly to another, and so require the guards to go "round about" it. In Arabia the ripening grain requires to be strongly guarded against robbers, and as the fields are unfenced, the guards must surround them on all sides.—See Sir J. Chardin.—ED.

† "Such is thy calamity—surely it is bitterness—surely it is a torment even unto thy heart."—ED.

‡ Heb. the walls of my heart.

§ Is this the exclamation of Israel, of the prophet, or of the LORD himself? Israel could not say, "I have heard, O my soul, the sound of the trumpet;" for this was that sound which they sottishly refused to hear. Neither can it be the prophet; for he speaks of "my tents" and "my people" who "have not known me." This last phrase unquestionably designates Messiah. And as the speaker, throughout the whole discourse, (ver. 19—26,) is one, speaking uniformly in the first person, the whole must be understood of Messiah himself speaking prophetically as in "the days of his flesh," even as when he came near the city, looked upon it, and wept.—ED.

* The heavens.—The emblem of rulers elevated for a little as lights of law and equity.—ED.

20 Destruction upon destruction is cried; for the whole land is spoiled: suddenly are my tents spoiled, and my curtains in a moment.

21 How long shall I see the standard, and hear the sound of the trumpet?

RUN ye to and fro through the streets of Jerusalem, and see now, and know, and seek in the broad places thereof, [a] if ye can find a man, if there be any that executeth judgment, that seeketh the truth; and I will pardon it.

2 And though they say, The LORD liveth; surely they swear falsely.[*]

3 O LORD, [b] are not thine eyes upon the truth? thou hast stricken them, but they have not grieved; thou hast consumed them, but they have refused to receive correction: they have made their faces harder than a rock; they have refused to return.

4 Therefore I said, [c] Surely these are poor; they are foolish: for they know not the way of the LORD, nor the judgment of their God.

5 I will get me unto the great men, and will speak unto them; for they have known the way of the LORD, and the judgment of their God: but these have altogether broken the yoke, and burst the bonds.[†]

6 Wherefore [d] a lion out of the forest shall slay them, and a wolf of the [‡] evenings shall spoil them; a leopard[§] shall watch over their cities: every one that goeth out thence shall be torn in pieces; because their transgressions are many, and their backslidings [‖] are increased.

8 [f] They were as fed horses in the morning: every one neighed after his neighbour's wife.

10 ¶ Go ye up[†] upon her walls, and destroy; but [§] make not a full end: take away her battlements; for they are not the LORD'S.

11 For the house of Israel and the house of Judah have dealt very treacherously against me, saith the LORD.

12 They have belied the LORD, and said, It is not he;[‡] neither shall evil come upon us, neither shall we see sword nor famine:

13 [h] And the prophets shall become wind;[§] and the word is not in them: thus shall it be done unto them.[*]

14 Wherefore thus saith the LORD God of hosts, Because ye speak this word, [i] behold, I will make my words in thy mouth fire, and this people wood, and it shall devour them.

15 ¶ Lo, [k] I will bring a nation upon you from far, O [l] house of Israel,[†] saith the LORD: it is a mighty nation, it is an ancient[‡] nation, a nation whose language thou knowest not, neither understandest what they say.

16 [m] Their quiver is as an open sepulchre, they are all mighty men.

17 [n] And they shall eat up thine harvest, and thy bread, which thy sons and thy daughters should eat: they shall eat up thy flocks and thine herds; they shall eat up thy vines and thy fig-trees; they shall impoverish thy fenced cities, wherein thou trustedst, with the sword.

18 Nevertheless in those days, saith the LORD, I [o] will not make a full end with you.

19 And it shall come to pass, when ye shall say, [p] Wherefore doeth the LORD our God all these things unto us? then shalt thou answer them, [q] Like as ye have forsaken me, and served strange gods in your land, so shall ye serve strangers in a land that is not yours.

20 ¶ Declare this in the house of Jacob, and publish it in Judah, saying,

21 Hear now this, [r] O foolish people, and without [§] understanding; which have eyes, and see not; which have ears, and hear not:

22 [s] Fear ye not me? saith the LORD: will ye not tremble at my presence, which [t] have placed the sand [‖] for the bound of the sea by a perpetual decree, that it cannot pass it; and though the waves thereof toss themselves, yet can they not prevail; though they roar, yet can they not pass over it?

23 But [u] this people hath a revolting and a rebellious heart; they are revolted and gone.

24 Neither [x] say they in their heart, [y] Let us now fear the LORD our God, [z] that giveth rain, both the former and the latter, in his season: he reserveth unto us the appointed weeks of the harvest.

25 Your iniquities have turned away these things, and your sins have withholden good things from you.

change of heart, is necessary to the extirpation of indwelling lusts. How great is JEHOVAH'S love to Gentile sinners! But dreadful is his wrath; and it is mad to kindle it upon ourselves by our sins! For furious, swift, terrible, and ruinous, are the miseries, the effects of his vengeance upon impenitent sinners! It is vain to flee into defenced cities, or to attempt being courageous, under a sense of guilt. And those prophets, who flatter men with vain hopes, will most certainly perish along with those whom they have seduced and hardened in wickedness. Our ruin is wholly of ourselves. And it is criminal and absurd to be obstinate in wickedness when God's judgments are just falling on our heads. Hard is the heart which is not effected when destructive calamities befall the nation or church, and all created confidences concur to their ruin. And if such anguish and despair take place in the overthrow of nations, what must take place among the wicked in the last judgment, and in the eternal damnation of hell.

CHAP. V.—Ver. 3. Thou requirest and regardest upright dealings; but they, under all thy lesser judgments, have stupified themselves, and become more and more stubborn and rebellious. 12—14. * Jerusalem was situated partly in the lot of Benjamin, partly in that of Judah. The exhortation seems directed to Benjamin either because the supreme power and consequent misrule lay in the hands of Judah, or perhaps they were less depraved than their brethren, and therefore more likely to listen to advice; or, by selecting the tribe, among whom he dwelt, the prophet may have hoped to stir up the other to a holy jealousy. * The Jewish priests held the office of physician, as may be seen in the law of the leper, where the symptoms of the disease are most accurately described, and the completeness of the cure most imperatively required. But as the soul is more precious than the body, so is the effectual cure of its diseases proportionally important. To this neither prophet nor priest had attended; but contented themselves with inculcating a narrow and superficial morality, without insisting upon the bodies being presented "living sacrifices," and their hearts "transformed" by "the renewing" of the Holy Spirit. Josh. 24. 2.) 8 Be thou instructed, O Jerusalem, lest my soul * depart † from thee; lest I make thee desolate, a land not inhabited.

9 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts, [c] They shall throughly glean the remnant of Israel as a vine: turn back thine hand as a grape-gatherer into the baskets. [‡]

10 To whom shall I speak, and give warning, that they may hear? Behold, their ear is uncircumcised, and they cannot hearken: behold, the word of the LORD is unto them a reproach; they have no delight in it. [§]

11 Therefore [d] I am full of the fury of the LORD; I am weary with holding in: I will pour it out upon the children abroad, and upon the assembly of young men together; for even the husband with the wife shall be taken, the aged with him that is full of days.

12 And [*] their houses shall be turned unto others, with their fields and wives together: for I will stretch out my hand upon the inhabitants of the land, saith the LORD.

13 For from the least of them even unto the greatest of them, every one is given to covetousness; [‖] and from the prophet even unto the priest, every one dealeth falsely.

14 They have healed [*] also the [†] hurt of the daughter of my people slightly, saying, Peace, peace; when there is no peace.

15 Were they ashamed when they had committed abomination? nay, they were not at all ashamed, neither could they blush; therefore they shall fall among them that fall: at the time that I visit them they shall be cast down, saith the LORD.

16 Thus saith the LORD, Stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, [‡] where is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls: but they said, We will not walk therein.

17 Also I set [§] watchmen over you, saying, Hearken to the sound of the trumpet: but they said, We will not hearken.

18 ¶ Therefore hear, ye nations, and know, O congregation, what is among them.

19 [h] Hear, O earth: behold, I will bring evil upon this people, even the fruit of their thoughts, themselves. Therefore God's words by Jeremiah shall be accomplished in the fearful destruction of them and their country. 31. The prophets fit their predictions to the ambitious humours of the priests and princes; the people delight to be flattered with promises of prosperity; and what can these things end in, but ruin to you all?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Terrible and manifold are the corruptions of apostate nations and churches. One sin introduces another, till all ranks become absolute monsters in guilt. And, alas! great men, fattened by prosperity or power, are often the most active patterns in, or promoters of, wickedness. Very grating to multitudes of hearers are the faithful messages of God's ministers. But God will make them to know at last whose words shall stand, whether his or theirs. When professors of the true religion live destitute of the fear of God, nothing is so horrible or unnatural but they will commit it. And it is dreadful when men have carried their sins to such a height, that God cannot longer forbear punishing them without violating the honour of his perfections. Nothing more hastens things to this crisis than combinations of ministers and magistrates to support one another in wickedness, and corrupt the nation between them.

CHAP. VI.—Ver. 1—6. Flee out of your cities, particularly Jerusalem, for the Chaldeans are at hand to besiege it. And while the inhabitants are quite helpless, weak, and terrified, the enemies shall surround the city, and encourage one another, day and night, to give the assault, and destroy it. 9—11. By repeated murders and captivities they shall desolate the country. But to what purpose shall I warn this careless, ignorant, and hardened generation, who detest every message that comes from God, and reckon reproofs slanderous reproaches? Therefore my mind is so full of prophetic threatenings, and of zeal to utter them, that I cannot any longer forbear, but I must denounce destruction to persons of all ages, ranks, and relations. 14. The priests and prophets, instead of faithful reproofs for sin, and denunciation of approaching judgments, do, by their flattering and false predictions of peace, lull the people into a fatal security. 16, 17. Inquire after, and walk in, the good old way of faith and holiness, prescribed in paradise, and walked in by your pious ancestors; and thus shall you find both temporal and eternal happiness. —Hearken to the voice of God's ministers, charging you with your sins, and warning you of approaching judgments. 18. arrived! 27—30. I have therefore, under my own infallible protection, set up Jeremiah to observe and reprove their conduct. But they are obstinately wicked, abandoned to lying, slander, and every other base and abominable thing, corrupting themselves and one another. The instructions and admonitions of prophets, and the rebukes of Providence, are of no avail to reform them. Therefore they must be utterly rejected of God and men, as useless and abominable.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—Sinners must often be alarmed before they will awaken. But fixed is the connexion between national sins and national judgments. And the more luxurious and delicate people have lived, their calamity is the more insupportable. When an angry God is the leader, eager and alert to follow are the instruments of his wrath. But O! how he multiplies his kind, though severe, admonitions before he strikes the fatal blow that desolates the country! Yet no direction, no warning, no good pattern, will prevail with hardened despisers of Christ—the way, the truth, and the life. His judgments on such must therefore appear righteous to every rational beholder. Nor can any pretences to devotion or reformation avail while men continue abandoned to wickedness. Yea, dreadful and desperate must be the issue with those, upon whom not all the repeated pains of prophets and providences make any suitable impression.

CHAP. VII.—Ver. 4. Do not imagine that, because the temple has been the place of God's special residence, he will never forsake it, but uphold it for ever. 9—11. Will ye practise the vilest abominations, and presumptuously appear in my 18 The children gather wood, and the fathers kindle the fire, and the women knead their dough, to make cakes to the *queen† of heaven, and to pour out drink-offerings unto other gods, that they may provoke me‡ to anger.

19 ‖ Do they provoke me to anger? saith the LORD: do they not provoke themselves§ to the confusion of their own faces?

20 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, mine anger and my fury shall be poured out upon this place, upon man, and upon beast, and upon the trees of the field, and upon the fruit of the ground; and it shall burn, and shall not be quenched.

21 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Put your burnt-offerings‖ unto your sacrifices, and eat flesh.

22 For I spake not unto your fathers, nor commanded them in the day that I brought them out of the land of Egypt, *concerning burnt-offerings or sacrifices:†

23 But this thing commanded I them, saying, Obey my voice, and I will be your God, and ye shall be my people; and walk ye in all the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well unto you.

24 But they hearkened not, nor inclined their ear, but walked in the counsels and in the †imagination of their evil heart, and ‡went backward, and not forward.

25 Since the day that your fathers came forth out of the land of Egypt unto this day I have even sent unto you all my servants the prophets, daily rising up early§ and sending them:

26 Yet they hearkened not unto me, nor inclined their ear, but hardened their neck; they did worse than their fathers.

27 Therefore thou shalt speak all these words unto them; but they will not hearken to thee: thou shalt also call unto them; but they will not answer thee.‖

28 But thou shalt say unto them, This is a nation that obeyeth not the voice of the LORD their God, nor receiveth *correction: truth is perished, and is cut off from their mouth.

29 ¶ Cut off thine hair,† O Jerusalem, and cast it away, and take up a lamentation on high places;‡ for the LORD hath rejected and forsaken the generation of his wrath.

30 For the children of Judah have done evil in my sight, saith the LORD: they have set ᵘtheir abominations in the house which is called by my name, to pollute it.

31 And they have built the ˣhigh places of Tophet,* which is in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to burn their sons and their daughters in the fire, which I ʸcommanded them not,† neither ‡ came it into my heart.

32 ¶ Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, ᶻthat it shall no more be called Tophet, nor, The valley of the son of Hinnom, but, The valley of Slaughter: for they shall bury in Tophet till there be no place.

33 And the ᵃcarcasses of this people shall be meat for the fowls of the heaven, and for the beasts of the earth; and none shall fray them away.

34 Then ᵇwill I cause to cease from the cities of Judah, and from the streets of Jerusalem, the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness,§ the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride; for the land shall be desolate.

AT that time, saith the LORD, they shall bring out the bones of the kings of Judah, and the bones of his princes, and the bones of the priests, and the bones of the prophets, and the bones of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, out of their graves:

2 And they shall spread them before the sun, and the moon, and all the host of heaven, whom they have loved, and whom they have served, and after whom they have walked, and whom they have sought, and whom they have worshipped: they shall not be gathered, nor be buried; they shall be for dung upon the face of the earth.*

3 And death shall be chosen rather than life by all the residue of them that remain of this evil family, which remain in all the places whither I have driven them, saith the LORD of hosts.

4 ¶ Moreover, thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD, Shall they fall, and not arise? shall he turn away, and not return?

* It seems natural to the living man to be anxious about his dead body. This natural feeling seems heightened by the hope and assurance of a resurrection. courts, as if ceremonial services could atone for your guilt, and procure you a new indulgence in sin? Is my temple become a refuge for such notorious criminals? 21. You may eat, or do what you please with all your offerings, for I detest them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—God's ministers have need of great boldness in facing multitudes of obstinate sinners. And it is common, for the most profligate hypocrites, to hope that their external privileges will recommend them to the favour of God, and even to use them as encouragements to the most horrid impieties. One public judgment of God is ordinarily a presage of another, as well as a warning to avoid the causes of it. But, alas! hopeless is their case for whom God's favourites must not pray! And yet how readily children confirm the denunciations of God against their parents, by following their evil courses! Ceremonies and forms of devotion do but provoke God more and more against men, who prefer them to the standing duties of morality. Slow and gradual, but at last most certain, are his judgments upon obstinate transgressors. And hardened and barbarous sinners have their crimes fearfully marked in their punishment, and are made to change their sinful mirth into everlasting anguish.

CHAP. VIII.—Ver. 4—9. Though they are fallen into grievous calamities, they will hearken to no counsel that will tend to their recovery; but persevering in their wickedness, they continue firmly trusting to the flattering delusions of their false prophets. Scarcely one of them seriously thinks what he has done; but in general they rush forward into abominable practices, quite thoughtless and regardless of danger. More brutish than the fowls of heaven, they have no proper discernment either of God's mercies or judgments.—Though God has given them his law, and it has been copied out and expounded to them, and they even boast of it, yet they make no good use of it. Their politicians can advise nothing for their relief.

and indeed show themselves arrant fools by their rejection of God's word. 18—20. I am almost overcome with grief to hear the cries of the people, occasioned by the ravage of the Chaldeans. How comes it that we, who are God's people, and have his temple among us, are thus destroyed by profane heathens? It is because of our idolatries; and after all our looking for assistance from the Egyptians or others, the season is past, and no help is come. 22. All means of help fail, because we continue obstinate in our sin.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—Barbarous is the outrage of bloody conquerors in sporting with the remains of the dead. But it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of an angry God, who can stretch out his hand to death and damnation to devour us. Just is his vengeance in exposing idolaters, even when dead, before the idols which they had loved and worshipped in life: and fearful is the state when life becomes a burden, and men prefer to it a random leap into eternity. How obstinate against God, how attached to apostasy and self-imposition, how heedless of their own conduct, and how regardless of God's word, do most men live! But none are more distinguished plagues to nations, than evil, flattering, and impudent clergy. Nor shall any in hell have a deeper share of damnation. To their running unsent of God, preaching another gospel, and slight dealing with the consciences of sinners, is owing the ruin of nations and churches, and the everlasting misery of millions. But when God arms himself to judgment against a people, what multitudes of calamities beset them! what deprivation of comforts! what disappointments, terrors, and despair! And it is greatly affecting to faithful ministers, to see ruin, inevitable ruin, coming on their congregation, church, or nation.

13 And the LORD saith,† Because they have forsaken my law, which I set before them, and have not obeyed my voice, neither walked therein;

14 But have walked after the ‡imagination of their own heart, and after Baalim, which their fathers taught them:

15 [l]Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, I will feed them, even this people, with wormwood,§ and give them water of ‖gall to drink.

16 I will [m]scatter them also among the heathen, whom neither they nor their fathers have known; and I will send a sword after them, till I have consumed* them.

17 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts, [n]Consider ye, and call for the mourning women, that they may come; and send for cunning† women, that they may come:

18 And let them make haste, and take up a wailing for us, that our eyes may run down with tears, and our eyelids gush out with waters.

19 For *a voice of wailing is heard out of Zion, How are we spoiled! we are greatly confounded, because we have forsaken the land, because our dwellings have cast us out.‡

20 Yet hear the word of the LORD, [p]O ye women, and let your ear receive the word of his mouth, and teach your daughters wailing, and every one her neighbour lamentation:§

21 For [q]death is come up into our windows,‖ and is entered into our palaces, to cut off the children from without, and the young men from the streets.

22 Speak, Thus saith the LORD; Even the carcasses of men shall fall as dung upon the open field, and as the handful after the harvest-man,* and none shall gather them.

23 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, [r]Let not the wise man glory in his wisdom, neither let the mighty man glory in his might, let not the rich man glory in his riches:

24 But [s]let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth me, that I am the LORD which [t]exercise loving-kindness, judgment, and righteousness, in the earth: for in these things [u]I delight, saith the LORD.

25 ¶ [x]Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will * punish all them which are [y]circumcised with the uncircumcised;

26 [z]Egypt, and Judah, and Edom, and the children of Ammon, and Moab,† and all that are ‡in the utmost corners, that dwell in the wilderness: for all these nations are uncircumcised, and all the house of Israel are [a]uncircumcised in the heart.

Reflections upon Chap. IX.—Manifold causes of weeping have faithful ministers in this world. And it is a fearful token of approaching judgments, when they are so vexed with their people's abominations as to become weary of dwelling among them. Alas! sinful lusts transform even professors into very devils in crimes. Many are at great pains to secure their own damnation: and one sin opens the door for another. But terrible are the judgments of God upon obstinate sinners. And in a wonderful manner, by the same fire which consumes the wicked, he refines his own people. But every step of departure from him tends only to misery. And let sinners flee where they will, his curse attends them. Death closely follows sin. And very foolish are they who lament losses and death, but never lament sin as the cause of them, nor stand in awe of damnation. But it is very difficult to wean hardened sinners, especially gospel despisers, from every false confidence. Line must be upon line, and precept upon precept, and perhaps after all they will cleave thereto, and perish with heathens.

THE word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 [a] Hear ye the words of this covenant, and speak unto the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem;

3 And say thou unto them, [b] Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, [c] Cursed be the man that obeyeth not the words of this [d] covenant,

4 Which I commanded your fathers in the day that I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, from the [e] iron furnace,* saying, [f] Obey my voice, and do them, according to all which I command you: so shall ye be my people, and I will be your God;

5 That I may perform the [g] oath which I have sworn unto your fathers, to give them a land flowing with milk and honey, as it is this day.† Then answered I, and said, [h] So be it, O LORD.

6 Then the LORD said unto me, [i] Proclaim all these words in the cities‡ of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, saying, Hear ye the words of this covenant, and [k] do them.

7 For [l] I earnestly protested unto your fathers, in the day that I brought them up out of the land of Egypt, even unto this day, rising early and protesting, saying, Obey my voice.

8 [m] Yet they obeyed not, nor inclined their ear, but walked every one in the [n] imagination of their evil heart: therefore I will bring upon them all the words of this covenant, which I commanded them to do; but they did them not.

CHAP. X.—Ver. 17—22. Bring all your goods out of the country, where they are exposed to plunder, into the strong holds: for quickly will I, in a furious manner, drive out the inhabitants of this land by death and captivity. Alas! almost insupportable is my grief, that the whole Jewish church and nation should be quite unhinged, and none able in the least to help them! The rulers of both are ignorant and wicked; therefore shall they and their people be ruined or dispersed. For, behold, the Chaldean army cometh, with great noise and fury, to render Judea utterly desolate.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—Amazing absurdities often prevail even among nations which are famed for worldly wisdom and knowledge. And it is very unreasonable and dangerous, for those who have been taught of God, to learn the ways of heathens. God's eternal power and Godhead are so manifest, as to leave the most stupid idolaters without excuse; and the more we contemplate his unsearchable greatness and glory, the more we shall be filled with reverence and godly fear, and lost in admiration. If he be our King, let us show ourselves faithful subjects, dependent on his protection, and devoted to his service. If he be our Portion, we can wish nothing beyond him. But often men remain ignorant of his excellency, and of the vanity of idols, till it be too late, and till his word be verified in their irrevocable and tremendous destruction. Terrible is the prospect when both rulers and ruled are plunged in ignorance, and abandoned to atheistical neglect of prayer. Neglect of God's worship in families ranks men with heathens, and entails his curse upon them. But great is the mercy that, though God correct,

* The prophet does not speak as if he doubted either the wisdom or justice of the divine government, nor as if he were ignorant of its general principles; but he pleads to have the particular case of his country and church explained that the erroneous doctrines and conclusions of ignorant and ungodly men might be corrected by God's special authority.—Ed.
† Near in their mouth, as the bit of the bridle to the horse; but far from their reins, the powers by which he is guided or restrained.—Note. The Hebrew word for kidneys or reins is derived from a root that signifies to complete or finish, probably because the circuit of digestion, absorption, and arterial propulsion, has been completed or finished when they have separated the superabundant aqueous and saline particles from the blood—and because the completeness of men (fearing God and keeping his commandments, Eccl. 12. 13.) lies in self-denial, the same word signifies to withhold, restrain, and as it were, bridle and rein the passions, presenting the body "a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable to God, man's reasonable service."—Ed.

yet he will not destroy his people; and that, though we may not pray against corrections, we may pray for the mitigation of them, and hope that the rod will be quickly turned against our enemies.

CHAP. XI.—Ver. 15, 16. What have the Jewish nation, whom I once so dearly loved and cherished, now to do in my temple, when they are so abandoned to idolatries, and when their sacrifices, which were once holy, are rendered detestable because of their obstinacy and joy in wickedness! I once made them outwardly flourishing and prosperous, and put them into a capacity to do much good, but now I intend to destroy them by the furious Chaldeans.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—God greatly loves true holiness; and abundant, but gracious, are his rewards of it. The saints of God delightfully consent to his transactions of grace, but especially to the better covenant made with men in Christ, and established upon better promises than the national covenant which God made with Israel. But it is hard to make unregenerate men have so much as a semblance of holiness: on the contrary, they are ready deliberately and obstinately to combine against the Lord their God. But if they will not be ruled by his law, they must be destroyed by his curse. And dreadful is their case for whom prayer cannot avail: God will not, and idols cannot, help. Neither present devotions nor the past favours of God can profit them. Faithful ministers are often barbarously rewarded by those who should be their protectors. And none have been more malicious persecutors than profane clergymen. But if God preserve and vindicate his servants, they may possess their souls in patience, and continue their faithfulness. And, alas! wretched will be the condition of those who have injured them when God rises up to punish.

CHAP. XII.—Ver. 5, 6. If you are so faint and impatient under the opposition of your own poor friends and neighbours at Anathoth, the place of your birth, how wilt thou bear through, when all the rulers of Judah shall persecute you, and even your own relations and fellow-priests stir up the common people to destroy you? 7—13. I will quickly abandon my temple, and my people, which I once so dearly loved, into the hand of the Chaldean destroyers. Instead of hearkening to my 9 Mine heritage is unto me as a [*] speckled bird:[†] the birds round about are against her: come ye, assemble all the beasts of the field, [‡] come to devour.

10 Many pastors[§] have destroyed my vineyard, they have trodden my portion under foot, they have made my [‖] pleasant portion a desolate wilderness.

11 They have made it desolate, and being desolate, it mourneth unto me; the whole land is made desolate, because no man layeth it to heart.[*]

12 The spoilers are come upon all high places through the wilderness: for the sword of the LORD shall devour from the one end of the land even to the other end of the land; no flesh shall have peace.

13 They have sown wheat, but shall reap thorns; they have put themselves to pain, but shall not profit; and they shall be ashamed of your revenues,[†] because of the fierce anger of the LORD.

14 ¶ Thus saith the LORD against all mine evil neighbours,[‡] that touch the inheritance which I have caused my people Israel to inherit; Behold, I will pluck them out of their land, and pluck out the house of Judah from among them.

15 And it shall come to pass, after that I have plucked them out, I will return, and have compassion on them, and will bring them again, every man to his heritage, and every man to his land.

16 And it shall come to pass, if they will diligently learn the ways of my people, to swear by my name, The LORD liveth; (as they taught my people to swear by Baal;) then shall they be built in the midst of my people.

17 But if they will not obey, I will utterly pluck up and destroy that nation, saith the LORD.

† A speckled bird.—The Seventy render it Hyæna, which is countenanced by the Arabic, and adopted by Bochart, Gesenius, Boothroyd, and others. Jerome supposes it to be the peacock; and Blayney, de-pairing of identifying the species, translates it "the bird Tzeboa." But however the word may be translated; the reference is, probably, not to any species, but to a well-known fact in natural history, viz.: The disposition, nay, habit, of birds to follow, and as it were, persecute strange beasts or birds, or birds even of their own species, if speckled with anything uncommon. In such cases the natural timidity of birds seems to give place to a reckless courage which occasionally incites the weakest to combine in pursuit and assault of their most formidable enemy.—Ed.

This distance has induced commentators to conclude that the journey was merely in vision. But of this visionary character there is not a trace in the passage, nor is there the shadow of reason for any such violent interpretation. Journeys of equal or greater length, and even on foot, are common in all countries, either for religion or worldly business—and the report of the prophet's journey, accompanied as he most probably would be, by a number of his friends and pupils, or by a whole caravan, (for it was the great commercial road) would be well calculated to excite the serious attention of some, though it might incur the ridicule of others among his infatuated countrymen.—Ed.

voice, as sheep to their shepherd, they blasphemously contradict my words, reject my government, abuse my messengers, and abandon themselves to rapine and oppression; therefore their heathen neighbours shall assemble in armies to destroy them; Nebuchadnezzar and his princes shall unhinge their constitution in church and state, and lay their whole country terribly desolate. I will also destroy, and carry captive out of their own countries, the Moabites, Ammonites, Edomites, Egyptians, Philistines, Phenicians, Syrians, and Northern Arabs, who have injured my people; and will afterwards bring back my people, and even part of those nations, to their respective countries; and will even unite them into the same true church, especially in the apostolic and millennial periods.—See Introduction, chap. iv. sect. 18, 19.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—The prosperity of wicked men has often been a stumblingblock to the godly. But let God do as he will, it is certain he will never do what is unrighteous. His providences may be dark, but never unjust; nay, nor unkind to the upright. We may sit easy under men's revilings, if we be conscious of God's approbation of us. Yea, there is no reason to covet that prosperity which fattens men, particularly hypocritical professors, for the fearful slaughter of God's wrath. Atheistical and prophet-murdering sinners are a great plague to their country. And yet, if ministers will be faithful, they must expect more and more opposition, especially from evil brethren. And very justly the Lord metes out heavier trials to such as rage and fret at lesser ones, even when the lesser kindly prepare for the greater. Dreadful are those sins which make God desert and detest those ordinances and persons for which he has professed the greatest regard. But men's furious rage against him and his ways must be punished with fearful judgments. And yet no judgments fail to harden and exasperate sinners when God has withdrawn his Spirit from them. They who have tempted us to sin, ordinarily become our tormentors in punishing it. And if judgment begin at the house of God, the wicked corrupters and abusers of it need not think long to escape. But the bitterest enemies may be reconciled by the gospel. And such as diligently learn the Lord's ways shall share the blessings of his people; while ruin, dreadful ruin, in every age, shall await obstinate sinners.

‡ Heb. peace of truth.

THE [a]word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah concerning [*]the dearth.[†]

2 [b]Judah mourneth, and the gates thereof languish: they are black unto the ground; and the cry of Jerusalem is gone up.

3 And their nobles have sent their [‡]little ones to the waters: they [c]came to the [d]pits, and found no water; they returned with their vessels empty; [e]they were ashamed and confounded, and [f]covered their heads.

4 [g]Because the ground is chapt, for there was no rain in the earth, [h]the ploughmen were ashamed, they covered their heads.

5 Yea, [i]the hind also calved in the field, and forsook it, because there was no grass.[§]

6 [k]And the wild asses did stand in the high places, they snuffed up the wind like dragons; [l]their eyes did fail, because there was no grass,

7 ¶ O LORD, though our iniquities [m]testify against us, do thou it for thy name's sake:[‖] for our backslidings are many; we have sinned against thee.

8 O [n]the Hope of Israel, the Saviour thereof in time of trouble, why shouldest thou be as a stranger in the land, and as a wayfaring man that turneth aside to tarry for a night?

9 Why shouldest thou be as a man astonished,[*] as a mighty man that cannot save? yet thou, O LORD, art in the midst of us, and [o]we are called by thy name: [p]leave us not.

10 ¶ Thus saith the LORD unto this people, Thus have they loved to wander, they have not refrained their feet; [q]therefore the LORD doth not accept[†] them: he will now remember their iniquity, and visit their sins.

11 Then said the LORD unto me, [r]Pray not for this people for their good.

12 When they fast, I will not hear their cry; and when they offer burnt-offering and an oblation, I will not accept them: but [s]I will consume them by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence.

13 ¶ Then said I, Ah Lord GOD! behold, the prophets say unto them, Ye shall not see the sword, neither shall ye have famine; but I will give you [‡]assured peace in this place.

14 Then the LORD said unto me, The prophets prophesy lies in my name: I sent them not, neither have I commanded them, neither

CHAP. XIII.—Ver. 16. Glorify your own God, by confession and repentance of your sins, before he bring the most perplexing, scattering, deathful, and ruinous judgments upon you. 20—23. Behold, O Jews, the Chaldeans shall invade your country, and shall destroy and carry captive your once flourishing multitudes of God's covenanted people: and when they, whom you formerly invited to your assistance, (and thus showed them the way to subdue you,) shall destroy you, how dreadful shall be your misery and anguish! For your great iniquities shall you be reduced to extreme disgrace and the basest of servitude; since ye are so hardened in a long course of sinning, that all attempts to remove your spotted practices, or your universal corruptions, are in vain.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—God's ministers are often strangely tried for the instruction of their hearers; and it will require all the arts that can be used to make men understand what concerns their eternal welfare. But infinite is the kindness of God in making any of them his peculiar people, to the praise of his glory. Fearfully does he disgrace and ruin such as had behaved unfaithfully in his honourable service: and self-complacence, in parts, gifts, station, wealth, or power, God rejects with abhorrence. Alas! how stupified, and what mutual destroyers, do nations become when God leaves them! Their very managers and protectors do but ruin instead of relieving them; and vain hopes will but aggravate their misery and increase their confusion. Nothing but self-humiliation and repentance can avail, when God lifts up his hand to destroy. Nor are the highest too great to sit in the dust when he calls to weeping and mourning for the sins of the land. Those ministers or others, who know the terrors of the Lord, cannot but tremble and weep for those who, insensible of danger, refuse to amend. Disgraceful miseries shall at last overtake the obstinate: and frequently the persons or things with which they sinned become the instruments of their punishment. Proud and ignorant sinners readily quarrel with the justice of their calamities. But, alas! how extensive and dreadful is God's charge against them, when he sets spake unto them: they prophesy unto you a false vision and divination, and a thing of nought, and the deceit of their heart.

15 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning the prophets that prophesy in my name, and I sent them not, yet they say, Sword and famine shall not be in this land; [t] By sword and famine shall those prophets be consumed.

16 And the people to whom they prophesy [u] shall be cast out in the streets of Jerusalem, because of the famine and the sword; and they shall have none to bury them; them, their wives, nor their sons, nor their daughters: for I will pour [x] their wickedness upon them.

17 ¶ Therefore thou shalt say this word unto them, [y] Let mine eyes run down with tears night and day, and let them not cease:* for [z] the virgin daughter of my people is broken with a great breach, with a very grievous blow.

18 If [a] I go forth into the field, then behold the slain with the sword! and if I enter into the city, then behold them that are sick with famine! yea, both the prophet and the priest [b] go about into a land that they know not.†

19 [c] Hast thou utterly rejected Judah? hath thy soul loathed Zion? why hast thou smitten us, and there is [d] no healing for us? [e] we looked for peace, and there is no good; and for the time of healing, and behold trouble!

20 We acknowledge, O LORD, our wickedness, and the iniquity of our fathers; for [f] we‡ have sinned against thee.

21 Do not abhor us; for thy name's sake, do not disgrace [g] the throne of thy glory: remember, break not thy covenant with us.

22 Are there any among the [h] vanities of the Gentiles that can cause rain? or can the heavens give showers? art not thou he,§ O LORD our God? therefore we will wait upon thee; for thou hast made all these things.

† Never was any prophecy more literally fulfilled, and never was there any one more unlikely to be true. (1) Because the Jews were remarkable for their attachment to their native land, to which all their institutions, interests, and recollections, bound them. (Ps. 137. 5.) (2) Because, if scattered, they had hitherto displayed such a tendency to conform to the religion and habits of the heathen that all trace of their separate existence might be expected speedily to disappear. Notwithstanding of these things, they still abide a scattered, but a distinct people. "They are found alike in Europe, Asia, Africa, and America: they are citizens of the world—without a country. They are found in Poland, Holland, Russia, and Turkey. In Germany, Spain, Italy, France, and Britain, they are more thinly scattered. They are found in Persia, China, and India, east and west of the Ganges, and even in the interior of Africa, south of Timbuctoo." —Keith.—Ed.

‡ God is perfect, therefore every attribute of his nature is perfect: (1) in itself; and (2) in its relation to his other attributes. Hence it follows that while his "long suffering" is perfect, so likewise his justice is perfect; and so God is said to be "weary of repenting," when the time of his "long suffering" is ended, and the relative time of his righteous retribution arrived. See ver. 15. Exod. 34. 12. Num. 23. 19.—Ed.

But should not "young men" be translated "young man," as the word is certainly singular? Is not this "young man" king Jehoiachin, then only eighteen years of age? comp. 2 Kings 24. 8. with Jer. 1. 3. before them their great iniquities, their fixedness and obstinacy therein, their forgetfulness of, and treacherous departure from, him, and their mad propensity to whoredom and idolatry! Nothing less than the infinitely precious blood of Jesus, and the infinitely powerful grace of JEHOVAH, can renew and purify a sinner, thus spotted and deformed both in nature and practice. And, alas! dreadful is the guilt and folly that, while God waits to cleanse us, we should so refuse and evade his kindness.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—With the greatest ease, even by withholding drops of rain, God can render his enemies miserable, and make the inhabitants of the wealthiest cities pale, faint, and dying. At his nod fields deny their crops, and fountains their water, and cause even the richest to die by hunger and thirst: and not only sinners, but the irrational creatures for our sakes, share in the punishment. Those who take no shame for their sins, provoke God to confound them with disappointments: and many mourn over their miseries who never mourn over the sinful causes of them. Yea, both sins and judgments often lie heaviest on their hearts who had the least hand in procuring them. Alarmingly dreadful, but just, is God's departure from a church or nation whose Hope and Saviour he has long been. And great is his condescension to indulge his people in the most familiar expostulations, and in the improving of his own excellencies, as arguments to enforce their requests. But no prayers can prevail when he is determined to ruin men obstinate in wickedness: no sacrifice can be accepted, no excuse admitted. What plagues to themselves, and all around, are flattering, unfaithful, and erroneous ministers! But they who are faithful cannot forbear intercessions for their people's welfare and salvation. With unutterable groans and expostulations they deprecate their ruin; and encourage themselves therein by the views of God's honour, mercy, power, and covenant relation.

† The practice of cutting the flesh in mourning was practised in several ancient nations. Among the Athenians it prevailed, and was forbidden by Solon. The Spartans were accustomed in mourning for their great men, to tear their flesh. (Harwood's Grecian Antiquities. p. 364.) A similar practice prevailed amongst the ancient Huns, and was found amongst the modern South Sea Islanders. Though prohibited by Mahomet, it still maintains its ground in Moslem countries. In the annual mourning in Persia for Hasseiu the son of the Caliph Ali, many run about uttering doleful cries, and cutting themselves with knives and lancets till completely covered with blood. This barbarous practice was forbidden by the divine law; (Lev. 19. 28.) notwithstanding which it still appears to have prevailed among the disobedient Hebrews.—ED.

‡ The practice of cutting off the hair in mourning is as ancient as the days of Job. (Job 1. 20.) Some special form of the practice was, however, forbidden by the divine law, (Deut. 14. 1.) and to the priests it was altogether interdicted. (Lev. 21. 5.) It prevailed among the Greeks (See Harwood's Antiquities, p. 363.) and is still found in Abyssinia.—ED.

§ "Neither shall men deal out bread for them in mourning to comfort them for the dead." See Is. 58. 7. Lev. 11. 4, 5. Deut. 14. 7.—Poole.

‖ This is supposed to refer to the funeral feast given after "the three days of weeping." Such a custom seems to have prevailed among all nations. In England, during the plague, 1569, one of the precautions against the spread of the disease was the prohibition of funeral dinners. (Maitland's London, vol. 1. p. 260.) The allusion here, however, seems to be, not to a funeral, but to a marriage feast. See ver. 9.—ED.

* This self-defence, founded upon their total ignorance or disregard of the law of God, is often looked upon by Christians with surprise. Alas! how many examples of equal ignorance, disregard, and justification, or at least, palliation of sin, may Christians readily discover among themselves! The sabbath is violated upon human authority, in opposition to divine law; and what is the Christian answer? the Jewish to a tittle: "What is our iniquity? what our sin against the Lord our God?" — Note. Sin, and the defence of sin, are the same in all ages, and among all people.—ED.

whom I will give all their wealth, without any possibility of redemption; and who, in execution of my kindled wrath, shall carry them away captives. 15—18. Lord, thou knowest my circumstances; protect, favour, and comfort me, and punish my persecutors. While they are spared, let me not be destroyed, but manifest thy regard to me, as one persecuted for thy sake. I very cheerfully received my commission from thee to be thy prophet, and with pleasure declared thy messages to this people, expecting that they might be moved to repent; but the repeated messages of wrath which I have been appointed to deliver, and the persecution which I have endured, on their account, have inexpressibly burdened and sunk my spirits. And must my troubles be perpetual? Wilt thou never deliver me according to thy promise? 19—21. If thou repent of this sinful distrust, and cheerfully and diligently discharge thine office, I will continue thee in it: and if thou faithfully endeavour to convince and reclaim wicked hypocrites, and to comfort upright saints, thou shalt be honoured as a true prophet. But remember thy faithful reproofs to reduce them to that course in which thou walkest, and never comply with, or flatter them in, their sinful courses; and then will I constantly protect thee against, and at last deliver thee from, all thy furious and powerful persecutors.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—Dreadful is the case of nations when chargeable with sins which God will not pardon, and when the prayers of the choicest saints avail nothing for their relief. For in diversified and dreadful forms God can, even on earth, avenge himself on his enemies. Ministers, if faithful, must expect the most ungrateful returns from the world. And however earnestly they should follow after peace with all men, it must never be purchased by base and flattering compliances in sin; nor ought they to entangle themselves with the affairs of this world. But it is hard for the best to keep their temper in an evil day. It is astonishing that God should be so condescending and kind to his peevish saints. And they, who distinguish themselves in piety, faithfulness, and diligence, may

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—In evil days, a concern for our church and nation ought to swallow up our care for natural relations; for then our families, and other created comforts, become occasional additions to our trouble. Carnal feasting and mirth are very unseasonable when God's destructive judgments are hanging over and ravaging around us. God is exact in marking men's iniquities, and unavoidable is his punishment of them: but it is very hard to convince obdurate sinners of their guilt, or of the equity of God's judgments. And yet how infinite is his mercy in connecting the most awful judgments with the most gracious deliverances, and in making his strokes of wrath to prepare men for the reception of his favours. And marvellous are all his ways: he makes both the miseries and the deliverances of the Jewish nation to promote the gathering of the Gentiles to Christ

CHAP. XVII.—Ver. 1, 2. Their proneness to idolatry is deeply rooted in their hearts, and marked on the multitudes of their altars; and they continue in it from generation to generation. 5—8. 19 ¶ Thus said the LORD unto me, Go and stand [b] in the gate of the children of the people, whereby the kings of Judah come in, and by the which they go out, and in all the gates of Jerusalem;

20 And say unto them, [f] Hear ye the word of the LORD, ye kings of Judah, and all Judah, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, that enter in by these gates:

21 Thus saith the LORD, [g] Take heed to yourselves, and [h] bear no burdens on the sabbath-day, nor bring it in by the gates of Jerusalem;

22 Neither carry forth a burden out of your houses on the sabbath-day, neither do ye any work; [i] but hallow ye the sabbath-day, as I commanded your fathers.

23 [k] But they obeyed not, neither inclined their ear, but made their neck stiff,† that they might not hear, nor receive instruction.

24 And it shall come to pass, if [l] ye diligently hearken unto me, saith the LORD, to bring in no burden through the gates of this city on the sabbath-day, but hallow the sabbath-day, to do no work therein;

25 [m] Then shall there enter into the gates of this city kings and princes sitting upon the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, they and their princes, the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and this city shall remain [n] for ever.

26 And they shall come [o] from the cities of Judah, and from the places about Jerusalem, and from the land of Benjamin, and from the plain, and from the mountains, and from the south, [p] bringing burnt-offerings, and sacrifices, and meat-offerings, and incense, and bringing sacrifices of praise, unto the house of the LORD.

27 [q] But if ye will not hearken unto me to hallow the sabbath-day, and not to bear a burden, even entering in at the gates of Jerusalem on the sabbath-day; then [r] will I kindle a fire in the gates thereof, and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem, and it shall not be quenched.

† Jews and Christians have strangely assimilated in "making their necks stiff" against the light and easy yoke of the sabbath: (1) By degrading the fourth commandment from a moral to a mere ceremonial institution. (2) By pleading the absolute necessity of many public works being continued on that day. (3) By acting under human authority, and disregarding God's prohibition of labour. THE word which came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 [a] Arise, and go down to the potter's house, and there I will cause thee to hear my words.

3 Then I went down to the potter's house, and, behold, he wrought a work on the [*] wheels.[†]

4 And the vessel [‡] that he made of clay was marred in the hand of the potter: so he [§] made it again another vessel, as seemed good to the potter to make it.

5 Then the word of the LORD came to me, saying,

6 O house of Israel, cannot I do with you as this potter? saith the LORD. Behold, as the clay is in the potter's hand, so are ye in mine hand, O house of Israel.

7 At what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, to [b] pluck up, and to pull down, and to destroy it;

9 And at what instant I shall speak concerning a nation, and concerning a kingdom, [c] to build, and to plant it;

10 [d] If it do evil in my sight, that it obey not my voice, then I will repent of the good wherewith I said I would benefit them.

11 ¶ Now therefore go to, speak to the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying, Thus saith the LORD, Behold, I frame evil against you, and devise a device against you: [e] return ye now every one from his evil way, and make your ways and your doings good.[e]

12 And they said, There is no hope: but we will walk after our own devices, and we will every one do the imagination of his evil heart.

13 Therefore thus saith the LORD, Ask ye now among the heathen, who hath heard such things? The [f] virgin of Israel hath done a very horrible thing.

‖ Repenting, in man, includes a turning from sin, with "grief and hatred" of it; wherefore many are surprised to find repenting attributed to God; forgetting they are expressly told that "God is not a man that he should lie; neither the son of man that he should repent." Repenting, in God, implies not a change of mind—for in God "there is no variableness"—it implies merely a change of relation between God and man, and a consequent change of God's dispensation towards him. To the sinful man or nation God's relation, as moral Governor and Judge, demands condemnation; to the penitent man or nation it as necessarily extends mercy and pardon. See note on Ex. 32. 14.—ED.

e The command, "Make your ways and doings good," enjoins a duty without stating the necessity of God's "working to will and to do." This need of grace, however, is most evidently implied in the passage itself, besides being so frequently declared in other parts of the Scriptures. See John 15. 5. Eph. 2. 4, 5, 8—10. destroyed. But do thou, the object of all my praises, deliver me from the injuries which I suffer from this malicious people, and effectually grant me comfort. They insolently deride me, as if the threatenings which I denounce would never be fulfilled. But I have patiently persevered in delivering thy messages to them, without ever desiring to bear one message of destruction, or to see it executed: and I have never spoken but as directed by thee. Do thou therefore acknowledge, protect, and comfort me, while they malign, terrify, and persecute me. And let these my persecutors be disgraced, perplexed, terrified, and fearfully destroyed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—Sinful corruptions are deeply rooted in men's hearts, and fixed in their practice, though sin effectually robs us of everything valuable. There is great malignity and hurt in trusting to creatures. It draws our heart from God, the blessed ALL and IN ALL. But much satisfaction and success attend a solid dependence upon him alone as our God. Alas! what an unsearchable fund of all manner of deceiving and desperate wickedness is an unrenewed heart! But all is naked and open before the righteous Judge of all, and punisher of the wicked. And dreadful is the curse annexed to ill-gotten riches, as well as to resting on self-righteousness. Great is the esteem which saints have for the temple, the ordinances, the Christ, of God. And while he is the hope, the praise, the healer, and the Saviour of his people, he is the awful, but just, punisher of his and their enemies. A fearful portion of debasement, terror, and ruin, shall earthly men, and apostates from God, receive at the last. When they become incorrigible, their damnation slumbereth not. And O the strength of indwelling corruption, that makes even precious prophets sinfully fret when they meet with much opposition in the execution of their office. Great is the mercy that God does not always employ them in the unpleasing messages of wrath. Alas! the folly and wickedness of nations—of Britain—in disregarding God's sabbaths, when such important blessings to courts, kingdoms, and churches attend the careful sanctification, and such fearful miseries attend the profanation of it!

CHAP. XVIII.—Ver. 14—18. Though no man will prefer the waters of a dirty puddle to those that come from the rocks of Lebanon, my people Israel have preferred to me the most filthy and useless idols, which, by their worship and votaries, seduce them into abominable courses, neither used by the saints of old, nor fit for them; and which will certainly issue in the dreadful desolation of their country, 17 I will scatter them as with an east wind before the enemy; I will show them the back, and not the face, in the day of their calamity.

19 Give heed to me, O LORD, and hearken to the voice of them that contend with me.

2 And go forth unto [c] the valley of the son of Hinnom, which is by the entry of [†] the east gate, and [d] proclaim there the words that I shall tell thee:

3 And say, [e] Hear ye the word of the LORD, O kings of Judah, and inhabitants of Jerusalem; Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, [f] Behold, I will bring evil upon this place, the which whosoever heareth, his ears shall tingle.

4 [g] Because they have forsaken me, and have [*] estranged this place, and have burnt incense in it unto other gods, whom neither they nor their fathers have known, nor the kings[†] of Judah, and have filled this place with the blood of innocents;

5 They have built also the high places of Baal, to burn[‡] their sons with fire for burnt-offerings unto Baal, [h] which I commanded not, nor spake it, neither came it into my mind:

6 [i] Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that this place shall no more be called Tophet, nor The valley of the son of Hinnom, but The valley of Slaughter.

7 And [k] I will make void the [§] counsel of Judah and Jerusalem in this place; and [l] I will cause them to fall by the sword before their enemies, and by the hands of them that seek their lives: and their [m] carcasses will I give to be meat for the fowls of the heaven, and for the beasts of the earth.

8 [n] And I will make this city desolate, and an hissing; every one that passeth thereby shall be astonished and hiss because of all the plagues thereof.

9 And I will cause them to eat the [o] flesh of their sons, and the flesh of their daughters; [‖] and they shall eat every one the flesh of his friend in the siege and straitness, wherewith their enemies, and they that seek their lives, shall straiten them.

10 Then [p] shalt thou break the bottle in the sight of the men that go with thee,

11 And shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, [q] Even so will I break this people and this city, as one breaketh a potter's vessel, that cannot [*] be made whole again; and they shall [r] bury them in Tophet, till [*] there be no place to bury.

12 Thus will I do unto this place, saith the LORD, and to the inhabitants thereof, and even make this city [t] as Tophet: [†]

13 And the houses of Jerusalem, and the houses of the kings of Judah, shall be [u] defiled as the place of Tophet, because of all the houses [x] upon whose roofs [‡] they have burnt incense unto all the host of heaven, and have poured out drink-offerings unto other gods.

14 Then came Jeremiah from Tophet, whither the LORD had sent him to prophesy; and he stood in the court of the LORD's house, and said to all the people,

[a] "Will one leave the spring of the field for the snow water of Lebanon? will men desert the running streams for muddy waters?" How then can rational men desert the living God, and turn to the worship of dead idols.—Ed.

† Each of these statements was perfectly true in itself—each wrong in the application. For the "law shall perish" from the ignorant, the worldly, the superstitious, and idolatrous priest; and counsel shall depart from them that count themselves wise and are fools; and the word shall depart from the false and presumptuous prophet, who speaks in the Lord's name what the Lord has not commanded him to speak.—Ed.

‡ "In the tongue."—Castalio. "On the tongue."—Boothroyd. "Cut out his tongue."—Abarbanel. "Let us bear false witness against him."—Chaldee. But any of the translations is preferable to this paraphrase; for though the conspirators might willingly have uttered or suborned false witness against him, they would not so publicly and openly have avowed their criminal purpose.—Ed.

§ Scott, than whom there is seldom a safer guide, observes upon this prayer: "Perhaps there might be human infirmity mixed here on this trying occasion, especially as we must allow this to have been the case in other instances," (comp. ch. 15. 15—18. & 20. 10—18.) Now this, from such an authority, is an exceedingly dangerous supposition. Could the author have forgotten that the prophet was inspired? Could he have forgotten that, as a prayer it must have been either of faith or of sense? If of sense, then of the will of man; if of faith, then of the Spirit of God? Could he have forgotten that the prayer was heard and the judgment poured out? Had he forgotten that the prophet, speaking by the Spirit, and in the name of the Lord, merely delivers, in the form of a prayer, the sentence which God had commissioned him to pronounce upon an impenitent and abandoned generation?—Ed.

‡ The roofs of the Jewish houses were flat, and surrounded by a battlement. and the dispersion and rejection of their nation. Yet, when Jeremiah delivers these messages of wrath, they contrive how to silence, reproach, disregard, and murder him: and boast that, in defiance of all his threatenings, they shall prosper, since they have the priests, statesmen, and prophets, all on their side.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—It is proper that God should exercise an absolute sovereignty over men: and highly presumptuous is it in them to complain of his providence. Yet, notwithstanding he is careful to show them the equity, as well as the sovereignty, of his procedure: and he will at last make his glory to appear, and show that all our miseries, public and private, may be traced from our sins. How absurd and dangerous is apostasy from God to idols! and if men will persevere in their sins, they must expect no mercy at last. The wicked maliciously persecute, slander, and contemn, the faithful servants of Christ. But fearfully shall God resent the injuries done to them as done to himself: and he that despises them must be held as one that hates and despises him that sent them.

18 [s] Wherefore came I forth out of the womb to see labour and sorrow, that my days should be consumed with shame?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—By methods unnumbered the Lord tries to awaken ignorant, stupified, and self-hardened sinners to repentance, that their ruin may be prevented, or at least appear wholly owing to themselves. And it is proper that rulers in church and state should be warned with peculiar faithfulness and solemnity: and warnings had need to be again and again repeated. Dreadful are the effects of sin upon nations and churches: and often those who have been noted for sinning are made no less noted for suffering: and all attempts to avoid God's ruinous strokes prove fruitless, or worse.

CHAP. XX.—Ver. 7—10. Contrary to my own inclination, thou hast persuaded me to undertake this office, and hast disappointed me of the comforts which I expected in it. By thy powerful arguments and authority thou didst overrule me in it; yet have I met with nothing but derision and persecution. For, since I began to deliver thy messages, I have prophesied of nothing but miseries to befall my people; and on that account all my messages have been made matter of derision and reproach to me; I therefore resolved to prophesy no more: but I found myself inwardly tormented with challenges of conscience, and frowns from God, till I again delivered his messages. Though, with fear, I knew that I was everywhere calumniated, as seditious, false, and dangerous to the state, and mine enemies were ready to spread the most malignant aspersions, in order to procure my disgrace or death; and even my relations and intimates did all they could to insnare me.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—How heartily the wicked, especially among the clergy, hate the faithful ministers of Christ! They who boldly remonstrate against the wickedness of an abandoned generation, must scarcely expect the common formalities of justice. But God can soon make those, who would frighten his prophets, a terror to themselves. And they who attempt to stop their mouth do but hasten their own doom. It is never safe for ministers to promise themselves much comfort on earth. Neither the wisdom of the serpent, nor the harmlessness of the dove, will be able to preserve them from reproach and derision. Nay, ridicule and contempt are the common weapons of the ungodly against the preachers of truth. And it is no small pain to a faithful soul to hear God's messages treated with levity and contempt. To faint in the Lord's way, or to wish that we had never entered into it, because we meet with difficulties, is extremely weak and foolish. But it is an ease for burdened souls to pour out their complaints before the Lord: even that which is terrible in him turns out to their comfort. And when they avenge not themselves, but commit their cause to him, he will compass them about with songs of expected, and afterwards enjoyed, deliverance. But, alas! how inconstant are the frames of the best on earth. Now they mount up to heaven in excellency; but soon descend to the depths of weakness and guilt. Alas! what vanity and vexation of spirit fill up human life! But absurd is sinful passion when allowed to ramble. And it is dangerous to have an unbridled tongue while our passions are strong.

CHAPTER XXI.

(1) Zedekiah sends to Jeremiah to inquire into the event of Nebuchadrezzar's invasion: 1, 2. (2) Jeremiah prophesies siege and captivity: 3—7. (3) Counsels the people to submit to the Chaldeans, and reproves the royal house: 8—14.

A. M. cir. 3414. B. C. cir. 590.

THE word* which came to Jeremiah from the LORD, when king Zedekiah [a] sent unto him Pashur the son of Melchiah, and Zephaniah the son of Maaseiah the priest, saying,

2 [b] Inquire, I pray thee, of the LORD for us, (for Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon maketh war against us,) if so be that the LORD will deal with us [c] according to all his wondrous works, that he may go up from us.

3 ¶ Then said Jeremiah unto them, Thus shall ye say to Zedekiah,

4 Thus saith the LORD God of Israel, Behold, I will turn back the weapons of war that are in your hands, wherewith ye fight against the king of Babylon, and against the Chaldeans, which besiege you without the walls, and [d] I will assemble them into the midst of this city.

5 [e] And I myself will fight against you with an outstretched hand, and with a strong arm, even in anger, and in fury, and in great wrath.

6 And [f] I will smite the inhabitants of this city, both man and beast; they shall die of a great pestilence.

7 And afterward, saith the LORD, [g] I will deliver Zedekiah king of Judah, and his servants, and the people, and such as are left in this city from the pestilence, from the sword, and from the famine, into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of those that seek their life; and he shall smite them with the edge of the sword: [h] he shall not spare them, neither have pity, nor have mercy.†

8 ¶ And unto this people thou shalt say, Thus saith the LORD, [i] Behold, I set before you the way of life, and the way of death.

9 He that [k] abideth in this city shall die by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth out, and falleth to the Chaldeans that besiege you, he shall live, and his life shall be unto him for a prey.‡

10 For I have set my face against this city for evil, and not for good, saith the LORD; [l] it shall be given into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall burn it with fire.

11 ¶ And touching [m] the house of the king of Judah, say, Hear ye the word of the LORD;

12 O house of David, thus saith the LORD, [s] Execute judgment in the morning,[l] and deliver him that is spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor, lest my fury go out like fire, and burn that none can quench it, because of the evil of your doings.

13 Behold, [n] I am against thee, O [o] inhabitant of the valley,* and rock of the plain, saith the LORD; which say, [p] Who shall come down against us? or who shall enter into our habitations?

14 But I will † punish you according to the fruit of your doings, saith the LORD: and I will kindle a fire in the forest thereof,‡ and it shall devour all things round about it.

* The message in this chapter has been confounded with that in ch. 37, and as the narratives differ, they have been urged as contradictory. But the least attention will show that they relate to events clearly distinct. (1) Jeremiah had been imprisoned in the "high gate of Benjamin," by order of Pashur alone, and delivered the next day, ch 20. 2, 3. (2) This message came to Jeremiah at the very commencement of the war, and of the siege of Jerusalem, (ver. 2, 4), and only requested the prophet to "inquire of the LORD." (3) When the message in ch. 37. was sent, the Chaldeans had continued the siege till the Egyptian army had come up against them, ch. 37. 5. (4) The request of that message was that the prophet should "pray unto the Lord," ver. 3. (5) Jeremiah was at that time free; and his subsequent imprisonment was not by Pashur, but by the princes; and not in the "high gate of Benjamin," but in the "house of Jonathan the scribe" (ver. 15); and finally, by order of Zedekiah, in the "court of the prison," ver. 21.—ED.

THUS saith the LORD,* [a] Go down to the house of the king of Judah, and speak there this word,

2 And say, [b] Hear the word of the LORD, O king of Judah, that sittest upon the throne of David, thou, and thy servants, and thy people that enter in by these gates;

3 Thus saith the LORD, [c] Execute ye judgment and righteousness, and deliver the spoiled out of the hand of the oppressor: and do no wrong, do no violence to the stranger, the fatherless, nor the widow, neither shed innocent blood in this place.

4 For [d] if ye do this thing indeed, [e] then shall there enter in by the gates of this house kings sitting † upon the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, he, and his servants, and his people.

5 But [f] if ye will not hear these words, I swear [g] by myself, saith the LORD, that [h] this house shall become a desolation.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—God often honours his ministers when they think that their days are consumed in shame. And they, who would not take God's direction for deliverance from sin, would often gladly take it for escaping from trouble. But it is vain to hope that God will do that for us in our sin which he did for others in their integrity; or that anything will help us when he is our determined adversary; or that men will pity us when we have forfeited his compassion. An ignominious slavery, or a miserable death, is but a dreadful native. But it is best to give up the defence of our country when we c nothing for its relief. It is but a disgrace for men to be descended of godly tors when they indulge themselves in impiety. When nations are in danger, p ought without delay to reform themselves and their subjects: and ministers faithfully admonish them to it, had need to be well furnished with faith and co away: for he shall return no more, nor see his native country.

11 For thus saith the LORD touching [p] Shallum* the son of Josiah king of Judah, which reigned instead of Josiah his father, which went forth out of this place, He shall not return thither any more:

12 But he shall die in the place whither they have led him captive, and shall see this land no more.

13 ¶ Wo unto [q] him that buildeth his house by unrighteousness, and his chambers by wrong; that useth his neighbour's service without wages, and giveth him not for his work;

14 That saith, I will build me a wide house and [†] large chambers, and cutteth him out [‡] windows; and it is ceiled with cedar, and painted with vermilion!

15 Shalt thou reign because thou closest thyself in cedar? Did not thy father eat and drink, and do [r] judgment and justice, and then it was well with him?

16 He judged the cause of the poor and needy; then it was well with him: [s] was not this to know me? saith the LORD.

17 But thine eyes and thine heart are not but for thy covetousness, and for to shed innocent blood, and for oppression, and for [§] violence, to do it.

18 Therefore thus saith the LORD concerning Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, [t] They shall not lament for him, saying, Ah my brother! or, Ah sister![‖] they shall not lament for him, saying, Ah lord! or Ah his glory!

19 [u] He shall be buried with the burial of an ass, drawn and cast forth beyond the gates of Jerusalem.*

20 ¶ Go up to Lebanon, and cry; and lift up thy voice in Bashan, and cry from the passages:† for all thy lovers are destroyed.

21 I spake unto thee in thy ‡ prosperity; but thou saidst, I will not hear: this hath been thy manner from thy youth,§ that thou obeyedst not my voice.

22 The wind‖ shall eat up all thy pastors, and thy lovers shall go into captivity: surely then [x] shalt thou be ashamed and confounded for all thy wickedness.

23 O * inhabitant of Lebanon,† that makest thy nest in the cedars, how gracious‡ shalt thou be when pangs come upon thee, the pain as of a woman in travail!

24 As I live, saith the LORD, though [y] Coniah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah were [z] the signet upon my right hand,* yet would I pluck thee thence;†

25 And I [a] will give thee into the hand of them that seek thy life, and into the hand of them whose face thou fearest, even into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and into the hand of the Chaldeans.

26 And I will [b] cast thee out, and thy mother that bare thee,‡ into another country, where ye were not born; and there shall ye die.

27 But to the land whereunto they § desire to return, [c] thither shall they not return.

28 Is this man Coniah [d] a despised broken idol? is he a vessel wherein is no pleasure? wherefore are they cast out, [e] he and his seed, and are cast into a land which they know not?

29 [f] O earth, earth, earth, hear the word of the LORD.

30 Thus saith the LORD, [g] Write ye this man childless,‖ a man that shall not prosper in his days: for [h] no man of his seed shall prosper, sitting upon the throne of David, and ruling any more in Judah.

Reflections upon Chap. XXII.—Ministers must be faithful and bold, and tell kings and courtiers of their sins, dangers, and duties, as well as others. It is only in keeping God's commandments that we can expect a great reward. He has always instruments duly prepared for destructive work, as well as for building up. And men's sins are sometimes so plainly marked in their judgments, that even heathens can justify his procedure; for he never casts them off till they first cast off him. Dying saints may be justly envied, whilst living sinners are to be pitied. No education or example can change men's hearts; but it is a terrible aggravation of men's wickedness that it is contrary to their pious education. Proud and mischievous rebellion against God entails upon multitudes the most lasting shame and disgrace: nay, distinguished pride is generally followed by distinguished dishonour and misery, either in life or in death. It is extremely foolish to set our hearts upon that which can be easily taken from us, or made a curse to us. And none are more apt to appear mean, or to pretend piety under adversity, than those who boast highly amidst prosperity. It were well if what we suffer would bring us to a serious repentance. Sometimes persons are exalted even to thrones, that God may pour the more public and lasting disgrace upon them and theirs. Nor need the greatest to be confident, since they know not what debasement and misery await them and their seed. But it is hard to awaken sinners, lost in sensuality and earthlymindedness. And how sovereign is God in making men fruitful or childless, honoured or dishonoured, as he thinks fit!

Chap. XXIII.—Ver. 5, 6. Behold, in the fulness of time the Son of God shall appear in a holy but debased human nature; who, as God's King set up in his church, shall, with astonishing success, reform the world, and destroy the wicked out of it. By him shall his spiritual Israel be delivered from their sin and misery, and a King shall reign and prosper, and shall execute judgment and justice in the earth.

6 [b] In his days Judah shall be saved, and Israel shall dwell safely: and this is his name whereby he shall be called, [c] THE LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS.[*]

7 Therefore, behold, [d] the days come, saith the LORD, that they shall no more say, The LORD liveth, which brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt;

8 But, The LORD liveth, which brought up and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all countries[†] whither I had driven them; and they shall [e] dwell in their own land.

9 ¶ [f] Mine heart within me is broken because of the prophets; all my bones shake: I am like a drunken man, and like a man whom wine hath overcome, because of the LORD, and because of the words of his holiness.

10 [g] For the land is full of adulterers; for because of [‡] swearing[§] the land mourneth; [h] the pleasant places of the wilderness are dried up, and their [i] course is evil, and their force is not right.

11 [j] For both prophet and priest are profane; yea, in my house have I found their wickedness, saith the LORD.

12 Wherefore [k] their ways shall be unto them as slippery ways in the darkness; they shall be driven on, and fall therein: for [l] I will bring evil upon them, even the year [‖] of their visitation, saith the LORD.

13 And I have seen [*] [†] folly in the prophets of Samaria: they prophesied in Baal, and caused my people Israel to err.

14 I have seen also in the prophets of Jerusalem [‡] an horrible thing: they commit adultery, and walk in lies: they strengthen also the hands of evil-doers, [§] that none doth return from his wickedness: they are all of them unto me as Sodom, and the inhabitants thereof as Gomorrah.

15 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts concerning the prophets, Behold, I will feed them with wormwood, and make them drink the water of gall: for from the prophets of Jerusalem is [¶] profaneness gone forth into all the land.

16 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, [m] Hearken not unto the words of the prophets that prophesy unto you: they make you vain:[*] they speak a vision of their own heart, and not out of the mouth of the LORD.

17 They say still unto them that despise me, The LORD hath said, Ye shall have peace; and they say unto every one that walketh after the [n] imagination of his own heart, No evil shall come upon you.

18 For who hath stood in the [*] counsel of the LORD, and hath perceived and heard his word? who hath marked his word,[†] and heard it?

19 Behold, [o] a whirlwind of the LORD is gone forth in fury, even a grievous whirlwind; it shall fall grievously upon the head of the wicked.

20 The anger of the LORD shall not return, until he have executed, and till he have performed the thoughts of his heart: [p] in the latter days[‡] ye shall consider it perfectly.

21 I have not sent these prophets, yet they ran; I have not spoken to them, yet they prophesied.

22 But [q] if they had stood in my counsel, and had caused my people to hear my words, then they should have turned them from their evil way, and from the evil of their doings.

23 [r] Am I a God at hand,[§] saith the LORD, and not a God afar off?

24 [*] Can any hide himself in secret places that I shall not see him? saith the LORD. Do not I fill heaven and earth? saith the LORD.

25 [t] I have heard what the prophets said, that prophesy lies in my name, saying, I have dreamed, I have dreamed.

26 [u] How long shall this be in the heart of the prophets that prophesy lies? yea, they are prophets of the deceit of their own heart;

27 [x] Which think to cause my people to forget my name by their dreams, which they tell every man to his neighbour, as their fathers have forgotten my name for Baal.

28 The prophet [‖] that hath a dream, let him tell a dream; [*] and he that hath my word, let him speak my word faithfully: what is the chaff to the wheat?[†] saith the LORD.

29 [y] Is not my word like as a fire? saith the LORD, and like a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces?

30 Therefore, behold, [z] I am against the prophets, saith the LORD, that steal[‡] my words every one from his neighbour.

31 Behold, I am against the prophets, saith the LORD, [a] that use their tongues, and say, He saith.

32 Behold, I am against them that prophesy false dreams, saith the LORD, and do tell them, and cause my people to err by their lies, and by † The prophecy is here of Israel generally, and their gathering from "all countries." Now the restoration by Zerubbabel, &c., was of little more than a part of the tribes of Judah, Benjamin, and Levi, (Ezra 1. 5. Neh. 11. 4), amounting, in all, to 42,360. (Ezra 2. 64.) It follows that this prophecy, however it commenced typically, yet remains to be fulfilled; and the Lord will accomplish his purpose, and verify all his promises, as he has realised his judgments.—ED.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The emblem of good and bad figs, showing the restoration of those that were in captivity, and the destruction of Zedekiah and his adherents.

A. M. cir. 3405.
B. C. cir. 599.

THE LORD showed me, and, behold, two baskets of figs were set before the temple of the LORD, after that Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon had carried away captive Jeconiah the son of Jehoiakim king of Judah, and the princes of Judah, with the carpenters and smiths,* from Jerusalem, and had brought them to Babylon.

* Carpenters and smiths.—He had enslaved such artisans in particular, probably because they were most required in his dominions, for the work "of that great Babylon which he built," (Dan. 4. 30.) and partly, because by their removal, he might render the formation of arms for rebellion more difficult.—ED.

2 [a] One basket had very good figs, even like the figs that are first ripe: and the other basket had very naughty figs, which could not be eaten, * they were so bad.

3 Then said the LORD unto me, [b] What seest thou, Jeremiah? and I said, Figs: the good figs, very good; and the evil, very evil, that cannot be eaten, they are so evil.

4 ¶ Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

5 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, Like these good figs, [c] so will I acknowledge † them ‡ that are carried away captive of Judah, whom I have sent out of this place into the land of the Chaldeans [d] for their good.

6 For [e] I will set mine eyes upon them for good, and [f] I will bring them again to this land: and I will build them, and not pull them down; and I will plant them, and not pluck them up.

7 And I will give them an heart to know me, that I am the LORD; and they shall be my people, and I will be their God: for they shall return unto me with their [g] whole heart.

8 ¶ And as the evil figs, which cannot be eaten, they are so evil; surely thus saith the LORD, So will I give Zedekiah the king of Judah, and his princes, and the residue of Jerusalem that remain in this land, and them that [h] dwell in the land of Egypt;

9 And I will deliver them ‖ to be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth for their hurt, to be a reproach and a proverb, a taunt and a curse, in all places whither I shall drive them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIII.—At their own infinite hazard, rulers neglect to execute their office to the honour of God and the welfare of his people. But though they should not, he will at last see to these ends. And often he mercifully gathers his people, after he has wrathfully cut off their rulers. The church's peace, happiness, and honour, are not founded in the external pomp of her rulers, but in having Jesus Christ as her Prophet, Priest, and King. And his spiritual deliverances are more remarkable than the temporal ones granted to the Jewish nation. That sinners dishonour God, and ruin themselves, are very grievous considerations to gracious souls. But no guilt is so aggravated as that of profane clergymen. And nothing so imboldens and hardens sinners, as when teachers, by their example or doctrine, encourage them in wickedness. No plague is more dangerous than clergymen, who intrude into their office by the influence of patrons or church rulers, without any commission from Christ, or who preach another gospel, as if men's own works, however insignificant, could recommend them to the favour of God. It tends to render men quite irreligious and atheistical. And no preachers are so confident of their own abilities as evil and erroneous ones. If God call men to the ministry, he will not only qualify them for it, but give them some success in it. And while profane ministers ought to be detested by all, as the very offscourings of mankind, it is infinitely dangerous to sport with, or make by-words of, any part of the scripture. God will honour and magnify his own word in the ruin of the mockers and perverters of it.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIV.—Greatly mysterious are the ways of God's providence. The most afflictive are often the most useful. The same dispensation is to some a blessing, and to others a ruinous plague. And all ought to be taken as out of God's own hand. Exact is his knowledge of, and care for, his people in the worst of times. It is he who, by his almighty grace, must renew our heart, and draw us to himself, as well as receive us with open arms to his favour, and to the enjoyment of all the privileges of his people. But, alas! what vengeance, in time and eternity, must await impenitent transgressors! And when some are signally punished, others should learn to avoid their wickedness.

2 The which Jeremiah the prophet spake unto all the people of Judah, and to all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, saying,

3 From the thirteenth year of Josiah the son of Amon king of Judah, even unto this day, (that is the three and twentieth year,) [a]the word of the LORD hath come unto me, and I have spoken unto you, rising early and speaking; but ye have not hearkened.

4 And the LORD hath sent unto you all his servants[†] the prophets, rising early and sending them; but ye have not hearkened, nor inclined your ear to hear.

5 They said, Turn ye again now every one from his evil way, and from the evil of your doings, and dwell in the land that the LORD hath given unto you and to your fathers [a]for ever and ever:

6 And go not after other gods to serve them, and to worship them, and provoke me not to anger with the works of your hands; and I will do you no hurt.

7 Yet ye have not hearkened unto me, saith the LORD; that ye might provoke me to anger with the works of your hands to your own hurt.

8 ¶ Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, Because ye have not heard my words,

9 Behold, I will send and take all the families of the north, saith the LORD, and Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon, my servant,[‡] and will bring them against this land, and against the inhabitants thereof, and against all these nations round about, and will utterly destroy them, and make them an astonishment, and an hissing, and perpetual desolations.[§]

10 Moreover, [‖]I will take from them the voice of mirth, and the voice of gladness, the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride, the sound of the millstones, and the light of the candle.

11 And this whole land shall be a desolation, and an astonishment; and these nations shall serve the king of Babylon [b]seventy[*] years.

12 ¶ And it shall come to pass, when seventy years are accomplished, that I will [†]punish the king of Babylon, and that nation, saith the LORD, for their iniquity, and the land of the Chaldeans, and will make it [c]perpetual desolations.[‡]

13 And I will bring upon that land all my words which I have pronounced against it, even all that is written in this book, which Jeremiah hath prophesied against all the nations.

14 For many nations[§] and great kings[‖] shall serve themselves of them[*] also: and I will recompense them according to their deeds, and according to the works of their own hands.

15 ¶ For thus saith the LORD God of Israel unto me, Take the wine-cup of this fury at my hand, and cause all the nations, to whom I send thee, to drink[*] it.

16 And they shall drink, [d]and be moved, and be mad, because of the sword that I will send among them.

17 Then took I the cup[†] at the LORD's hand, and made all the nations to drink,[‡] unto whom the LORD had sent me:

18 To wit, Jerusalem, and the cities of Judah, and the kings thereof, and the princes thereof, to make them a desolation, an astonishment, an hissing, and a curse; as it is this day;[§]

19 Pharaoh king of Egypt, and his servants, and his princes, and all his people;

21 Edom, and Moab, and the children of Ammon,

22 And all the kings of Tyrus, and all the kings of Zidon, and the kings of the [†]isles which are beyond the sea,

23 Dedan, and Tema, and Buz, and all [‡]that are in the utmost corners,[‡]

24 And all the kings of Arabia, and all the kings of the mingled people that dwell in the desert,

25 And all the kings of Zimri, and all the kings of [g]Elam, and all the kings of the Medes, 26 And all the kings of the north, far and near, one with another, and all the kingdoms of the world,[§] which are upon the face of the earth; and the king of [h]Sheshach[‖] shall drink after them.

27 Therefore thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Drink ye, and be drunken, and spue, and fall, and rise no more, because of the sword which I will send among you.

28 And it shall be, if they refuse[*] to take the cup at thine hand to drink, then shalt thou say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Ye shall certainly drink.

29 For, lo, I begin to bring evil on the city [†]which is called by my name, and should ye be utterly unpunished?[‡] Ye shall not be unpunished: for I will call for a sword upon all the inhabitants of the earth, saith the LORD of hosts.

30 Therefore prophesy thou against them all these words, and say unto them, The LORD shall [‖]roar[§] from on high, and utter his voice from his holy habitation; he shall mightily roar upon his habitation; he shall give a shout,[‖] as they that tread the grapes, against all the inhabitants of the earth.

Still both he, and every potentate, is the providential servant of the Most High, fulfilling his purposes of mercy or judgment on the nations they govern or destroy.—Ed.

Here it may be understood as limited to continuation till "the (prophetic) times of the restitution of all things," (Acts 3. 21); or, it may be taken absolutely and without limit; for the nations whom God did "utterly destroy," do now stand, and will continue to stand, in the page of history, as "perpetual" monuments of the "desolations" occasioned by sin. 7 So [k] the priests, and the prophets, and all the people, heard Jeremiah speaking these words in the house of the LORD.

8 ¶ Now it came to pass, when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking all that the LORD had commanded him to speak unto all the people, that [l] the priests, and the prophets, and all the people, took him, saying, Thou shalt surely die.

9 Why hast thou prophesied in the name of the LORD, saying, This house shall be like Shiloh, and this city shall be desolate without an inhabitant? And all the people were gathered against Jeremiah [m] in the house of the LORD.

10 ¶ When the princes of Judah heard these things, then they came up from the king's house unto the house of the LORD, and sat down ‡ in the entry of the new gate of the LORD's house.

15 But know ye for certain, that if ye put me to death, [r] ye shall surely bring innocent blood upon yourselves, and upon this city, and upon the inhabitants thereof: for of a truth the LORD hath sent me unto you, to speak all these words in your ears.‖

16 ¶ [s] Then said [t] the princes and all the people unto the priests and to the prophets, This man is not worthy to die: for he hath spoken to us in the name of the LORD our God.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXV.—God's words, which concern all, ought to be publicly proclaimed. He keeps an exact account of every circumstance relative to our enjoyment and improvement of the means of grace. And they who declare his messages ought to be earnest and diligent in delivering them, that they may at least be free from the blood of all men; and all of them should insist upon the same leading truths of the gospel. But if God's messengers of peace be contemned, his messengers of wrath will soon follow, and make dreadful work. God does not usually strike without warning; but if we will not hear, we must perish. When judgment begins at the house of God, it ordinarily makes fearful and overturning work among all, even the mightiest nations around, before it cease. That God, to whom all nations are accountable, can easily, by a small sip of his unbounded wrath, by a stroke of his sword, or the roaring of his voice, terrify, perplex, and destroy them, however numerous, powerful, or secure. And they who have plagued their neighbours, and especially the people of God, shall have their fill of vexation and misery at last.—Men, who are ambitious of power, generally become troublers and destroyers to the world around. But great earthly pomp and power are of very uncertain, and often of very short continuance. And no sinners can either withstand or outrun the judgments of God. When wars are once kindled, the higher men are, the more is their danger; and even many who had lived harmlessly, share in the hardships. But if the ravages of war be so tremendous, what infinitely more fearful work must the unrestrained fury of the almighty God make in hell for ever and ever! Let then wars and troubles, however distant, make me

18 [x] Micah the Morasthite prophesied in the days of Hezekiah king of Judah, and spake to all the people of Judah, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, [y] Zion shall be ploughed like a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and [z] the mountain of the house as [a] the high places of a forest.

20 And there was also a man that prophesied in the name of the LORD, Urijah the son of Shemaiah of [d] Kirjath-jearim, who prophesied against this city and against this land according to all the words of Jeremiah:

21 And when Jehoiakim the king, with all his mighty men, and all the princes, heard his words, [e] the king sought to put him to death: but when Urijah heard it, he was afraid, and [f] fled, and went into Egypt:

Of these desires and aversions God avails himself that he may illustrate and enforce the doctrine of divine foreknowledge and providential retribution—two doctrines that idolatrous nations totally disbelieve, and to which Christian nations too little attend. The one should lead to a careful study of prophecy, and observation of "the signs of the times;" the other, to the conformity of all political principles and practices with the immutable laws of divine truth, justice, and mercy.—ED.

to hear and fear, and embrace his new covenant of peace offered in the gospel, that I may at last enter into that peaceful habitation, into which no fire or sword, no violence or destruction, can ever enter.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVI.—God patiently waits, and earnestly calls men to repentance. The dispensations of his providence are just, and even similar. And if men will not be subject to his command, they must be subjected to his curse, and the execution of it. If they will not be warned, they must be condemned. Profane clergymen never fail to hate and persecute such as are faithful for their kind warnings. But to be bold in preaching, and patient in suffering, is truly worthy of a minister of Christ. And no damage or death ought to make them in the least recede from God's truth. If they be faithful, it is at their infinite peril who persecute and murder them. It is proper that men should deter themselves, or others, from sin, by the irreparable mischief it will do to our souls. And it is the wisdom of the greatest to regard the admonitions of JEHOVAH. More justice may be expected from profligate civil judges than from abandoned clergy. And yet many wicked princes eagerly draw down the vengeance of God upon their heads, by the persecution of their faithful admonishers. But it is beyond their power to cut off God's ministers or worshippers till their testimony be finished: and whenever it pleases God, he can, in the very worst of times, raise up protectors to his servants. Let us then always attend to our duty, and commit our safety to God, who has the hearts of all men in his hand, and can raise us up friends in the day of trial where we least expected to find them.

CHAP. XXVII.—Ver. 7. They served Nebuchadnezzar, and Evil-merodach his son, and Belshazzar his grandson: and then came the time fixed by God for the overthrow of the Chaldean monarchy, when the Medes, Persians, and their allies, reduced it, and rendered the Chaldeans tributaries and slaves.

These were uniformly the rocks upon which Israel suffered shipwreck, their kings especially. (See 1 Kin. 22. 6—40.) Admitting JEHOVAH's foreknowledge, they did not "try the spirits," that pretended to speak in his name. Loving idols and sins, they listened to the prophets that flattered their propensities, and counted those their enemies who were bold enough to tell them the truth. —ED.

‡ The priests are exhorted by reference to the vessels of the sanctuary, the lavers, the seething pots, the basins, the censers, &c. These being the constant objects of their care, and probably of their pride, for they were both costly and splendid, are employed partly as the tests of the truth of Jeremiah, and the falsehood of his opponents; but chiefly to lead to the subject of intercessory prayer, which ever implies faith in God, as the answerer of prayer, together with brotherly sympathy and love.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVII.—The whole earth is the Lord's, and he may dispose of it as he pleases. And since he puts little value upon it, he often gives most of it to the wicked; and soon he will call them to account for their use of his gifts. Civil dominion is far from being founded on either the reality or the appearance of saving grace. And they, who have no shadow of a right to eternal life, may have a justifiable right to temporal enjoyments. They who in any respect serve God, never lose by his service: and if we will not serve our Maker and Preserver, it is but just that we be forced to serve our enemies. It is very unsafe to struggle against his providence; for when he judges, he will overcome. When his judgments are abroad in the earth, we ought not to seek great things for ourselves, but to be thankful for little. And if his judgments are begun, it is better to alleviate the burden by submission, than to make it heavier by perverseness. Yea, though we should never see the deliverance of God's church, we ought never to despair of it: he will at last, in wrath, remember mercy. Meanwhile, let us

3 By the hand of Elasah the son of [d] Shaphan, and [e] Gemariah the son of Hilkiah, (whom Zedekiah king of Judah [f] sent unto Babylon to Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon,) saying,

5 [h] Build ye houses, and dwell in them; and plant gardens, and eat the fruit of them:

6 [i] Take ye wives, and beget sons and daughters; [k] and take wives for your sons, and give your daughters to husbands, that they may bear sons and daughters; that ye may be increased there, and not diminished.

7 And [l] seek the peace [§] of the city whither I have caused you to be carried away captives, and pray unto the LORD for it: for in the peace thereof shall ye have peace.

8 ¶ For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, [m] Let not your prophets and your diviners, that be in the midst of you, deceive you, neither hearken to your dreams which ye cause to be dreamed.

detest flattering clergy. Incapable of interceding for their welfare, these hurry nations and churches into utter destruction, and perish in misery, along with those whom they have deceived.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVIII.—False teachers impudently dare to preach their other gospel, and speak lies in God's name. But what is the chaff to the wheat? Not majesty of style, not the inculcating of faith or repentance, but flattering hints of prosperity in sin, mark their discourses. Alas! how strangely were the Jews besotted, who, contrary to manifold warnings, believed such impostors as flattered them to their ruin! But falsehood, advanced with solemnity and confidence, often gains regard. And many dare to affirm that to be God's truth, which shortly will be found a lie, to their own damnation. But the faithful servants of God must not strive: and if they are reviled, they must not revile again. God will, in his due time, vindicate their honour, and disgrace and punish their opposers. And none may expect heavier judgments than they who hinder the success of God's word, and seek to prejudice men's minds against the faithful

2 Thus speaketh the LORD God of Israel, saying, Write thee all the words that I have spoken unto thee in a book.

3 For, lo, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will bring again the captivity of my people Israel and Judah,* saith the LORD; and I will cause them to return to the land that I gave to their fathers, and they shall possess it.

4 ¶ And these are the words that the LORD spake concerning Israel, and concerning Judah.

5 For thus saith the LORD, We have heard a voice of trembling, † of fear, and not of peace.

6 Ask ye now, and see whether ‡ a man doth travail with child? wherefore do I see every man with his hands on his loins, [b] as a woman in travail,§ and all faces are turned into paleness?

7 Alas! for that day is great,‖ so that none is like it: it is even the time of Jacob's trouble;* but he shall be saved out of it.

8 For it shall come to pass in that day, saith the LORD of hosts, that I will break his yoke from off thy neck,† and will burst thy bonds, and strangers shall no more serve themselves‡ of him:

9 [c] But they shall serve the LORD their God, and David§ their king, whom I will raise up unto them.

10 ¶ Therefore fear thou not, O my servant Jacob, saith the LORD, neither be dismayed, O Israel: for, lo, I will save thee from afar, and thy seed from the land of their captivity; and Jacob shall return, and shall be in rest, and be quiet, and none shall make him afraid.

11 For I am with thee, saith the LORD, to save thee: though I make a full end‖ of all nations whither I have scattered thee, yet will I not make a full end of thee; but I will correct thee in measure, and will not leave thee altogether unpunished.

12 For thus saith the LORD, Thy bruise is incurable, and thy wound is grievous.

13 [d] There is none to plead thy cause, * that thou mayest be bound up: thou hast no healing medicines.

14 All thy lovers have forgotten thee; they seek thee not: for I have wounded thee with the wound of an enemy, with the chastisement of a cruel one, for the multitude of thine iniquity; because thy sins were increased.

* The promise is distinctly made both to Israel, or the ten tribes that separated from Rehoboam, and Judah, or the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, including most of the tribe of Levi. Now, though Judah was restored under Zerubbabel and his friends, Israel, or the ten tribes, never were. Indeed, their present residence is either totally unknown, or matter of continued question. Some believe them to be the modern Affghans, others, the American Indians, others the Nestorian Christians in the neighbourhood of the Caspian Sea, &c. But wherever they may be, they are yet to "return and possess the land" that God gave to their fathers.—ED.

‖ Not necessarily an extermination of persons, but "a full end" of their power and glory. This event has been exemplified in the Assyrian, Medo-Persian, Grecian, and Roman empires. And strange as it may appear, the descendants of Jacob possess at this moment a name and visible being, and exercise a power in the financial, and, by consequence, in the political affairs of the world, possessed by no representative of those mighty and extinct monarchies. So literally verified is this prophecy, that, while the mightiest empires have been dissolved and come to "a full end,' a people comparatively few and feeble, retain their name, their laws, their identity, nay, their power; and shadow out, even in their dispersion, the glory that awaits them when "Jacob shall return and be in rest."—ED.

ministers of it. At last every one who ran into sacred offices, unsent, or who preached his own inventions instead of the truths of Christ, shall reap the due reward of his wickedness.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIX.—Letters of seasonable comfort or advice are a service to God and his church. Though God correct his people, he never breaks his covenant with them. And the view of God as our God, and the appointer of our troubles, tends greatly to render us patient under them. In every condition we ought to make the best of what we have, though we should be far from having all we wish. They who behave meekly and quietly often meet with better treatment from strangers than they expected. And whatever hardships we have to endure in a country, we should pray for its welfare. When people love to be deceived, they readily find flatterers to their ruin. But they who trust the promises of God shall never be disappointed. No difficulties can hinder the execution of his purposes, or fulfilment of his promises, beyond the due time. And his promises should excite, not supersede, our earnest prayers. By prayer we go forth to meet the accomplishment of promises. And it is when our supplications are fervent, cordial, and persevering, that we may expect gracious returns. Alas! how often men mistake the messengers, the preachers, and prophets of Satan, for those of Jesus Christ, and credit them as such! But they who flatter men in sin are undoubtedly false prophets. And if men make themselves vile by their sins, God, in just judgment, will render them vile in their sufferings. If evil clergymen indulge themselves in secret wickedness, let them not wonder if God render them base before all the people on earth, and eternally damned in hell. They who would be faithful to souls, may expect to be treated by their unfaithful brethren as deceivers or madmen: persecuting zeal, under pretence of regard to the honour of God, will extend its murderous influence to the utmost; and very often church power is employed in tormenting her best friends. But God often renders those friendly

When Samaria became the capital of the ten tribes, it also became the chief seat of idolatry (Hos. 8. 5, 6.); and, though afterwards partially converted to the true God (2 Kin. 17. 28—41.), there still remained a grievous antipathy between the Jews and Samaritans (John 4. 9.), of which the prophet now foretells the happy end.—Ko.

to his faithful servants, of whom it could scarcely have been expected; while their persecutors are quickly overwhelmed with ruin; and they that would not wait the due season of God's favours, lose their share in them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXX.—God's promises ought to be carefully preserved, propagated, considered, and improved. Sin often makes for men a hell upon earth. Very sore trials and miseries often precede the most remarkable deliverances. And diligence in God's service is the proper fruit of his salvations. But there is no true serving of him, but in receiving and serving his Son Jesus Christ, our mystical David. No profession, however plausible, can secure impunity in sin. Nay, though our heaviest afflictions are far lighter than our sins deserved, yet the sins of professors, and even of saints, are often most sharply corrected. But it is only incurable lusts that make incurable troubles. Let God's church be ever so fearfully deserted and despised, he will in due time deliver her. Let therefore her true children give no way to disquieting fears or hopeless sorrows. Never is her deliverance nearer than when all refuges but God have entirely failed her, and all her allies and friends appear disposed to hurt her. If Jesus rise up to the prey, he will work great things for her deliverance. And to his person, incarnation, covenant engagements, and fulfilment of them, ought we to look through all temporal or spiritual blessings. And while he destroys his and our enemies, his kindness and relations to, or work for us, ought to engage our hearts in his worship and service.

CHAP. XXXI.—Ver. 1—6. I will manifest myself to the Hebrew tribes and gospel church as their God, and will cause them to acknowledge, worship, and serve me, as my people; as I formerly did in the Arabian desert, on the way to Canaan, when first I espoused the Israelites to myself as my peculiar people, and bestowed on them my ordinances and miraculous favours, after I had delivered them from the murderous cruelty of Pharaoh and of the Amalekites: for that ancient love manifested to them is neither ceased nor weakened. I will yet establish your government in both church and state; and ye shall have great ground of rejoicing, on account of both temporal and spiritual benefits. And ministers and others shall stir up their companions to join the church and attend the ordinances of God. 7—9. For, to the infinite joy and comfort of all the friends of the Jews, or of the gospel church, I will marvellously deliver them, and conduct them, however unfit in themselves, to their own land, or to the new covenant state; render them penitent and prayerful, and in the most affectionate manner supply them with everything necessary. 10—14. that scattered Israel will [h]gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock.

11 For the LORD [i]hath redeemed Jacob, and ransomed him from the hand of him that was stronger than he.

12 [k]Therefore they shall come and sing in the height of Zion, and shall flow together to the goodness of the LORD, for wheat, and for wine, and for oil, and for the young of the flock and of the herd: and [l]their souls shall be as a watered garden; and they [m]shall not sorrow* any more at all.

13 [n]Then shall the virgin rejoice in the dance, both young men and old together: [o]for I will turn their mourning into joy, and will comfort them, and make them rejoice from their sorrow.

14 And [p]I will satiate the soul of the priests with fatness,† and my people shall be satisfied with my goodness, saith the LORD.

15 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, [q]A voice was heard in Ramah, lamentation, and bitter weeping; Rachel weeping for her children, refused to be comforted for her children, because they [r]were not.‡

16 Thus saith the LORD, [s]Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears: [t]for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the LORD; and [u]they shall come again from the land of the enemy.

17 [x]And there is hope in thine end, saith the LORD, that thy children shall come again to their own border.

18 ¶ I have surely heard [y]Ephraim [z]bemoaning himself thus, [a]Thou hast chastised me, and I was chastised, as a bullock unaccustomed to the yoke: [b]turn thou me, and I shall be turned; for thou art the LORD my God.

19 Surely [c]after that I was turned, I repented; and after that I was instructed, I smote upon my thigh: I was ashamed, yea, even confounded, because I did bear the reproach of my youth.

20 [d]Is Ephraim my dear son? is he a pleasant child? for since I spake against him, I do earnestly remember him still: therefore my bowels [§]are troubled for him; [e]I will surely have mercy upon him, saith the LORD.

21 [f]Set thee up way-marks, make thee high heaps: set thine heart toward the highway, even the way which thou wentest: [g]turn again, O virgin of Israel, turn again to these thy cities.

‡ This prediction is interpreted by the Evangelist of the massacre of the children at Bethlehem by Herod (Mat. 2. 17, 18), at which time it was literally fulfilled. For the prophet does not figuratively represent Rachel, the wife of Jacob, as arising from her grave to lament, but every bereaved mother as a Rachel, that is, as a "sheep" (for so the word signifies) bleating after her lamb when seized by the ravenous and relentless wolf. No doubt the prediction had been previously fulfilled by Nebuzaradan (Jer. 40. 1), but the prediction did not relate to one event, but embraced a whole series of events, in every one of which it is equally exemplified and fulfilled.—ED.

22 ¶ How long wilt thou go about, O thou [h]backsliding daughter? for the LORD hath created a new thing in the earth, A woman shall compass a man.*

23 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, [i]As yet† they shall use this speech in the land of Judah, and in the cities thereof, when I shall bring again their captivity, The LORD bless thee, O habitation of justice, and mountain of holiness.

24 And [k]there shall dwell in Judah itself, and in all the cities thereof together, husbandmen, and they that go forth with flocks.

25 For [l]I have satiated the weary soul, and I have replenished every sorrowful soul.

26 Upon this [m]I awaked, and beheld; and my sleep was sweet unto me.‡

27 ¶ Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I [n]will sow the house of Israel, and the house of Judah, with the seed of man, and with the seed of beast.§

28 And it shall come to pass, that like as I have watched over them, to pluck up, and to break down, and to throw down, and to destroy, and to afflict; [o]so will I watch over them, to build, and to plant, saith the LORD.

29 ¶ In those days they shall say no more, [p]The fathers have eaten a sour grape, and the children's teeth are set on edge.

30 But [q]every one shall die for his own iniquity: every man that eateth the sour grape, his teeth shall be set on edge.

31 ¶ Behold, the [r]days come, saith the LORD, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah:

32 Not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that [s]I took them by the hand, to bring them out of the land of Egypt; which my covenant they brake, [t]although I was an husband unto them, saith the LORD:

33 But this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel; After those days, saith the LORD, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; [u]and will be their God, and they shall be my people.

34 And they shall teach no more every man [||]his neighbour, and every man his brother, saying, [x]Know the LORD: for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest shall know and be affected with the marvellous salvation, temporal and spiritual, which I will work for them; they themselves shall, with great joy, repair to the temple and the ordinances of the gospel, in order to praise me for my diversified kindness. Universal shall be the joy and prosperity of all ranks: ministers and people shall be plentifully supplied, and be mutual blessings one to another. 15—17. The terrible mourning occasioned by the captivity in Babylon, the slaughter of the infants at Bethlehem, or rejection of the Jewish nation, shall be turned into joy, by the restoration of the Benjamites and other Jews, and by the accession of multitudes to the gospel church. 18—20. Deeply penitent for their sins, and earnestly desirous of spiritual blessings, shall the Jews return from Babylon, and especially from their present dispersion; and graciously will I receive them into favour, and abundantly bless them. 21—26. Return with the utmost care and despatch to your country, and erect marks by the way to direct such as may follow you: yea, though for your sinful apostasies ye have been long tossed to and fro, prepare for a return to your country, where the Messiah shall be born: and after your return, great shall be your reformation in righteousness and holiness; numerous shall be your flocks of cattle, and as numerous your worshippers of God; for I will refresh and supply you with every good thing.—Upon this Jeremiah awaked, and was delighted with the comfortable revelations which had been made to him in his dream or vision. 27—30. I will exceedingly multiply themselves and their cattle; and will manifest myself as eager to restore and bless them as ever I seemed to destroy them. Nor shall they have any more reason to complain that they are punished for their fathers' iniquities, but every one shall suffer for his own. 31—34. 36 [b] If those ordinances* depart from before me, saith the LORD, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me for ever.

2 For then the king of Babylon's army besieged Jerusalem: [b] and Jeremiah the prophet was shut up [c] in the court of the prison, which was in the king of Judah's house.

3 For [d] Zedekiah king of Judah had shut him up, saying, [e] Wherefore dost thou prophesy and say, Thus saith the LORD, [f] Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall take it;

5 And he shall lead Zedekiah to Babylon, and there shall he be until [h] I visit him, saith the LORD: [i] though ye fight with the Chaldeans, ye shall not prosper?

6 ¶ And Jeremiah said, The word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

7 Behold, Hanameel the son of Shallum thine uncle shall come unto thee, saying, Buy thee my field that is in [k] Anathoth: for the right of redemption* is thine to buy it.

8 So Hanameel mine uncle's son came to me in the court of the prison, according to the word of the LORD, and said unto me, Buy my field, I pray thee, that is in Anathoth, which is in the country of Benjamin: for the right of inheritance is thine, and the redemption is thine; buy it for thyself. [l] Then I knew that this was the word of the LORD.

9 And I bought the field of Hanameel my uncle's son, that was in Anathoth, and weighed him the money, even † seventeen shekels of silver.

10 And I ‡ subscribed the evidence, and sealed it, and took witnesses, and weighed him the money in the balances.§

11 So I took the evidence of the purchase, both that which was sealed [m] according to the law and custom, and that which was open:

12 And I gave the evidence of the purchase unto [n] Baruch the son of Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, in the sight of Hanameel mine uncle's son, and in the presence of the witnesses that subscribed the book of the purchase, before all the Jews that sat in the court of the prison.

13 ¶ And I charged Baruch before them, saying,

If, therefore, a man, through poverty, or intending to emigrate, was obliged to sell his property, he must offer it to his next of kin; and, even though he should have sold to another, this kinsman, if absent at the time of sale, might, on his return, claim the land at its value. § One kind of money was in uncoined gold or silver ingots, another in thin rolls that could be easily cut, and both required to be weighed. But there is no reason to conclude that all Jewish money was, at this period, uncoined; for the arts had long ago made great progress in the East. The weighing is rather indicative of a period of fraudulence which required constant watchfulness against minute deductions from the value of the coin.—Ko.

‖ The idea of the prophet seems to have been akin to the modern practice of enclosing written documents in glass bottles, either hermetically sealed, or so immersed in plaster as to exclude the air and moisture, and thus placing them in the foundations of public buildings with a view to their probable discovery after "many days." As the transaction has all the appearance of a reality (comp. ver. 7 and 9), and not of a vision, it is not beyond the bounds even of ordinary probability, to speculate upon the future discovery of this very document, which, as the earliest deed of conveyance upon record, would certainly rank among the chief curiosities of the world, independent of its emblematic and evidential connexion with prophecy.—Ko.

gracious form than I did at Sinai, and which they have so often transgressed by their idolatry and other wickedness, notwithstanding my kindness to them. But freely bestowing myself upon them as their God, adopting them as my people, and forgiving all their iniquities, I will clearly enlighten the minds of multitudes in the knowledge of the gospel, and renew their hearts, and dispose them to a holy and cheerful obedience to all my commandments.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXI.—Thrice happy are the families which have God for their God! Remembrance of our own and the church's former deliverances is of great use to prevent despondency under long and sore troubles. But all our comfort and holiness must flow from God's everlasting love, fixed on and exercised towards us. It is pleasant when those, that were chief rebels against God, become his most zealous subjects and servants. But if he build up his church, and restore to us the ordinances of his grace, all must issue to the praise of his glory. And praises to him for mercies bestowed must be attended with supplications for what he has promised. When he intends to deliver, no distance, no weakness, no paucity, no grief, no perilous passage, can stop or even retard, his designs. If he calls us to follow him, he will either find or make us a plain way; nor will he allow us to want any necessary supply. Great is the goodness of God observable in common providences, but especially in new covenant blessings. Thrice happy are they, whose souls are richly supplied by the Holy Ghost from the all-containing fulness of God, and who taste his goodness in everything they receive. It is not the death, but the justly apprehended damnation, of our relations, that should disquiet us; and solid hopes of the happy issue of troubles will make us bear them patiently. True repentance is a deep and thorough work; and renders a sinner very loathsome and wicked in his own view. Nor do sins of youth appear small under its influence. But all turning to God must be produced by his own Spirit in us; who introduces his grace, by making us to perceive gospel truths. And God is ever ready to give his most rebellious children a kind reception when penitent. His mercy cannot forbear working for them while he frowns; and at last it must break forth in unnumbered and everlasting blessings. But what an encouragement to faith and repentance is the incarnation and work of our Redeemer!—Thrice happy are societies and souls, where righteousness towards

16 ¶ Now, when I had delivered the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch the son of Neriah, ᵖ I prayed unto the LORD, saying,

17 Ah Lord GOD! behold, ᵠ thou hast made the heaven and the earth by thy great power and stretched-out arm, and ʳ there is nothing * too hard for thee:

18 Thou showest ˢ loving-kindness unto thousands, and recompensest the iniquity of the fathers into the bosom of their children after them: ᵗ The great, the Mighty God, the LORD of hosts, is his name;

19 Great in counsel, and mighty in † work; for thine ᵘ eyes are open upon all the ways of the sons of men, ˣ to give every one according to his ways, and according to the fruit of his doings:

20 ʸ Which hast set signs and wonders in the land of Egypt, even unto this day, and in Israel, and among other men; and hast made thee a name, as at this day;

21 ᶻ And hast brought forth thy people Israel out of the land of Egypt with signs, and with wonders, and with a strong hand, and with a stretched-out arm, and with great terror;

22 ᵃ And hast given them this land, which thou didst swear to their fathers to give them, a land flowing with milk and honey;

23 And they came in, and possessed it; ᵇ but they obeyed not thy voice, neither walked in thy law: they have done nothing ‡ of all that thou commandedst them to do; ᶜ therefore thou hast caused all this evil to come upon them.

24 Behold the ‖ mounts, § they are come unto the city to take it; and ᵈ the city is given into the hand of the Chaldeans that fight against it, because of the sword, and of the famine, and of the pestilence: and what thou hast spoken ᵉ is come to pass; and, behold, thou seest it.

25 And thou hast said unto me, O Lord GOD, Buy thee the field for money, and take witnesses; ᶠ for the city is given into the hand of the Chaldeans.

26 ¶ ᵍ Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying,

27 Behold, I am the LORD, the ʰ God of all flesh: ⁱ is there any thing too hard * for me?

28 Therefore thus saith the LORD, ᵏ Behold, I will give this city into the hand of the Chaldeans, and into the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, and he shall take it:

29 And the Chaldeans, that fight against this city, shall come ˡ and set fire on this city, and burn it, with the houses upon whose roofs they have offered incense unto Baal, and poured out drink-offerings unto other gods, to provoke me * to anger.

30 ᵐ For the children of Israel, and the children of Judah, have only done evil before me from their youth: † for the children of Israel have only provoked me to anger with the work of their hands, saith the LORD.

31 ⁿ For this city hath been to me as ‡ a provocation of mine anger and of my fury, from the day that they built it even unto this day, that I should remove it from before my face,

32 ° Because of all the evil of the children of Israel, and of the children of Judah, which they have done to provoke me to anger, ᵖ they, their kings, their princes, their priests, and their prophets, and the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. §

33 And they have turned unto me the ‖ back, and not the face: ᵠ though I taught them, rising up early and teaching them, yet they have not hearkened to receive instruction.

34 But they ʳ set their abominations in the house, which is called by my name, to defile it.

35 And ˢ they built the high places of Baal, which are in the valley of the son of Hinnom, to cause their sons and their daughters to pass through the fire unto Molech; which I commanded them not, neither came it into my mind, that they should do this abomination, to cause Judah to sin. †

36 ¶ And now ᵗ therefore thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning this city, whereof ye say, it shall be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon by the sword, and by the famine, and by the pestilence; ‡

37 Behold, ᵘ I will gather them out of all countries whither I have driven them in mine anger, and in my fury, and in great wrath; and I will bring them again unto this place, and I will cause them to dwell safely: §

38 ˣ And they shall be my people, and I will be their God:

39 And I will give them one heart, and one way, that they may fear me ‖ for ever, for the good of them, and of their children after them:

40 And I will make an everlasting covenant * with them, that I will not turn away † from them to do them good; but I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me:

41 Yea, ʸ I will rejoice over them to do them good, and I will plant them in this land ᶻ assuredly, with my whole heart, and with my whole soul.

MOREOVER, the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah the second time, while he was yet shut up in the court of the prison, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD, the maker [*] thereof, the LORD that formed it, to establish it, The LORD is his name;

3 Call unto me, and I will answer thee, and show thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not. [†]

4 For thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, concerning the houses of this city, and concerning the houses of the kings of Judah, which are thrown down by the mounts, [‡] and by the sword;

5 They come to fight with the Chaldeans, but it is to fill them with the dead bodies of men, [‖] whom I have slain in mine anger, and in my fury, and for all whose wickedness I have hid my face from this city.

6 Behold, I will bring it health and cure, and I will cure them, [¶] and will reveal unto them the abundance of peace and truth.

7 And I will cause the captivity of Judah and the captivity of Israel to return, and will build them, as at the first.

8 And I will cleanse [*] them from all their iniquity, whereby they have sinned against me; and I will pardon all their iniquities, whereby they have sinned, and whereby they have transgressed against me.

9 And it shall be to me a name of joy, a praise and an honour before all the nations of the earth, which shall hear all the good that I do unto them; and they shall fear and tremble for all the goodness and for all the prosperity that I procure unto it.

10 ¶ Thus saith the LORD, Again there shall be heard in this place, (which [a] ye say shall be desolate without man and without beast, even in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, that are desolate, without man, and without inhabitant, and without beast,[*])

11 [b] The voice of joy, and the voice of gladness; the voice of the bridegroom, and the voice of the bride; the voice of them that shall say, [c] Praise the LORD of hosts; for the LORD is good; for his mercy endureth for ever: [d] and of them that shall bring the sacrifice of praise into the house of the LORD. For [e] I will cause to return the captivity of the land, as at the first, [†] saith the LORD.

12 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts, Again in this place, which is desolate [‡] without man and without beast, and in all the cities thereof, [f] shall be an habitation of shepherds causing their flocks to lie down.

13 [g] In the cities of the mountains, in the cities of the vale, and in the cities of the south, and in the land of Benjamin, and in the places about Jerusalem, and in the cities of Judah, shall the flocks [h] pass again under the hands of him that telleth them, saith the LORD.

14 Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, [i] that I will perform that good thing which I have promised unto the house of Israel, and to the house of Judah.

15 ¶ In those days, and at that time, will I cause the [k] Branch of righteousness to grow up unto David; and he [l] shall execute judgment and righteousness in the land. [‖]

16 In those days [m] shall Judah be saved, and Jerusalem shall dwell safely: and [l] this is the name wherewith she shall be called, [n] The LORD our Righteousness. [*]

17 ¶ For thus saith the LORD, [†] David shall never [o] want a man to sit upon the throne of the house of Israel; [‡]

18 Neither [p] shall the priests the Levites want a man before me to offer burnt-offerings, and to kindle meat-offerings, and to do sacrifice continually. [§]

19 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah, saying, need. And while all things in nature are pregnant with important instructions and comforts, it is holiness, connected with outward privileges, that renders them truly steadfast and durable.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXII.—How obstinately men persist in persecution, and other wickedness, even when the Lord is punishing them for it! No afflictions can drag men from their lusts. By what strange tokens God confirms his own oracles! An exact honesty, prudent discretion, and a firm dependence on the promise and providence of God, ought to meet together in all our civil transactions.—The more honourable views we have of God and his mercies, the more humble and penitent will be our views of our own and others' rebellion against him. And the former experiences of God's people ought to encourage us, even when his providence seems to contradict his promises. When we have God's orders, we have nothing to do but obey, and trust him with the issue. And if we are in the dark concerning his dispensations, we may humbly beg his instructions. No crimes are too horrid for apostate professors to commit, and no judgments too severe to punish them. Deep carnal security ordinarily ends in deep despair: but blessed mornings of deliverance, conversion, and reformation, frequently succeed long and

‡ There is something peculiar in the repeated reference made to Zedekiah's eyes beholding the eyes of the king of Babylon; (see ch. 32. 4.) for after Zedekiah had seen him, the cruel Babylonian, according to a barbarous custom of the East, put out his eyes, bound him in fetters of brass, and carried him away to Babylon. 2 Kin. 25. 7.—ED.

§ Burnings were customary at royal burials (2 Chr. 16. 14.); but whether the body was burnt with the odours, (odoriferous woods and spices, as is common still among the Hindoos,) or whether the odoriferous substances were burnt alone, and the body buried, is matter of question. The Talmudists deny the burning of the bodies, considering it as a heathen, and not a Jewish custom; but, that the Jews did occasionally, at least, burn dead bodies, is certain from 1 Sam. 31. 2. & Amos 6. 10.; that the custom did not continue, if it ever was more than an occasional occurrence, is obvious from the case of Elisha, (2 Kin. 13. 21.), of Lazarus, and of our Lord. 6 Then Jeremiah the prophet [a] spake all these words unto Zedekiah king of Judah in Jerusalem,

7 When the king of Babylon's army fought [b] against Jerusalem, and against all the cities of Judah that were left, against [c] Lachish, and against Azekah: for these defenced cities remained of the cities of Judah.

8 ¶ This is the word that came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, after that the king Zedekiah had made a covenant with all the people which were at Jerusalem, to [d] proclaim liberty unto them;

9 That every man should let his man-servant, and every man his maid-servant, being an Hebrew or an Hebrewess, go free; that none should [e] serve himself of them, to wit, of a Jew his brother.

10 Now when all the [f] princes, and all the people, which had entered into the covenant, heard that every one should let his man-servant and every one his maid-servant go free, that none should serve themselves of them any more; then they obeyed,* and let them go.

11 But [g] afterward† they turned, and caused the servants and the handmaids, whom they had let go free, to return, and brought them into subjection for servants and for handmaids.

12 ¶ Therefore the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

13 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, I made a covenant with your fathers [h] in the day that I brought them forth out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondmen, saying,

14 [i] At the end of seven years let ye go every man his brother an Hebrew, which ‡ hath been sold unto thee; and when he hath served thee six years, thou shalt let him go free from thee: but [k] your fathers hearkened not unto me, neither inclined their ear.

15 And [l] ye were § now turned, and had done right‖ in my sight, in proclaiming liberty every man to his neighbour; and [m] ye had made a covenant before me in the house [n] which is called by my name:

16 But ye turned, and [o] polluted* my name, and caused every man his servant, and every man his handmaid, whom he had set at liberty at their pleasure, to return, and brought them into subjection, to be unto you for servants and for handmaids.

17 Therefore thus saith the LORD, Ye have dark nights of trouble. And unchangeable is their state, stable and permanent their holiness and happiness, and cordial their harmony, who have God for their God, and the performer of all things in and for them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIII.—God's power and goodness in creation and providence should encourage us to believe his promises: and fervent prayer is an excellent means of obtaining divine and marvellous instructions. Dreadful is the ruin procured by sin! but where sin abounded, grace can much more abound. Saving instructions and gracious forgiveness must introduce all other new covenant favours. No case on this side hell is so deplorable but God's mercy can relieve from it. And the greater the salvation which he works, the more will he be glorified in it. Yea, all the abundant joys of his people, after their nights of grief, will tend to his praise. But it is Jesus Christ alone that is the substance of all divine favours, that communicates sweetness, value, and usefulness to them: and notwithstanding all opposition and contempt, his kingdom shall be established and flourish. Not only while Judea lies in desolations, but when the earth, and all the works therein, shall be burnt up, it shall stand and flourish in its perfect and everlasting glory.

not hearkened unto me, in proclaiming liberty every one to his brother, and every man to his neighbour: behold, I proclaim a liberty* for you, saith the LORD, to the sword, to the pestilence, and to the famine; and I will make you [p] to be removed into all the kingdoms of the earth.

18 And I will give the men that have transgressed my covenant, which have not performed the words of the covenant which they had made before me, when they [q] cut the calf in twain, and passed between the parts thereof,

19 The princes of Judah, and the princes of Jerusalem, the [r] eunuchs, and the priests, and all the people of the land, which passed between the parts of the calf,†

20 I will even give them into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of them that seek their life;‡ and their dead bodies shall be for meat unto the fowls of the heaven, and to the beasts of the earth.

21 [s] And Zedekiah king of Judah, and his princes, will I give into the hand of their enemies, and into the hand of them that seek their life, and into the hand of the king of Babylon's army, which are gone up from you.

22 Behold, I will command, saith the LORD, and cause them to return to this city; and they shall fight against it, and take it, and burn it with fire: and I will make the cities of Judah a desolation without an inhabitant.

† The covenant of God with Abram was ratified by dividing certain of the sacrifices, between which the emblems of the divine presence passed (Gen. 15. 10.); whence, to ratify a covenant, is, in the Hebrew, literally to cut a covenant. By this solemn and expressive rite (a rite moreover of divine institution—the only kind of rite God would acknowledge), the covenant of liberty was ratified, and the faithless violators were speedily given up to destruction.—ED.

‡ The Scripture history gives no direct account of the origin of this deadly antipathy of the Babylonians against the Jews. But when it is recollected that Babylon and Egypt were rival kingdoms—commercial rivals in the trade to the East Indies—as well as military rivals in power, and that Israel was under the protection, and in political alliance with Egypt, the cause of the murderous rancour of Babylon becomes plain; for similar causes still continue to produce similar national collisions.—ED.

§ The proper office of a prophet, an apostle, a minister of the word, is to call upon "all men," upon "every man," everywhere to "repent and believe the gospel." The commission of the Lord is never confined to a congregation or a single church; such limitation may be convenient, but is sadly narrow and sectarian. The commission of the Lord accredits his servant to all churches, to every man he meets, to every fellow-subject, to every fellow-creature, to every saint whom he is to comfort, to every sinner whom he is to reprove, and to invite to Jesus for pardon and salvation.—ED.

CHAPTER XXXV.

(1) By the obedience of the Rechabites to the injunction of an earthly father, the prophet is instructed to condemn the disobedience of the Jews to the commands of a heavenly Father: 1—17. (2) A promise to the Rechabites: 18, 19.

A. M. cir. 4398.

THE word which came unto Jeremiah from the LORD, in the days of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, saying,*

2 Go unto the house of the Rechabites,† and speak unto them, and bring them into the house of the LORD, into one of the chambers, and give them wine to drink.

3 Then I took Jaazaniah the son of Jeremiah, the son of Habaziniah, and his brethren, and all his sons, and the whole house of the Rechabites;

4 And I brought them into the house of the LORD, into the chamber of the sons of Hanan the son of Igdaliah, a man of God, which was by the chamber of the princes, which was above the chamber of Maaseiah the son of Shallum, the keeper of the door:

5 And I set before the sons of the house of the Rechabites pots full of wine, and cups; and I said unto them, Drink ye wine.

* All the prophecies from chapter 26. belong to the reign of Zedekiah, and are consequently posterior to this chapter and the following, which, together with chapter 45. were delivered in the days of Jehoiakim. There is, however, no reason to conclude that the prophecies were not arranged with order and design. On the contrary, they appear to be introduced here, to enforce the prophecies against Zedekiah, who had no dread of captivity, by the recollection of the captivity of Jehoiakim, and the spoliation of the temple, 2 Chr. 36. 6, 7. See ch. 36. 1—8.—ED.

† The Rechabites were descended from the Kenites (1 Chr. 2. 55); they were never completely incorporated with the Jews, (ver. 7.), but were treated as friends and allies (1 Sam. 15. 6.). Their rules forbade architecture and husbandry, and confined them to pasturage and tents. They had now, however, fled to Jerusalem to avoid the depredations of the Chaldean army.—ED.

6 But they said, We will drink no wine: for [a] Jonadab the son of Rechab, our father, commanded us, saying, [b] Ye shall drink no wine, neither ye nor your sons for ever:

7 Neither shall ye build house, nor sow seed, nor plant vineyard, nor have any: but all your days ye shall dwell in tents; [c] that ye may live many days in the land where ye be strangers.*

8 Thus have we [d] obeyed the voice of Jonadab the son of Rechab, our father, in all that he hath charged us, to drink no wine all our days, we, our wives, our sons, nor our daughters;

9 Nor to build houses for us to dwell in: [e] neither have we vineyard, nor field, nor seed:

10 But we have dwelt in tents, and have obeyed, and done according to all that Jonadab our father commanded us.†

11 But it came to pass, when [f] Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came up into the land, that we said, [g] Come, and let us go to Jerusalem for fear of the army of the Chaldeans, and for fear of the army of the Syrians: so we dwell at Jerusalem.

12 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah, saying,

13 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Go and tell the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, [h] Will ye not receive instruction to hearken to my words? saith the LORD.

14 The words of Jonadab the son of Rechab, that he commanded his sons not to drink wine, are performed; for unto this day they drink none, but obey their father's commandment: notwithstanding I have spoken unto you, rising early, and [i] speaking; but ye hearkened not unto me.

15 [k] I have sent also unto you all my servants the prophets, rising up early‡ and sending them, saying, [l] Return ye now every man§ from his evil way, and amend your doings, and go not after other gods to serve them, and ye shall dwell in the land which I have given to you, and to your fathers; but ye have not inclined your ear, nor hearkened unto me.

16 Because the sons of Jonadab the son of Rechab have performed the commandment of their father, which he commanded them, [m] but this people hath not hearkened unto me;

17 Therefore thus saith the LORD God of hosts, the God of Israel, [n] Behold, I will bring upon Judah, and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, all the evil that I have pronounced against them: [o] because I have spoken unto them,

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIV.—God mixes his judgments here with mercy, even to the wicked. It is a great advantage for kings and others to have faithful ministers to tell them the fatal consequences of their sins, that they may repent and live. And it is well if captivity and imprisonment lead to true reformation. God's compassion towards us ought to influence our compassion towards our inferiors and neighbours. But reformations occasioned by fear and danger are seldom sincere and lasting. The most solemn vows will not long restrain them whose hearts are not right with God. But if his reprieves from vengeance be abused, he will quickly proceed to execution. None ever hardened their hearts against him and prospered. And broken vows especially hasten his fearful judgments. If men will not subject themselves to his law, he must subject them to his wrath and curse. If judgments depart from us before we are humbled, they will return with redoubled force. And promising beginnings, to which the end does not correspond, only produce more aggravated guilt and surer destruction.

Ezekiel mentions the "inkhorn" as familiar in his time (Ch. 9. 2, 3, 11,) Winckelmann and others have shown that the ink of the ancients was a species of paint; differing little, if any thing, from what is still employed by many Orientals. It is usually composed of lampblack, or powdered charcoal, gum, and water: its consistence is nearly the same as modern printers' ink; and the pen is usually a pointed reed.—ED.

9 And it came to pass, in the fifth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, in the ninth month, that they [k] proclaimed a fast before the LORD to all the people in Jerusalem, and to all the people that came from the cities of Judah unto Jerusalem.

10 Then read Baruch in the book the words of Jeremiah in the house of the LORD, [l] in the chamber of Gemariah the son of Shaphan the [m] scribe, in the higher court, at the [*n] entry of the new gate of the LORD's house, in the ears of all the people.[†]

11 ¶ When Michaiah the son of Gemariah, the son of [o] Shaphan, had heard out of the book all the words of the LORD,

12 Then he went down into the king's house, into the [p] scribe's chamber; and, lo, [q] all the princes sat there, even Elishama the scribe, and Delaiah the son of Shemaiah, and Elnathan the son of Achbor, and Gemariah the son of Shaphan, and Zedekiah the son of Hananiah, and all the princes.

14 Therefore all the princes sent Jehudi the son of Nethaniah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Cushi, unto Baruch, saying, Take in thine hand the roll wherein thou hast read in the ears of the people, and come. So Baruch the son of Neriah [s] took the roll in his hand, and came unto them.

15 And they said unto him, Sit down now, and read it in our ears. So Baruch read it in their ears.

16 Now it came to pass, when they had heard all the words, [t] they were afraid,[§] both one and other, and said unto Baruch, We will surely tell the king of all these words.

17 And they asked Baruch, saying, Tell us now, How didst thou write all these words at his mouth?

18 Then Baruch answered them, [u] He pronounced all these words unto me with his mouth, and I wrote them with ink[‖] in the book.

19 Then said the princes unto Baruch, [x] Go, hide thee, thou and Jeremiah; and let no man know where ye be.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXV.—Never let us be ashamed of the honest employment of our ancestors, however mean. And let us prudently accommodate ourselves to our place, rank, and condition; but never live above it. Humility and contentment in obscurity are often the best policy and surest protection. If we be strangers in this world, we should abstain from fleshly lusts, and treat the objects of sense with a gracious and generous disdain. The more we are confirmed in so doing, temptation will have the less force. The more mortified we are to this world, the more meet we are for the next, and the more willing shall we be to go to it; nay, we are the more meet for suffering here. But no rules of external discipline ought to exclude a dispensation when necessity requires. To neglect proper means of safety is to tempt God. It is superlatively absurd and wicked to refuse doing as much in obedience to God, as we would be ready to do in obedience to a progenitor who is long since dead, and can never remind us of our obligation: and such as are guilty may expect vengeance, sure, however slow. But while sinners are ruined, the temperate and obedient are often preserved in this world. And often such as live soberly on small estates have the most numerous and flourishing families. Nay, temperance, and mortification to this world, do much befriend the exercises of piety, and help to transmit the observance thereof to posterity, as their principal honour.

of Elishama the scribe, and told all the words in the ears of the king.

21 So the king sent Jehudi to fetch the roll; and he took it out of Elishama the scribe's chamber: and Jehudi read it in the ears of the king, and in the ears of all the princes which stood beside the king.

22 Now the king sat in the [y] winterhouse in the ninth month: and there was a fire on the hearth burning before him.*

23 And it came to pass, that, when Jehudi had read three or four leaves,† he [z] cut it‡ with the penknife, and cast it into the fire that was on the hearth, until all the roll was consumed in the fire that was on the hearth.

24 Yet they were not afraid, nor [a] rent their garments, neither the king, nor any of his servants that heard all these words.

25 Nevertheless Elnathan, and Delaiah, and Gemariah, [b] had made intercession to the king that he would not burn the roll; but he would not hear them.

26 But the king commanded Jerahmeel the son [§] of Hammelech, and Seraiah the son of Azriel, and Shelemiah the son of Abdeel, [c] to take Baruch the scribe, and Jeremiah the prophet: [d] but the LORD hid them.‖

27 ¶ Then the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah, [e] after that the king had burnt the roll, and the words which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremiah, saying,

28 [f] Take thee again another roll, and write in it all the former words that were in the first roll, which Jehoiakim the king of Judah hath burnt.

29 And thou shalt say to Jehoiakim king of Judah, Thus saith the LORD, Thou hast burnt this roll, saying, [g] Why hast thou written therein, saying, The king of Babylon shall certainly come and destroy this land, and shall cause to cease from thence man and beast?

30 Therefore thus saith the LORD of Jehoiakim king of Judah, [h] He shall have none to sit upon the throne of David; and his dead body shall be cast out in the day to the heat, and in the night to the frost.*

31 And I [i] will [†] punish him, and his seed, and his servants, for their iniquity; and [k] I will bring upon them, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and upon the men of Judah, all the evil that I have pronounced against them; but they hearkened not.

* A reference to Luke 22. 55. will exhibit the ordinary method of warming an Eastern apartment. Fire places and chimneys are unknown in many of the warmer regions of Asia; and when fire is required in winter, a chafing-dish or brazier of wood, charcoal, or other combustible is introduced. So it was here. The original Hebrew does not intimate that the king sat before the fire, but that the fire was brought before the king.—"There was set before him a hearth with burning coals." Blayney.—Note. To what a sad use does a sinful heart pervert the comforts God bestows! † A call for intercessory prayer is no proof either of the faith or repentance of him that calls for it. It is possible to have just such confidence in prayer, as the ignorant and superstitious often have in amulets and charms. Such was evidently the case with Zedekiah, for "neither he, nor his servants, nor the people of the land, did hearken unto the words of the Lord by Jeremiah," and yet they expect that God will hear Jeremiah for them, while they refuse to hear God.—Note. Intercessory prayer for the sick is undoubtedly an ordinance of God (Jam. 5. 14, 15.), both for healing and forgiveness; but, it is carefully to be observed, that the apostle places the personal prayer of the sick himself before the intercessory (ver. 13.) "Is any among you afflicted (in any manner, sickness included), let him pray:" "Is any sick (a special affliction), let him send for the elders, and let them pray over him." In dealing with the sick this is a matter that requires much tenderness, but much faithfulness: for the heart is deceitful, and souls are precious.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXVI.—A serious and believing consideration of the certain and fatal consequences of our sin promotes a cordial repentance: and, in all their work, ministers ought to endeavour at the conversion of sinners from their evil ways. For this the writing of God's word is designed; and all the writing or repeating of sermons must be directed to the same. Such as truly discern the need of repentance will supplicate God for it. But there may be great pretences, even to extraordinary devotion, while men continue enemies to the power of it. And national fasts, without national reformation, will never turn away national judgments. When we profess to be supplicating for mercy, it is very useful to be faithfully told of our sins and our duty; and we ought to communicate to others those divine truths which have been peculiarly affecting to ourselves. God's ministers should lay hold on every opportunity, private or public, for teaching and warning their hearers. And there is need of very close dealing, as, by delay or otherwise, sinners will do all they can to evade convictions, or to shake them off. Nay, hardened sinners, especially in high stations, stick at nothing to disgrace the oracles of God, to destroy his messengers, and discover their own determinate resolution to continue in sin. And while they, who for God's cause boldly put their life in their hands, are wonderfully protected, they who contend with God, and obstinately resist his counsels, do only treasure up for themselves wrath against the day of wrath. By contending with his curses, they but prepare heavier ones for themselves: and silent accomplices in guilt may look for a share in the punishment.

lem to go into the land of [n] Benjamin, [o] to separate himself thence in the midst of the people.*

13 And when he was in the gate of Benjamin, a captain of the ward was there, whose name was Irijah, the son of Shelemiah, the son of Hananiah; and he took Jeremiah the prophet, saying, [p] Thou fallest away to the Chaldeans.

14 Then said Jeremiah, It is [q] false: I fall not away to the Chaldeans. But he hearkened not to him: so Irijah took Jeremiah, and brought him to the princes.

15 [r] Wherefore the princes were wroth with Jeremiah, and smote him, and put him in prison [s] in the house of Jonathan the scribe: for they had made that the prison.†

16 ¶ When Jeremiah was entered into the dungeon, and into the [t] cabins, and Jeremiah had remained there many days:

17 Then Zedekiah the king sent, and took him out; and the king asked him [u] secretly in his house, and said, [x] Is there any word from the LORD? And Jeremiah said, There is: for, said he, [y] thou shalt be delivered into the hand of the king of Babylon.

18 Moreover, Jeremiah said unto king Zedekiah, [z] What have I offended against thee, or against thy servants, or against this people, that ye have put me in prison?

19 [a] Where are now your prophets which prophesied unto you, saying, The king of Babylon shall not come against you, nor against this land?

20 Therefore hear now, I pray thee, O my lord the king: ‡ let my supplication, I pray thee, be accepted before thee; that thou cause me not to return to the house of Jonathan the scribe, [b] lest I die § there.

21 Then Zedekiah the king commanded that they should commit Jeremiah into the court of the prison, and that they [c] should give him daily a piece of bread out of the bakers' street, [d] until all the bread in the city were spent. Thus Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

(1) Jeremiah is transferred into the dungeon of Malchiah: 1—6. (2) His imprisonment relaxed at the suit of Ebed-melech: 7—13. (3) In a private conference he counsels the king to yield and save his life: 14—23. (4) By the king's direction, he conceals the conference: 24—28.

THEN [a] Shephatiah the son of Mattan, and Gedaliah the son of Pashur, and Jucal the son of Shelemiah, and Pashur the son of Malchiah, [b] heard the words that Jeremiah had spoken unto all the people, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD, [c] He that remaineth in this city shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth forth to the Chaldeans shall live; for he shall have his life for a prey, and shall live.

3 Thus saith the LORD, This city shall surely be given into the hand of the king of Babylon's army, which shall take it.

4 Therefore [d] the princes said unto the king, We beseech thee, let this man be put to death; for [e] thus he weakeneth the hands of the men of war that remain in this city, and the hands of all the people, in speaking such words unto them: for this man seeketh not the * welfare of this people, but the hurt.

5 Then Zedekiah the king said, [f] Behold, he is in your hand: for the king is not he that can do any thing against you.

6 Then took they Jeremiah, and cast him into the [g] dungeon† of Malchiah the son ‡ of Hammelech, that was in the court of the prison: and they let down Jeremiah with cords. And in the dungeon there was no water, but mire: so Jeremiah sunk in the mire.

7 ¶ Now when Ebed-melech [h] the Ethiopian,§ one of the ‖ eunuchs which was in the king's house, heard that they had put Jeremiah in the dungeon, (the king then [k] sitting ‖ in the gate of Benjamin,)

8 [l] Ebed-melech went forth out of the king's house, and spake to the king, saying,

9 My lord the king, these men [m] have done evil in all that they have done to Jeremiah the prophet, whom they have cast into the dungeon; and * he is like to die for hunger in the place where he is: [n] for there is no more bread in the city.

10 [o] Then the king commanded Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, saying, Take from hence thirty† men ‡ with thee, and take up Jeremiah the prophet out of the dungeon, before he die.

11 So Ebed-melech took the men with him, and went into the house of the king under the treasury, and took thence old cast clouts and old rotten rags, and let them down by cords into the dungeon to Jeremiah.

12 And Ebed-melech the Ethiopian said unto Jeremiah, [p] Put now these old cast clouts and rotten rags under thine arm-holes under the cords.§ And Jeremiah did so.

13 So they drew up Jeremiah with cords, and took him up out of the dungeon: and [q] Jeremiah remained in the court of the prison.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXVII.—Hard are their hearts who can both see and feel the judgments of God without being humbled. And often they, who in health and prosperity despised Christ's ministers, entreat their counsels and prayers in a day of distress. Many would gladly be rid of their sufferings who have no heart to part with their sins. And often they use the intermissions, or slow progress, of God's judgments to harden themselves, while they easily credit the flatteries and lies which their corrupt inclinations wish to be true. Even Satan could not deceive men if they deceived not themselves. No created help can avail but as God pleases: and no created power can withstand the weakest instruments in his hand. When we have no call from God to stay, it is prudent to retire into privacy, and shun the evils which we foresee. But the purest characters and conduct may be blackened with the vilest aspersions; and every lie, however improbable, is easily believed against a man obnoxious for his piety and reproofs. And if passion and prejudice ascend the chair of the magistrate, we need not expect any justice. It is the best of men that have to suffer most for conscience' sake. But God can provide them relief from whence they little expected it. If men will cheerfully, but prudently, expose their life for God, he will take care that they shall be no losers, but their very affliction be the mean of substantial bles-

14 ¶ Then Zedekiah the king sent, and took Jeremiah the prophet unto him into the [r] third entry that is in the house of the LORD: and the king said unto Jeremiah, [s] I will ask thee a thing; hide nothing from me.

15 Then Jeremiah said unto Zedekiah, If I declare it unto thee, [t] wilt thou not surely put me to death? and if I give thee counsel, wilt thou not hearken [*] unto me?

16 So Zedekiah the king sware secretly unto Jeremiah, saying, [u] As the LORD liveth, [x] that made us this soul, [†] I will not put thee to death, neither will I give thee into the hand of [y] these men that seek thy life.

17 Then said Jeremiah unto Zedekiah, Thus saith the LORD, the God of hosts, the God of Israel, [z] If thou wilt assuredly go forth unto the king of Babylon's princes, then thy soul shall live, and this city shall not be burnt with fire; and thou shalt live, and thine house:

18 But [a] if thou wilt not go forth to the king of Babylon's princes, then shall this city be given into the hand of the Chaldeans, and they shall burn it with fire, and thou shalt not escape out of their hand.

19 And Zedekiah the king said unto Jeremiah, [b] I am afraid of the Jews that are fallen to the Chaldeans, lest they deliver me into their hand, and they mock [‡] me.

20 But Jeremiah said, They shall not deliver thee. Obey, [c] I beseech thee, the voice of the LORD, which I speak unto thee: so it shall be well unto thee, and thy soul shall live.

21 But if thou refuse to go forth, [d] this is the word that the LORD hath showed me:

23 [f] So they shall bring out all thy wives and thy children to the Chaldeans; and thou shalt not escape out of their hand, but shalt be taken by the hand of the king of Babylon; and [†] thou shalt cause this city to be burnt [‡] with fire.

24 ¶ Then said Zedekiah unto Jeremiah, Let no man know of these words, and thou shalt not die.

25 But if [g] the princes hear that I have talked with thee, and they come unto thee, and say unto thee, Declare unto us now what thou hast said unto the king, hide it not from us, and we will not put thee to death; also what the king said unto thee:

26 Then thou shalt say unto them, [h] I presented my supplication before the king, that he would not cause me to return to Jonathan's house, to die there.

27 Then came all the princes unto Jeremiah, and asked him: and he told them according to all these words that the king had commanded. [*] So [†] they left off speaking with him; for the matter was not perceived.

IN the [a] ninth year of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the tenth month, came Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon and all his army against Jerusalem, and they besieged it.

2 And in the eleventh year [*] of Zedekiah, in the [b] fourth month, the ninth day of the month, the city was broken up.

3 And all the princes of the king of Babylon [c] came in, and sat in the middle gate, even [d] Nergal-sharezer, Samgar-nebo, Sarsechim, Rab-saris, Nergal-sharezer, Rab-mag, with all the residue of the princes of the king of Babylon.

4 ¶ And it came to pass, [e] that when Zedekiah the king of Judah saw them, and all the men of war, then they fled, and went forth out of the city by night, by the way of the king's garden, by the gate [f] betwixt the two walls: [†] and he went out the way of the plain.

5 But [g] the Chaldeans' army pursued after them, and [h] overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho: and when they had taken him, they brought him up to Nebuchadnezzar king of sing. But they, who will not regard God's calls to repentance, need not expect messages of peace. And they, who have wilfully shut their eyes to their danger, deserve to be upbraided with their folly.

† The Chaldeans had taken the city, but the citadel of Zion, in the south-west, was still, most probably, in the hands of Zedekiah. "Between the two walls," may, accordingly, mean that part of Zion to the north, where the walls of the city and citadel approached; and the passage was, most likely, the way to the royal gardens in the vale of Gihon. The Jews have a tradition that the escape was by a subterraneous passage reaching to Jericho; and that the king would have escaped, but, that a hind, hunted by the Chaldeans, took refuge in the cave where the passage ended just as the king was emerging, and that he was thus miraculously made prisoner by the exulting Chaldeans.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXVIII.—It is better to submit to the rebukes of Providence than to contend with them. If we cannot have our liberties, let us never throw away our lives. And let God's ministers act faithfully and friendly, though impenitent sinners should reward them with hatred and murder. It forebodes ill when magistrates are daily growing worse; [compare chap. xxvi, xxxiv, xxxvi.] when great men weakly yield to their inferiors in the cause of God and truth; and when they, who have a friendship for his faithful servants, will not own it as they might in time of need, when perhaps their enemies attempt privately to murder them. But, lo, how God cares for them, and raises up and imboldens friends beyond expectation! How early Ethiopia stretches out her hands to God! And what sense of justice and piety is found in a Gentile, living amidst the most degenerate professors! With speed and compassion we ought to relieve the distressed: and with great meekness and earnestness should ministers instruct such as oppose themselves, and render good for evil. Nor is a readiness to die in the cause of truth inconsistent with every prudent precaution to preserve ourselves. Sinners fondly desire that God would alter his purposes or threatenings for their sake, even when they continue deaf to his admonitions, and refuse submission, the only real means of deliverance. They often deter themselves from duty by fears trifling and groundless; and that which they seek to avoid by sin is brought on them by the justice of God; and by sinning to avoid shame, they often bring both sin and ruin upon themselves and their subjects. To avoid shame, they will not avow before men the regard which their conscience obliges them to have for the faithful servants of God: nay, to preserve their reputation before wicked men, they will risk their eternal salvation. We had need then to be wise as serpents, as well as harmless as doves. And though we must never tell a lie, yet we must not tell all that we know to every impertinent inquirer.

6 Then the king of Babylon slew [i] the sons of Zedekiah in Riblah† before his eyes: also the king of Babylon slew all the nobles of Judah.

7 Moreover, [k] he put out Zedekiah's eyes, and bound him ‡ with chains, to carry him to Babylon.

8 ¶ And the Chaldeans [l] burnt the king's house, and the houses of the people, with fire, and brake down the walls of Jerusalem.

9 ¶ Then Nebuzar-adan the §[m] captain of the guard [n] carried away captive into Babylon the remnant‖ of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away, that fell to him, with the rest of the people that remained.

10 But Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard [o] left of the poor of the people, which had nothing, in the land of Judah, and gave them vineyards and fields * at the same time.

11 ¶ Now Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon [p] gave charge concerning Jeremiah † to Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard, saying, 12 Take him, and ‡ look well to him, and [q] do him no harm; but do unto him even as he shall say unto thee.

13 So Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard sent, and Nebushasban, Rab-saris, and Nergal-sharezer, Rab-mag, and all the king of Babylon's princes;

14 Even they sent, and took Jeremiah [r] out of the court of the prison, and committed him unto [s] Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, that he should carry him [t] home:§ so he dwelt among the people.‖

15 ¶ [u] Now the word of the LORD came unto Jeremiah, [x] while he was shut up in the court of the prison, saying,

16 Go and speak [y] to Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, [z] Behold, I will bring my words upon this city for evil, and not for good; and they shall be accomplished in that day [a] before thee.

17 But [b] I will deliver thee in that day, saith the LORD; and thou shalt not be given into the hand of the men of whom thou art afraid.

18 For I will surely deliver thee, and thou shalt not fall by the sword, [c] but thy life shall be for a prey unto thee; because thou hast put thy trust in me, saith the LORD.

THE [a] word * which came to Jeremiah from the LORD, after that [b] Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had let him go from [c] Ramah, when he had taken him, being bound in † chains among all that were carried away captive of Jerusalem and Judah, which were carried away captive unto Babylon.

2 And the captain of the guard took Jeremiah, and said unto him, [d] The LORD thy God hath pronounced this evil upon this place: ‡

3 Now the LORD hath brought it, and done according as he hath said: because ye have [e] sinned against the LORD, and have not obeyed his voice, therefore this thing is come upon you.

4 And now, behold, I loose thee this day from the chains which were upon thine hand: if it seem good unto thee to come with me into Babylon, come, and [f] I will look well unto thee; but if it seem ill unto thee to come with me into Babylon, forbear: behold, [g] all the land is before thee; whither it seemeth good and convenient for thee to go, thither go.

5 Now, while he was not yet gone back, he said, Go back also to [h] Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, whom the king of Babylon hath made governor over the cities of Judah, and dwell with him among the people; or [i] go wheresoever it seemeth convenient unto thee to go. So the captain of the guard [k] gave him victuals and a reward, and let him go.

6 Then went Jeremiah unto Gedaliah the son of Ahikam to [l] Mizpah,§ and dwelt with him among the people that were left in the land.

7 ¶ Now, when all [m] the captains of the forces which were in the fields,‖ even they and their men, heard that the king of Babylon had made Gedaliah the son of Ahikam governor in the land, and had committed unto him men, and women, and children, and of the poor of the land, of them that were not carried away captive to Babylon;

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIX.—Alas, how the families of the north sit in the gates of Jerusalem, and the lords of the heathen where their gods had been worshipped! God's judgments fearfully convince such as would not believe his threatenings. And fruitless are all attempts to flee from his vengeance. But it will be awfully piercing to see our children murdered or damned through our obstinacy in sinning; and shut up at last in spiritual and eternal darkness through our obstinate ignorance of God's will! Marvellous, but just, are the changes and retributions of Providence: and the ruin of oppressors is the rise of the oppressed. God comforts his people, while their enemies are tormented: and heathens deliver them, when hypocrites persecute them: yea, even prisons protect and mark them out for particular favours. Nor shall a cordial kindness to God's servants in trouble ever pass without distinguished honour and reward: and he will suit his comforts to the fears and griefs of his people. None that trust in him shall ever perish or be confounded.

saying, [t] Fear not to serve the Chaldeans: dwell in the land, and serve the king of Babylon, and it shall be well with you.

10 As for me, behold, I will dwell at Mizpah [t] to serve the Chaldeans [u] which will come unto us: but ye, [v] gather ye wine and summer-fruits, and oil, and put them in your vessels, and dwell in your cities that ye have taken.

11 Likewise when all the Jews [x] that were in Moab, and among the Ammonites, and in Edom, and that were in all the countries, heard that the king of Babylon had left a remnant of Judah, and that he had set over them Gedaliah [†] the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan;

12 Even [y] all the Jews returned out of all places whither they were driven, and came to the land of Judah, to Gedaliah, unto Mizpah, and gathered wine and summer-fruits very much.

13 ¶ Moreover, [z] Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were in the fields, came to Gedaliah to Mizpah,

14 And said unto him, Dost thou certainly know that Baalis the king of the Ammonites [a] hath sent Ishmael the son of Nethaniah [b] to slay thee? But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam believed them not.[‡]

15 Then Johanan the son of Kareah spake to Gedaliah in Mizpah secretly, saying, Let me go, I pray thee, and I will slay Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and no man shall know it: wherefore should he slay thee, that all the Jews which are gathered unto thee should be scattered, and the remnant in Judah perish?

16 But Gedaliah the son of Ahikam said unto Johanan the son of Kareah, [c] Thou shalt not do this thing; for thou speakest falsely of Ishmael.

8 But ten men were found among them that said unto Ishmael, Slay us not: for [n] we have treasures [‖] in the field, of wheat, and of barley, and of oil, [*] and of honey. So he [†] forbare, and slew them not among their brethren.

9 Now the pit wherein Ishmael had cast all the dead bodies of the men, whom he had slain [o p] because of Gedaliah, was it which [q] Asa [‡] the king had made for fear of Baasha king of Israel; and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah filled it with them that were slain.

10 Then Ishmael carried away captive [r] all the residue of the people that were in Mizpah, even the king's daughters, and all the people that remained in Mizpah, whom Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had committed to Gedaliah the son of Ahikam: and Ishmael the son of Nethaniah carried them away captive, and departed [s] to go over to the Ammonites.[§]

11 ¶ But when [t] Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, heard of all the evil that Ishmael the son of Nethaniah had done,

12 Then they took all the men, and [u] went to fight with Ishmael the son of Nethaniah, and found him by the [x] great waters [‖] that are in Gibeon.

13 Now it came to pass, that when all the people which were with Ishmael saw Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces that were with him, [y] then they were glad.

14 So all the people that Ishmael had carried away captive from Mizpah cast about [*] and returned, [z] and went unto Johanan the son of Kareah.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XL.—Heathens sometimes honour God and his ministers more than many professors. It will at last appear that God is faithful, and sin ruinous. And all loss sustained for God will be made up in the end. If his servants have hardships when sinners have liberty, they will obtain liberty when sinners shall be in misery.—What honour God puts on the son of Jeremiah's late protector! [chap. xxvi. 24.] But short glimmerings of prosperity often introduce fearful strokes of adversity. It is only the deputies and servants of heaven's great Monarch who are secured in complete and lasting protection. O what baseness and barbarity can human minds contrive and perpetrate! Great men have need to be cautious of their own preservation, as well as charitable concerning their neighbours. But of little worth are earthly honours, which but tempt miscreants to murder us.

(1) Johanan, desiring Jeremiah to inquire of God, promises obedience: 1—6. (2) Jeremiah assures him of safety in Judea, and destruction in Egypt: 7—18. (3) He reproves the dissimulation of the Jews, and warns them of consequent destruction: 19—22.

THEN all the captains of the forces, and Johanan the son of Kareah, and Jezaniah the son of Hoshaiah, and all the people, from the least even unto the greatest, [a] came near,

2 And said unto Jeremiah the prophet, * Let, we beseech thee, our supplication be accepted before thee, and pray for us unto the LORD thy God, even for all this remnant; (for we are left [b] but a few of many, as thine eyes do behold us;)

3 That the LORD thy God [c] may show us the way wherein we may walk, and the thing that we may do. [†]

4 Then Jeremiah the prophet said unto them, I have heard you; behold, I will pray unto the LORD your God according to your words; and it shall come to pass, that [d] whatsoever thing the LORD shall answer you, I will declare it unto you; I will keep nothing back from you.

5 Then they said to Jeremiah, The LORD be [e] a true and faithful witness between us, if we do not even according to all things for the which the LORD thy God shall send thee to us.

6 Whether [f] it be good, or whether it be evil, we will obey the voice of the LORD our God, to whom we send thee; that it may be well with us, when we obey the voice of the LORD our God.

† There is here every appearance of a sincere desire to learn and follow the mind of the Lord (see ver. 6); and so, with one condition, it was; but that condition was—that God should direct them to do what they wished to do. They were predetermined to follow their own opinion, and came to Jeremiah merely that they might obtain God's sanction.—Note. It is dangerous, because it is hypocritical, to talk of looking for, and waiting for, "the leadings of providence," when men are predetermined to follow them no farther than they coincide with their own opinions, plans, and interests. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLI.—By the most unexpected and unnatural means God can punish men, who have ripened themselves in wickedness. And a righteous God can make the malice, the baseness, the barbarity, of the most hardened monsters in iniquity to glorify himself and ruin his enemies. Misery, death, and damnation, often meet men when, where, and whence, they least expected. And not the laws of God or men, but covetousness, frequently makes sinners to abstain from crimes. The most unnatural criminals may for a time escape punishment from men. And groundless fear, real or pretended, often leads men into ruinous guilt.

CHAPTER XLIII.

(1) Jeremiah's prophecy being discredited, he and the rest of the people carried into Egypt: 1—7. (2) He prophesies the conquest of Egypt: 8—13.

AND it came to pass, that when Jeremiah had made an end of speaking unto all the people all the words of the LORD their God, for which the LORD their God had sent him to them, even all these words,

2 Then spake [a] Azariah* the son of Hoshaiah, and Johanan the son of Kareah, and all [b] the proud men,† saying unto Jeremiah, Thou speakest [c] falsely: the LORD our God hath not sent thee to say, Go not into Egypt to sojourn there:

3 But [d] Baruch the son of Neriah setteth thee on against us, for to deliver us into the hand of the Chaldeans, that [e] they might put us to death, and carry us away captives into Babylon.

4 So Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, and all the people, [f] obeyed not the voice of the LORD, [g] to dwell in the land of Judah;

5 But [h] Johanan the son of Kareah, and all the captains of the forces, took all the remnant of Judah, that were returned from all nations whither they had been driven, to dwell in the land of Judah;

6 Even men, and women, and children, and the king's daughters, and every person that Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard had left with Gedaliah the son of Ahikam, the son of Shaphan, and [i] Jeremiah the prophet, and Baruch the son of Neriah.

7 So they came into the land of Egypt: for they obeyed not the voice of the LORD. Thus came they even to [k] Tahpanhes.‡

8 ¶ Then [l] came the word of the LORD unto Jeremiah in Tahpanhes, saying,

9 [m] Take great stones in thine hand, and hide them in the clay in the brick-kiln,§ which is at the entry of Pharaoh's house in Tahpanhes, in the sight of the men of Judah;

10 And say unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, [n] I will send and take Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon, my servant, and will set his throne upon these stones that I have hid; and he shall spread his royal pavilion over them.*

11 And when he cometh, he shall smite the land of Egypt, and deliver such as are for death, to death; and such as are for captivity, to captivity; and such as are for the sword to the sword.

12 And I will kindle a fire in the houses of the gods of Egypt; and he shall burn them, and carry them away captives: and he shall array himself with the land of Egypt, as a shepherd† putteth on his garment; and he shall go forth from thence in peace.

13 He shall break also the images of Bethshemesh, that is in the land of Egypt; and the houses of the gods of the Egyptians shall he burn with fire.

Reflections upon Chap. XLII.—Ministers have need to be men of fervent prayer, faithfulness, and intimacy with God. And if people would profit by their ministers' prayers, they should seriously attend to their preaching. We can never be sincere with God if we do not obey his will so far as it is known to us. But what a cloak of religion will hypocrites put on to serve a particular turn! They will avouch God as their God; and make great pretences to unreserved readiness to obey his will in all things. How strange it is that he should return such dissemblers so plain, so gracious, an answer! But his mercy is the foundation of all our hopes and happiness. He can turn the hearts of kings to favour or to hate us, as he pleases. And they, who carefully obey his will, may humbly expect his blessing. But it is madness to dissemble with a God of truth, who searches our hearts; or to quit our station, especially in his holy land, because we find trouble in it. If we think to escape suffering by sinning, we only rush upon the thick bosses of his buckler. If we make him our enemy, we shall find him a consuming fire wherever we go; and that upon which we most set our hearts will prove most fatal to us. If we make ourselves vile by our sins, he will make us viler by his judgments.

Reflections upon Chap. XLIII.—Pride is among the most damning sins,—a root of infidelity, and a sure road to hell. They, who are full of ill designs them-

8 In that [g] ye provoke me unto wrath with the works of your hands, burning incense unto other gods in the land of Egypt, whither ye be gone to dwell, that ye might cut yourselves off, and that ye [h] might be a curse and a reproach among all the nations of the earth?

9 Have ye forgotten [i] the [†] wickedness of your fathers, and the wickedness of the kings of Judah, and the wickedness of their wives, and your own wickedness, and the wickedness of your wives, which they have committed in the land of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem?

10 They are not [k] humbled even unto this day, [l] neither have they feared, nor walked in my law, nor in my statutes, that I set before you, and before your fathers.

11 ¶ Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, I [m] will set my face against you for evil, and to cut off all Judah.

12 And [n] I will take the remnant of Judah, that have set their faces to go into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, and they shall all be consumed, and fall in the land of Egypt; they shall even be consumed by the sword and by the famine: they shall die, from the least even unto the greatest, by the sword and by the famine; and they shall be an execration, and an astonishment, and a curse, and a reproach.

13 For I will [o] punish them that dwell in the land of Egypt, as I have punished Jerusalem, by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence;

14 So that none of the remnant of Judah, which are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall escape or remain, that they should return unto the land of Judah, to the which they [‡] have a desire to return to dwell there; [p] for none shall return but such as shall [q] escape. [§]

15 ¶ Then [r] all the men which knew that their wives had burnt incense unto other gods, and all the women that stood by, a great multitude, even all the people that dwelt in the land of Egypt, in Pathros, answered Jeremiah, saying,

16 As for the word that thou hast spoken unto us in the name of the LORD, [s] we will not hearken unto thee:

17 But we will certainly do whatsoever thing [t] goeth forth out of our own mouth, to burn incense unto the [u] queen of heaven, and to pour out [‖] drink-offerings unto her, as we have done, we and our fathers, our kings and our princes, in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem: for [x] then had we plenty of [*] victuals, and were well, and saw no evil.

18 But since we left off to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink-offerings unto her, [y] we have wanted all things, and have been consumed by the sword and by the famine.

19 And when [z] we burnt incense to the queen of heaven, and poured out drink-offerings unto her, did we make her cakes to worship her, and pour out drink-offerings unto her, without our [a] men? [*]

20 ¶ Then Jeremiah said unto all the people, to the men, and to the women, and to all the people which had given him that answer, saying,

21 The incense that ye burnt in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem, ye, and your fathers, your kings, and your princes, and the people of the land, [b] did not the LORD remember them, and came it not into his mind?

22 So that the LORD [c] could no longer bear, because of the evil of your doings, and because of the abominations which ye have committed; therefore is your land [d] a desolation, and an astonishment, and a curse, without an inhabitant, as at this day.

23 [*] Because ye have burnt incense, and because ye have sinned against the LORD, and have not obeyed the voice of the LORD, nor walked in his law, nor in his statutes, nor in his testimonies; therefore this evil is happened unto you, as at this day.

24 [f] Moreover, Jeremiah said unto all the people, and to all the women, Hear the word of the LORD, all Judah that are in the land of Egypt;

25 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, saying, Ye and your wives [g] have both spoken with your mouths, and fulfilled with your hand, saying, We will surely perform our vows that we have vowed, to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink-offerings unto her: ye will surely accomplish your vows, and surely perform your vows.

26 Therefore hear ye the word of the LORD, all Judah that dwell in the land of Egypt; Behold, [h] I have sworn by my great name, saith the LORD, that [i] my name shall no more be named [†] in the mouth of any man of Judah in all the land of Egypt, saying, The Lord GOD liveth.

27 Behold, [k] I will watch over them for evil, and not for good; and all the men of Judah that are in the land of Egypt shall be consumed by the sword, and by the famine, until there be an end of them.

28 [l] Yet a small number that escape the sword shall return out of the land of Egypt into the land of Judah; and all the remnant of Judah, [m] that are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn

CHAPTER XLV.

Jeremiah instructs and comforts Baruch.

THE word[a] that Jeremiah the prophet spake unto Baruch the son of Neriah, [a]when he had written these words in a book at the mouth of Jeremiah, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, unto thee, O Baruch;

3 Thou didst say, Wo is me now! for the LORD hath [b]added grief to my sorrow; I fainted in my sighing, and I find no rest.

4 Thus shalt thou say unto him, The LORD saith thus, Behold, that which I have built will I break down, and that which I have planted I will pluck up, even this whole land.

5 And seekest thou great things[†] for thyself? seek them not: for, behold, I will bring evil upon all flesh, saith the LORD; but thy life will I give unto thee for a prey in all places whither thou goest.

A. M. cir. 3398. B. C. cir. 606.

[a] This utterance belongs, in point of time, to chap. 36; but is introduced here as an example and encouragement to the few that did still "sigh and cry for all the abominations that were done in the land." This, and similar dislocations throughout this book, are not to be considered as evidences that the arrangement of the several parts was without any principle of order. The principle is obvious: it is not time, but instruction.—ED.

them upon us, and renders them heavier; and even draws down his wrath upon such as receive us into their friendship. And, very contrary to their intentions, he makes one nation a scourge to another.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLIV.—Dreadful is the malignity of sin; infinitely God hates it, and earnestly should his ministers warn against it. It is a dreadful token of a reprobate mind, when, with judgments upon us or around us, we harden ourselves in sin: and a certain sign that almighty vengeance is at hand to destroy us. They who will not be ruled by God's word, must be broken by his rod. And if men will prefer their own projects to God's promises and providence, it is just that they should meet with disappointments. No antiquity, authority, custom, or prosperity, can ever warrant what God forbids. And it is dreadful when the means which God uses to draw or drive us from our sins are perverted to harden us in them! or when those, who should assist one another in the way to heaven, are mutual tempters to, and hardeners in, sin. But God will effectually refute his obstinate opponents by the ruinous strokes of his wrath. Nor can a greater curse light upon sinners, than to be given up to the devices of their own heart. Quickly will God ruin the created comforts and confidences which we put in his room. And indeed nothing is to us what we fancy it, but what he makes it.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLV.—Alas, how unwilling our hearts are to take up our cross and follow Christ! Very small difficulties are apt to discourage young beginners in the service of God. And often it is more their unbelieving fears than their real dangers that make them to complain. If we had less desire after, and less expectation from, creatures, and more faith in Christ's word and views of the spiritual nature of his kingdom, external events would trouble us less. While therefore God so exactly observes me, let me never seek my own more than the public welfare. Let me never seek great things here, where every

The destruction of the Philistines, of Tyre, and Sidon.

THE word of the LORD that came to Jeremiah the prophet against the Philistines, before that Pharaoh [*] smote Gaza. [†]

2 Thus saith the LORD, Behold, waters [‡] rise up out of the north, and shall be an overflowing flood, and shall overflow the land, and all that is therein; the city, and them that dwell therein: then the men shall cry, and all the inhabitants of the land shall howl.

3 At the noise of the stamping of the hoofs of his strong horses, at the rushing of his chariots, and at the rumbling of his wheels, the fathers shall not look back to their children for feebleness of hands;

4 Because of the day that cometh to spoil all the Philistines, and to cut off from Tyrus and Zidon every helper that remaineth: for the LORD will spoil the Philistines, the remnant of the country of Caphtor.

5 Baldness is come upon Gaza; Ashkelon is cut off with the remnant of their valley: how long wilt thou cut thyself?

6 O thou sword of the LORD, how long will it be ere thou be quiet? Put up thyself into thy scabbard, rest, and be still.

7 [§] How can it be quiet, seeing the LORD hath given it a charge against Ashkelon, and against the sea-shore? there hath he appointed it.

[*] Whether this was Pharaoh-necho, or Pharaoh-hophra, is uncertain. It is equally uncertain at what time—the fact alone is known—and all mere conjecture is useless.—ED.

[†] Gaza was a very ancient city (Gen. 10. 19), and, being the frontier town of Palestine towards Egypt, was strongly fortified. By Joshua it was assigned to the tribe of Judah, who gained possession of it soon after his death, Judg. 1. 18. The Philistines regained the possession, during which it became the scene of some of the most memorable acts of Samson. Being regained by David, it continued subject to his successors for 150 years; and, after successively falling into the hands of the Assyrians, Egyptians, Chaldeans, and Persians, it withstood Alexander of Macedon a siege of two months, and was, when captured, barbarously razed to the ground. Gaza appears never to have been rebuilt, and is described shortly after the days of our Lord, as a desert place. (Acts 8. 26.) Another city of the same name was erected near the ancient site, which still remains a place of considerable importance, and contains about 5,000 inhabitants.—ED.

thing is less than nothing, and vanity, and as uncertain as a shadow or a vapour. If God preserve and protect me in evil times, it is more than I deserve, or perhaps could expect.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLVI.—God will reckon with sinners at last. And, alas, at what expense, and with what parade, they rush forward into their own destruction! When they think to magnify themselves by their wicked enterprises, he glorifies himself in blasting their designs and cutting them off. At infinite hazard do kings, in their pride, march multitudes into sudden death and damnation. And the more confident they are, the nearer is their ruin. No numbers, no armour, no courage, no strength, no cunning, no wealth, no flight, avails when God is the assailant and pursuer. Mighty armies make but a pitiful figure when he musters the host of their enemies to the battle. And noisy blusterers do least in a time of need. They, who disappointed others, are at last disappointed themselves. Alas! what desolations sin makes in the most populous and wealthy countries! Quickly is Egypt too hot for the Jews, who fled thither, and all her thousands of cities turned into ruinous heaps. Amidst external preparations it is necessary to prepare chiefly for trouble, captivity death, and eternity. But great is his grace, who secures the salvation of his church and people in the worst of times, and even grants partial deliverances to his enemies.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLVII.—God exactly foresees the miseries of the most strong and flourishing states. And the strongest holds are of no avail against the artillery of a threatening, an angry God. He effectually reckons

7 ¶ For because [i]thou hast trusted in thy works and in thy treasures, thou shalt also be taken: and [k]Chemosh shall go forth into captivity, with his priests and his princes together.

8 And [l]the spoiler shall come upon every city, [m]and no city shall escape: the valley also shall perish, and the plain shall be destroyed, as the LORD hath spoken.

9 [n]Give wings unto Moab, that it may flee and get away: for [o]the cities thereof shall be desolate, without any to dwell therein.

10 [p]Cursed be he that doeth the work of the LORD [†]deceitfully, and cursed be he that keepeth back his sword from blood.

11 ¶ [q]Moab hath been at ease from his youth, and he hath settled on his lees,[‡] and hath not been emptied from vessel to vessel, neither [r]hath he gone into captivity; therefore his [s]taste [t]remained in him, and his scent is not changed.

12 Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that I will send unto him []wanderers, that shall cause him to wander, and shall empty his vessels, and break their bottles.

13 [u]And Moab shall be ashamed of Chemosh, as the house of Israel [v]was ashamed of Beth-el their confidence.

14 ¶ How say ye, [x]We are mighty and strong men for the war?

15 [y]Moab is spoiled, and gone up out of her cities, and [z]his chosen young men are gone down to the slaughter, saith [a]the King, whose name is The LORD of hosts.

16 The calamity of Moab [b]is near[†] to come, and his affliction hasteth fast.

17 [c]All ye that are about him, bemoan him; and all ye that know his name, say, [d]How is the strong staff broken, and the beautiful rod!

18 Thou [e]daughter that dost inhabit Dibon, come down from thy glory, and sit in thirst; for the spoiler of Moab shall come upon thee, and he shall destroy thy strong holds.

19 O [‡]inhabitant of [f]Aroer, stand by the way, and espy; [g]ask him that fleeth, and her that escapeth, and say, What is done?

20 [h]Moab is confounded, for it is broken down: howl and cry; tell ye it in [§]Arnon, that Moab is spoiled,

21 And judgment is come upon the [k]plain country;[‖] upon [l]Holon,[l] and upon [m]Jahazah, and upon Mephaath,

22 And upon [n]Dibon, and upon Nebo, and upon Beth-diblathaim,

23 And upon [o]Kiriathaim, and upon Beth-gamul, and upon Beth-meon,

24 And upon Kerioth, and upon Bozrah, and upon all the cities of the land of Moab, far or near.

25 The horn of Moab is cut off, and his arm is broken, saith the LORD.

26 Make ye him drunken;[*] for he magnifieth himself against the LORD: Moab also shall wallow in his vomit, and he also shall be in derision.

27 For was not Israel a derision[†] unto thee? was he found among thieves? for since thou spakest of him, thou skippedst for joy.

28 O ye that dwell in Moab, leave the cities, and dwell in the rock, and be like the dove that maketh her nest in the sides of the hole's mouth.

29 We have heard the pride of Moab, (he is exceeding proud,) his loftiness, and his arrogancy, and his pride, and the haughtiness of his heart.

30 I know his wrath, saith the LORD: but it shall not be so; his lies shall not so effect it.[‡]

31 Therefore will I howl for Moab, and I will cry out for all Moab; mine heart shall mourn for the men of Kir-heres.

32 O vine of Sibmah, I will weep for thee with the weeping of Jazer: thy plants are gone over the sea,[§] they reach even to the sea of Jazer: the spoiler is fallen upon thy summer-fruits, and upon thy vintage.

33 And joy and gladness is taken from the plentiful field, and from the land of Moab; and I have caused wine to fail from the wine-presses: none shall tread with shouting; their shouting shall be no shouting.[‖]

34 From the cry of Heshbon even unto Elealeh, and even unto Jahaz, have they uttered their voice, from Zoar even unto Horonaim, as an heifer of three years old;[*] for the waters also of Nimrim shall be desolate.

35 Moreover, I will cause to cease in Moab, saith the LORD, him that offereth in the high places, and him that burneth incense to his gods.

36 Therefore mine heart shall sound for Moab like pipes, and mine heart shall sound like pipes for the men of Kir-heres; because the riches that he hath gotten are perished.[†]

37 For every head shall be bald, and every beard [‡]clipped; upon all the hands shall be cuttings, and upon the loins sackcloth.

38 There shall be lamentation generally upon all the house-tops of Moab, and in the streets thereof: for I have broken Moab like a vessel wherein is no pleasure, saith the LORD.

39 They shall howl, saying, How is it broken down! how hath Moab turned the [§]back with shame! so shall Moab be a derision and a dismaying to all them about him.

[†] The people of one nation often take pleasure in deriding the people of another; and seem to think that by lowering their neighbours, they are exalting themselves. The subject of this derision may be religion, government, poverty, dress, language, history, national peculiarities and habits, however indefensive;—nay, industry, riches, and comforts, can be turned into ridicule by those who envy what they are too ignorant, or too idle to attain. The Moabites, by perverting history, seem to have ridiculed the Israelites as "thieves," and to have expressed that malignant joy at their disasters which is the surest evidence of a weak understanding and a bad heart; and the certain forerunner of that divine judgment against private or public malice, which prophecy occasionally reveals as a warning, but which Providence always inflicts as a part of God's uniform and unalterable government.—Ed.

[‡] His lies shall not so effect his evil purposes, nor enable him to gratify his malignant and causeless wrath. The probability is, that the Moabites had been active in misrepresenting the Jews to the Chaldeans.—Ed.

[*] Three years old, as the date of maturity, and the consequent emblem of perfection, was the age required by JEHOVAH for every animal of the covenant sacrifice with Abraham (Gen. 15. 9.); of which sacrifice, the "heifer" was the first. It is therefore not probable that the allusion is, as Blayney supposes, to a heifer "lowing after her lost calf," (for such instinctive language of maternal affection is not peculiar to any age,) but to an animal devoted to sacrifice, as Moab was to divine judgment.—Ed.

[†] There are two views of every national calamity. (1) As it is the effect of God's judgment. (2) As it is the work of Satan's malice. Viewed in the first aspect, the believer always acquiesces, frequently rejoices. Viewed in the second, he always acquiesces, but often weeps. Thus our Lord wept over Jerusalem at the very moment he announced her doom. Thus the prophet condemns Moab for her sins, but weeps over the ruin her sins are about to accomplish.—Ed.

with the spiteful or treacherous enemies of his people at last: and, if he be against us, who can be for us? The more we trust to creatures for help, the more sad disappointments we shall meet with in a time of need. Yea, great distress may make us even to forget we have our darling babes, or to wish they had never been born. But, notwithstanding the confusions of war, every stroke is directed by the hand of God; and none can stop it till it has finished his work.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLVIII.—God is the author and manager of all the awful judgments executed upon nations or persons. And with tremendous exactness, activity, and fury, his agents perform their work. Such as could not be ashamed out of their idolatry by his word must be made ashamed of it by his rod, and be convinced by experience that their idols cannot help them. Long outward prosperity is a snare to men's souls; and by it wicked men encourage themselves to more ungodliness. When men enjoy their good things here, they have none to expect in eternity. When God has borne long with sinful nations, they may expect calamities, surprising, terrible, lamentable, shameful, and complicated, but all of them righteous. And it is of infinite mercy if they issue not in everlasting destruction. Nor need presumptuous mockers of God and his people to wonder if their bands be made strong, or if their presumption become the prelude of their ruin.

20 Therefore hear the counsel of the LORD that he hath taken against Edom, and his purposes that he hath purposed against the inhabitants of Teman; Surely [t]the least of the flock[‡] shall draw them out;[§] surely he [u]shall make their habitations desolate with them.

21 [x]The earth is moved at the noise of their fall; at the cry the noise thereof was heard in the [‖] Red sea.

22 Behold, he shall come up and [y] fly as the eagle, and spread his wings over Bozrah: and at that day shall the heart of the mighty men of Edom [z]be as the heart of a woman in her pangs.

23 ¶ [a]Concerning Damascus. Hamath is confounded, and Arpad: for they have heard evil tidings; they are [*]faint-hearted:[†] there is sorrow [‡]on the sea; it cannot be quiet.

24 Damascus is [b]waxed feeble, and turneth herself to flee, and fear hath seized on her: anguish and sorrows have taken her, as a woman in travail.

25 How is the [c]city of praise not left, the city of my joy!

26 [d]Therefore [e]her young men shall fall in her streets, and all the men of war shall be cut off in that day, saith the LORD of hosts.

27 And I will kindle a [f]fire in the wall of Damascus, and it shall consume the palaces of [g]Ben-hadad.

28 ¶ [h]Concerning Kedar, and concerning the kingdoms[§] of [i]Hazor, which Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon shall smite, thus saith the LORD, [k]Arise ye, go up to Kedar, and spoil the men [l]of the east.

29 [m]Their tents and their flocks shall they take away: they shall take to themselves their curtains, and all their vessels, and their camels; and they shall cry unto them, [n]Fear is on every side.

30 ¶ [o]Flee, [‖]get you far off, dwell deep,[*] O ye inhabitants of Hazor, saith the LORD; for [p]Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon hath taken counsel against you, and hath conceived a purpose against you.

31 Arise, get you up unto the [†]wealthy nation that [q]dwelleth without care, saith the LORD, which have neither gates nor bars,[‡] which [r]dwell alone.

CHAPTER L.

The judgment of Babylon, and redemption of Israel.

THE word that the LORD spake against Babylon, and against the land of the Chaldeans, [*]by Jeremiah the prophet.

2 Declare ye among the nations, and publish, and [†]set up a standard;[‡] publish, and conceal not: say, Babylon is taken, Bel[§] is confounded, Merodach[§] is broken in pieces; her idols are confounded, her images are broken in pieces.

3 For out of the north[‖] there cometh up a nation against her, which shall make her land desolate, and none shall dwell therein: they shall remove, they shall depart, both man and beast.

4 ¶ In those days,[*] and in that time, saith the LORD, the children of Israel shall come, they and the children of Judah together, going and weeping: they shall go, and [a]seek the LORD their God.

5 They shall ask the way to Zion with their faces thitherward, saying, Come, and let us attack your strongest cities; and, acting under my direction and influence, who am the Almighty Sovereign of the world, shall, without control, ravage your whole country.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLIX.—With strict jealousy God remarks the injuries done to his distressed people. And in very different forms he plagues and terrifies them who had plagued and terrified his favourites; while the losses of the injured are repaid out of the unjust gains of the injurers. It is therefore vain for backsliders from God to indulge pleasure, or to trust in any created enjoyment. When God lays countries desolate, widows and children are peculiarly miserable. O how great is the kindness of God, that invites such to be trusted to his care! But it is impossible to avert or withstand his angry blow, since he can make his weakest instruments too brave and valiant for the mightiest

6 My people hath been lost sheep: their shepherds have caused them to go astray, they have turned them away on the mountains: they have gone from mountain to hill, they have forgotten their † resting-place.

8 Remove§ out of the midst of Babylon, and go forth out of the land of the Chaldeans, and be as the he-goats‖ before the flocks.

9 ¶ For, lo, I will raise, and cause to come up against Babylon, an assembly of great nations from the north country, and they shall set themselves in array against her; from thence she shall be taken: their arrows shall be as of a mighty * expert man; none shall return in vain.

10 And Chaldea shall be a spoil: all that spoil her [d] shall be satisfied, saith the LORD.

11 Because ye were glad; because ye rejoiced, O ye * destroyers of mine heritage: because ye are grown † fat as the heifer at grass, and bellow as bulls;

12 Your mother shall be sore confounded; she that bare you shall be ashamed: behold, † the hindermost‡ of the nations shall be a wilderness, a dry land, and a desert.

13 Because of the wrath of the LORD it shall not be inhabited, but it shall be wholly desolate:§ every one that goeth by Babylon shall be astonished, and hiss at all her plagues.

14 Put yourselves in array against Babylon round about: all ye that bend the bow, shoot at her, spare no arrows: for she hath sinned against the LORD.

15 Shout against her round about: she hath given her hand: her § foundations‖ are fallen, her walls are thrown down; for it is the vengeance of the LORD: take vengeance upon her; as she hath done, do unto her.

16 Cut off the * sower from Babylon, and him that handleth the † sickle in the time of harvest: for fear of the oppressing sword they shall turn every one to his people, and they shall flee every one to his own land.‡

17 ¶ Israel is a scattered sheep; the [h] lions have driven him away: first the king of Assyria hath devoured him; and last this Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon hath broken his bones.

18 Therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Behold, I will punish the king of Babylon and his land, [i] as I have punished the king of Assyria.*

19 [k] And I will bring Israel† again to his habitation, and he shall feed on Carmel and Bashan, and his soul shall be satisfied upon mount Ephraim and Gilead.

20 In those days, and in that time, saith the LORD, [l] the iniquity of Israel shall be sought† for, and there shall be none; and the sins of Judah, and they shall not be found: for I will pardon them whom [m] I reserve.

21 ¶ [n] Go up against the land § of Merathaim, even against it, and against the inhabitants of ‖ Pekod: waste and utterly destroy after them, saith the LORD, and do [o] according to all that I have commanded thee.

23 [q] How is the hammer of the whole earth cut asunder and broken! how is Babylon become a desolation among the nations!

24 [r] I have laid a snare for thee, and thou art also taken, O Babylon, and thou wast not aware: thou art found, and also caught, because thou [s] hast striven against the LORD.*

25 [t] The LORD hath opened his armoury, and hath brought forth the weapons of his indignation: for this [u] is the work of the Lord GOD of hosts in the land of the Chaldeans.

29 [c] Call together the archers against Babylon: all ye that bend the bow, camp against it round about; let none thereof escape: [d] recompense her according to her work; according to all that she hath done, do unto her: for [e] she hath been proud against the LORD, against the Holy One of Israel.

30 [f] Therefore shall her young men fall in the streets, and all her men of war shall be cut off in that day, saith the LORD.

22 A [p] sound of battle is in the land, and of great destruction.

23 [q] How is the hammer of the whole earth cut asunder and broken! how is Babylon become a desolation among the nations!

24 [r] I have laid a snare for thee, and thou art also taken, O Babylon, and thou wast not aware: thou art found, and also caught, because thou [s] hast striven against the LORD.*

25 [t] The LORD hath opened his armoury, and hath brought forth the weapons of his indignation: for this [u] is the work of the Lord GOD of hosts in the land of the Chaldeans.

26 [x] Come against her † from the utmost border, ‡ open her storehouses; § [y] cast her up as heaps, and destroy her utterly: let nothing of her be left.

27 Slay all her * bullocks; let them go down to the slaughter: wo unto them! for [a] their day is come, the time of their visitation.‖

28 [b] The voice of them that flee and escape out of the land of Babylon, to declare in Zion the vengeance of the LORD our God, the vengeance of his temple.*

29 [c] Call together the archers against Babylon: all ye that bend the bow, camp against it round about; let none thereof escape: [d] recompense her according to her work; according to all that she hath done, do unto her: for [e] she hath been proud against the LORD, against the Holy One of Israel.

30 [f] Therefore shall her young men fall in the streets, and all her men of war shall be cut off in that day, saith the LORD.

31 Behold, I am against thee, § O thou † most proud, saith the Lord GOD of hosts: [h] for thy day is come, the time that I will visit thee.

32 [i] And ‡ the most proud shall stumble and fall, and none shall raise him up: and I will opposer, and can pull men from the strongest fortifications. And if his dearer favourites or persons less guilty, be punished, it is in vain for us to hope for an escape. Yea, if he continue his hand on us, we can never recover from our ruins, but must be dreadful and lasting monuments of his vengeance.—All earthly joy, pomp, power, or bravery, in the day of his wrath, do but render our ruin more dreadful. Nor can the most securely situated, or the most inoffensive, escape from his anger. The most retired are forced into the open world, and made to share in the common misery. And God often wonderfully debases nations before he signally advances them.

kindle a fire in his cities, and it shall devour all round about him.

33 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts, [k] The children of Israel and the children of Judah were oppressed together; and all that took them captives held them fast; they refused to let them go.

34 [l] Their Redeemer is strong; The LORD of hosts is his name: he shall thoroughly plead their cause, that he may [m] give rest to the land, and disquiet the inhabitants of Babylon.

35 ¶ A sword is upon the Chaldeans, saith the LORD, and upon the inhabitants of Babylon, [n] and upon her princes, and upon her wise men.

36 A sword is upon the [o] [*] liars; [†] and they shall dote: a sword is [p] upon her mighty men; and they shall be dismayed.

37 A sword is upon their horses, and upon their chariots, and upon all [q] the mingled people [‡] that are in the midst of her; and they shall become [r] as women: a sword is upon her treasures; and [s] they shall be robbed.

38 [t] A drought is upon her waters; and they shall be dried up: for it is [u] the land of graven images, and they are mad [§] upon their [‖] idols.

39 [x] Therefore the wild beasts of the desert, with the wild beasts of the islands, shall dwell there, and the owls shall dwell therein: and it shall be no more inhabited for ever; neither shall it be dwelt in from generation to generation.

40 [y] As God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah, and the neighbour cities thereof, saith the LORD; so shall no man abide there, neither shall any son of man dwell therein.[*]

41 [z] Behold, a people shall come from the north, and a great nation, and many kings shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth.

42 [a] They shall hold the bow and the lance: [b] they are cruel, [†] and will not show mercy: [p] their voice shall roar like the sea, and they shall ride upon horses, every one put in array, like a man to the battle, against thee, O daughter of Babylon.

43 [d] The king of Babylon hath heard the report of them, and his hands waxed feeble; anguish took hold of him, and pangs, as of a woman in travail.

44 Behold, he shall come up [e] like a lion from the swelling of Jordan unto the habitation of the strong; but I will make them suddenly run [f] away from her: and who is [g] a chosen man, that I may appoint over her? for who is like me? and [h] who will [*] appoint me the time? and who is that [i] shepherd that will stand before me? [†]

45 Therefore hear ye [k] the counsel of the LORD, that he hath taken against Babylon; and his purposes, that he hath purposed against the land of the Chaldeans: Surely [l] the least of the flock shall draw them out; surely he shall make their habitation desolate with them.

46 [m] At the noise of the taking of Babylon the earth is moved, and the cry is heard among the nations.

CHAPTER LI.

(1) God's judgment against Babylon a righteous retribution for their cruelty to Israel: 1—58. (2) Jeremiah delivers the book of the prophecy to be cast into the river, as an emblem of the hopeless sinking of Babylon: 59—64.

THUS saith the LORD, Behold, [a] I will raise up against Babylon, and against them that dwell in the [*] midst of them [b] that rise up against me, a [c] destroying wind; [†]

2 And will send unto Babylon [d] fanners, that shall fan her, and shall empty her land: for in the day of [*] trouble they shall be against her round about.

3 Against him that bendeth [f] let the archer bend his bow, and against him that lifteth himself up in his [‡] brigandine: and [g] spare ye not her young men, destroy ye utterly all her host.

4 Thus the slain shall fall in the land of the Chaldeans, and they that are thrust through in her streets.

5 [h] For Israel hath not been forsaken, nor Judah of his God, of the LORD of hosts; though their land was filled with [i] sin against the Holy One of Israel.

6 [k] Flee out of the midst of Babylon, and deliver every man his soul: be not cut off in her iniquity; for this is the time of the LORD's vengeance: he will render unto her a recompense.

7 Babylon hath been a [l] golden cup in the LORD's hand, that made all the earth drunken: the nations have drunken of her wine; therefore the nations are mad. [§]

8 Babylon is suddenly fallen and destroyed: howl for her; take balm for her pain, if so be she may be healed.

9 We would [l] have healed Babylon, but she is not healed: [m] forsake her, and let us go every one into his own country; for her judgment reacheth unto heaven, and is lifted up even to the skies.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. L.—Certain but dreadful is the ruin of arrogant sinners, and especially those who oppress or murder the people of God. How unstable are all earthly things! The Medes and Persians, whom the Chaldeans had but lately subdued, now tread their conquerors under their feet. And no idols, no princes, no counsellors, no diviners, no armies, no lofty walls or deep rivers, no wealth or bravery, can protect them from the weakest foe. The measure which they had meted out to others is meted out to them again, pressed down and running over. And their fearful judgments exactly correspond to their horrid iniquities.—But in what fearful things in righteousness doth God answer the prayers of his people! Yet certain is their deliverance, their restoration to fellowship with God, to safety, comfort, and full forgiveness. And if we begin to be tenderly affected under God's corrections, it is a token that our merciful deliverance is near. In promoting a good cause, it is good to be zealously affected, and to be among the first to lead the way. It is highly honourable to return to God and our covenant obligations to him. And happy is it when the cruel insults and upbraiding of our enemies are exchanged for the smiles, the vindications of our God. And when our hearts and lives are reformed, and our sins are forgiven, how sweet are even the temporal mercies which we then enjoy!

10 The LORD [n]hath brought forth our righteousness:* come, and let us declare in Zion the work of the LORD our God.

11 Make [†]bright the arrows; gather the shields: the LORD hath raised up the spirit of the kings of the Medes: for his device is against Babylon, to destroy it; because it is the vengeance of the LORD, the vengeance of his temple.

12 [o]Set up the standard upon the walls of Babylon, make the watch strong; set up the watchmen; prepare the [‡]ambushes: for the LORD hath both devised and done that which he spake against the inhabitants of Babylon.[§]

13 O thou that dwellest upon [p]many waters,[‖] abundant in treasures, [q]thine end is come, and the measure of thy covetousness.

14 The LORD of hosts hath sworn by [*]himself, saying, Surely I will fill thee with men, as with caterpillars, and they shall [†]lift up a shout against thee.

15 He hath made the earth by his power, he hath established the world by his wisdom, and hath stretched out the heaven by his understanding.

16 When he uttereth his voice, there is a [‡]multitude of waters in the heavens; and he causeth the vapours to ascend from the ends of the earth: he maketh lightnings with rain, and bringeth forth the wind out of his treasures.

17 Every man [§]is brutish by his knowledge; every founder is confounded by the graven image: for his molten image is falsehood, and there is no breath in them.

18 They are vanity, the work of errors: in the time of their visitation they shall perish.

19 [r]The Portion[‖] of Jacob is not like them; for he is the former of all things: and Israel is the rod of his inheritance; The LORD of hosts is his name.

20 Thou art my battle-axe* and weapons of war: for [†]with thee will I break in pieces the nations; and with thee will I destroy kingdoms;

21 And with thee will I break in pieces the horse and his rider; and with thee will I break in pieces the chariot and his rider;

22 With thee also will [s]I break in pieces man and woman; and with thee will I break in pieces old and young; and with thee will I break in pieces the young man and the maid;

23 I will also break in pieces with thee the shepherd and his flock; and with thee will I break in pieces the husbandman and his yoke of oxen; and with thee will I break in pieces captains and rulers.

24 And [t]I will render unto Babylon, and to all the inhabitants of Chaldea, all their evil that they have done in Zion in your sight, saith the LORD.

25 Behold, I am against thee, O [u]destroying mountain,* saith the LORD, which [x]destroyest all the earth; and I will stretch out mine hand upon thee, and roll thee down from the rocks, and will make thee a burnt[†] mountain.

26 And they shall not take of thee a stone for a corner, nor a stone for foundations; but thou shalt be [‡]desolate for ever, saith the LORD.

27 Set ye up a standard in the land, blow the trumpet among the nations, prepare the nations against her, [y]call together against her the kingdoms of Ararat, Minni, and Ashchenaz; appoint a captain against her; [z]cause the horses to come up as the rough caterpillars.

28 Prepare against her the nations with [a]the kings of the Medes, the captains thereof, and all the rulers thereof, and all the land of his dominion.

29 And [b]the land shall tremble and sorrow: for [c]every purpose of the LORD shall be performed against Babylon, to make the land of Babylon a desolation without an inhabitant.

30 [d]The mighty men of Babylon have forborne to fight, they have remained in their holds: their might hath failed; they became as women: [e]they have burnt her dwelling-places; [f]her bars are broken.

31 [g]One post shall run to meet another, and one messenger to meet another, to show [h]the king of Babylon that his city is taken at one end;[§]

32 And that the [i]passages[‖] are stopped, and [k]the reeds* they have burnt with fire, and the men of war are affrighted.

33 For thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, The daughter of Babylon is like [l]a thrashing-floor, [†]it is time to thrash her: yet a little while, and the time of her [m]harvest shall come.

34 Nebuchadrezzar the king of Babylon hath devoured me, he hath crushed me, he hath made me an empty vessel, he hath swallowed me up like a dragon, he hath filled his belly with my delicates, he hath cast me out.

35 [n][‡]The violence done to me and to [o]my [§]flesh be upon Babylon, shall the [‖]inhabitant of Zion say; and, My blood upon the inhabitants of Chaldea, shall Jerusalem say.

36 Therefore thus saith the LORD, Behold, I will plead thy cause, and take vengeance for thee; and I [p]will dry up her sea,* and make her springs dry.

CHAP. LI.—Ver. 13. Thou Babylon, situated upon the great river Euphrates, and who rulest over many nations, the wealth of which thou hast collected by thy conquests, now the time fixed by God for the increase of thy wealth is finished. 38—46. Their mad roaring at their drunken and idolatrous revels shall be turned into fearful howlings: and, while they are inflamed with wine, the Persians shall murder them, their king and their princes. At their idolatrous festival in honour of their god Sheshach, shall Babylon be surprised by multitudes of irresistible enemies, and at last become quite desolate, and a fen or lake.—And while their idols shall be destroyed by the Persians, who hate images, the spoils which they took from the nations around, especially from the Jewish temple, and dedicated to their idols, shall be forced back, and restored to the owners: and no more shall multitudes bring presents, or come to worship their idols. Hasten out of Babylon

37 And Babylon shall become heaps, a dwelling-place for dragons, an astonishment, and an hissing, without an inhabitant.

38 They shall roar together like lions; they shall [*] yell as lions' whelps.

39 [q] In their heat I will make their feasts, and I will make them drunken,[†] that they may rejoice, and sleep a perpetual sleep, and not wake, saith the LORD.

40 [r] I will bring them down like lambs to the slaughter, like rams with he-goats.

41 How is [s] Sheshach[‡] taken! and how is the praise of the whole earth surprised! how is Babylon become an astonishment among the nations!

42 [t] The sea[§] is come up upon Babylon; she is covered with the multitude of the waves thereof.

43 [u] Her cities are a desolation, a dry land, and a wilderness, a land wherein no man dwelleth, neither doth any son of man pass thereby.

44 [x] And I will punish Bel in Babylon; and [y] I will bring forth out of his mouth that which he hath swallowed up:[‖] and the nations shall not flow together any more unto him; yea, [z] the wall of Babylon shall fall.

45 My people, [a] go ye out of the midst of her, and deliver ye every man his soul from the fierce anger of the LORD.

46 And lest your heart faint, and ye fear for the rumour that shall be heard in the land; [b] a rumour shall both come one year, and after that in another year shall come a rumour, and [c] violence in the land, ruler against ruler.

47 Therefore, behold, the days come, that [d] I will [] do judgment upon the graven images of Babylon; and [] her whole land shall be confounded, and all her slain shall fall in the midst of her.

48 [f] Then the heaven and the earth, and all that is therein, shall sing for Babylon: [g] for the spoilers shall come unto her from the north, saith the LORD.

49 [h †] As Babylon hath caused the slain of Israel to fall, so at Babylon shall fall the slain of all [‡] the earth.

50 [i] Ye that have escaped the sword, go away, stand not still: remember the LORD afar off, and let Jerusalem come into your mind.

51 We are confounded,[§] because we have heard reproach; shame hath covered our faces: for [k] strangers are come into the sanctuaries of the LORD's house.

[‖] Thus far, &c.—That is, the prophetic words of Jeremiah, which the LORD revealed to him concerning Babylon. The subjoined history, may have been written by the prophet, by Ezra, or some other.—ED.

52 Wherefore, behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that [l] I will do judgment upon her graven images, and through all her land the wounded shall groan.

53 [m] Though Babylon should mount up to heaven, and though she should fortify the height of her strength, yet [n] from me shall spoilers come unto her, saith the LORD.

54 [o] A sound of a cry cometh from Babylon, and great destruction from the land of the Chaldeans:

56 [q] Because the spoiler is come upon her, even upon Babylon, and [r] her mighty men are taken; every one of their bows is broken: for [s] the LORD God of recompenses shall surely requite.

57 And [t] I will make drunk[‡] her princes, and her wise men, her captains, and her rulers, and her mighty men: and they shall sleep a perpetual sleep, and not wake, saith the King, whose name is the LORD of hosts.

58 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, [u §] The broad[‖] walls of Babylon shall be utterly [*] broken, and her [x] high gates shall [y] be burnt with fire; and [z] the people shall labour in vain, and the folk in the fire, and they shall be weary.

59 ¶ The word which Jeremiah the prophet commanded Seraiah the son of [a] Neriah, the son of Maaseiah, when he went [b] with Zedekiah the king of Judah into Babylon, in the fourth year of his reign: and this Seraiah was a [†] quiet prince.[‡]

60 So Jeremiah [c] wrote in a book all the evil that should come upon Babylon, even [d] all these words that are written against Babylon.

61 And Jeremiah said to [e] Seraiah, When thou comest to Babylon, and shalt see, and shalt [f] read all these words, 62 Then shalt thou say, O LORD, thou hast spoken against this place, [g] to cut it off, that none shall remain in it, neither man nor beast, but that it shall be [§] desolate for ever.

63 And it shall be, when thou hast made an end of reading this book, that [h] thou shalt bind a stone to it, and cast it into the midst of Euphrates;

64 And thou shalt say, [i] Thus shall Babylon sink, and shall not rise from the evil that I will bring upon her; and [k] they shall be weary. [‖] Thus far are the words of Jeremiah.

as far as ye can, O ye Jews, and let not the rumours of Cyrus' invasion, or the revolt of the Chaldean lords, in the least terrify you, for God will by these very means work out your deliverance. 50, 51. O ye Jews who have been preserved from the slaughter at the taking of Babylon, embrace the first opportunity of returning to Canaan, to rebuild your temple to God; deeply ashamed that, for your fathers' iniquities, it has so long lain in rubbish, and God been so much reproached on that account.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. LI.—Fearful are the destructions which await those who have long been employed in executing God's judgments upon others. And nothing more hastens their ruin than their insolence against God and abuse of his people. Even when he frowns upon these himself, he cannot endure others to insult, murder, or oppress them. And it is easy for that Almighty God, who is infinitely superior to idols, to make his counsel to stand, and to do all his pleasure. Strong and brave are the weakest when God animates them to the battle: and weak and dispirited the strongest when God fights against them. Vain is every thing earthly, as all may issue at last in such misery and desolation. But, alas!

A. M. cir. 3405. B. C. cir. 599.

ZEDEKIAH was [a] one and twenty years old when he [*] began to reign; and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem: and his mother's name was Hamutal, the daughter of Jeremiah of Libnah.

2 And [b] he did that which was evil in the eyes of the LORD, [c] according to all that Jehoiakim had done.

3 For [d] through the anger of the LORD [†] it came to pass in Jerusalem and Judah, till he had cast them out from his presence, that [e] Zedekiah rebelled against the king of Babylon.

4 ¶ And it came to pass, in the [f] ninth [‡] year of his reign, in the [g] tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, that Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon came, he and all his army, against Jerusalem, [h] and pitched against it, and built forts against it round about.

5 So the city was besieged unto the eleventh year of king Zedekiah.

6 And in [i] the fourth month, in the ninth day of the month, [k] the famine was sore in the city, so that there was no bread for the people of the land.[§]

7 Then [l] the city was broken up, and all the men of war fled, and went forth out of the city by night, by the way of the gate between the two walls, which was by the king's garden; (now the Chaldeans were by the city round about;) and they went by the way of the plain.

8 ¶ But the army of the Chaldeans [m] pursued after the king, and overtook Zedekiah in the plains of Jericho; and all his army were scattered from him.

9 Then they took the king, and carried him up unto the king of Babylon to Riblah, in the land of Hamath; where he gave judgment upon him.

10 [n] And the king of Babylon slew the sons of Zedekiah before his eyes: he slew also all the princes of Judah in Riblah.

11 Then [o] he [||] put out the eyes of Zedekiah; and the king of Babylon bound him in [*] chains, and carried him to Babylon, and put him in [†] prison till the day of his death.

12 ¶ Now, in the [p] fifth month, in the tenth day of the month, (which was the nineteenth year of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon,) came Nebuzar-adan [‡] [q] captain of the guard, which [§] served the king of Babylon, into Jerusalem,[||]

13 [r] And burnt the house of the LORD, and the king's house; and all the houses of Jerusalem, and all the houses of the great men, burnt he with fire:

14 And all the army of the Chaldeans, that were with the captain of the guard, brake down all the walls of Jerusalem round about.

15 [s] Then Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard carried away captive certain of the poor of the people, and the residue of the people that remained in the city, and those that fell away, that fell to the king of Babylon, and the rest of the multitude.

16 But Nebuzar-adan the captain of the guard left certain of the poor of the land for vine-dressers,* and for husbandmen.

17 ¶ [t] Also the pillars of brass that were in the house of the LORD, and the bases, and the brazen sea that was in the house of the LORD, the Chaldeans brake, and carried all the brass of them to Babylon.

18 The caldrons also, and the [†] shovels, and the snuffers, and the [‡] bowls, and the spoons, and all the vessels of brass wherewith they ministered, took they away.

19 And the basons, and the [§] fire-pans, and the bowls, and the caldrons, [u] and the candlesticks, and the spoons, and the cups; that which was of gold in gold, and that which was of silver in silver, took the captain of the guard away.

20 [x] The two pillars, one sea, and twelve brazen bulls that were under the bases, which king Solomon had made in the house of the LORD; [y] the brass of all these vessels was without weight.

21 And concerning the pillars, [z] the height of one pillar was eighteen cubits; and a [||] fillet of twelve cubits did compass it; and the thickness thereof was four fingers: it was hollow.

22 And a chapiter of brass was upon it; [a] and the height of one chapiter was five cubits, with net-work and pomegranates upon the chapiters round about, all of brass: the second pillar also and the pomegranates were like unto these.

23 And there were ninety and six pomegranates on a side; and all the pomegranates upon the net-work were [b] an hundred round about.

24 ¶ [c] And the captain of the guard took [d] Seraiah the chief priest, and [e] Zephaniah the second priest, and the three keepers of the [f] door:

25 He took also out of the city an [g] eunuch, which had the charge of the men of war; and seven men of them that [h] were near the king's person, which were found in the city; and the [*] principal scribe of the host, who mustered the people of the land; and threescore men of the how dreadful must be the last, the eternal, destruction of the wicked, of which all the overthrows of cities and nations are but alarming preludes! Quickly should we flee from among them, that we share not in their sins and their plagues. In every affliction we suffer on earth, let us think on God, and remember his mercy and truth. And though the accomplishment of his words be ever so unlikely, let us never stagger at his promise through unbelief. Is there anything too hard for the LORD?

* To what personal qualities, or political circumstances, Jehoiachin was indebted for this relaxation and favour, we are not informed. It is not even stated that he had repented, so that it might appear that "when a man's ways please the Lord, he maketh his enemies to be at peace with him." (Prov. 16. 17.) The fact seems rather to be historically recorded as a specimen of what is prophetically foretold of the favour which the Gentiles will yet feel and extend towards the Jews, and of that final exaltation of the spiritual throne of their king above all the kingdoms and rulers of this world.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. LII.—How corrupt dignified persons, churches, and nations sometimes become! But God casts out none from his church or protection till they first cast off him. If sinners wilfully depart from him, he gives them up to their own folly; and often nothing more is necessary for their destruction. Iniquity not only deserves, but hastens men's ruin upon them. And however sweet rebellion against God be at first, it is dreadful and bitter in its fruits. And the folly of parents often plunges their children into ruin. Divine ordinances, long abused, are removed at last. And external privileges, instead of excusing our sins, or exempting from miseries, become a grievous aggravation of both. Nor can our unbelief make void God's promises any more than his threatenings. —In this world all things are in a perpetual revolution; new kings, new laws, new conditions, new frames. And long nights of trouble often usher in joyful deliverances. Our times are all in God's hand, as well as the hearts of all men with whom we deal. And he can make our most wicked and infatuated oppressors to favour us whenever he sees meet.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF JEREMIAH.

JEREMIAH, as a prophet, "hated without a cause," or simply for telling the truth, for denouncing sin and exhorting to holiness; and persecuted to bonds, imprisonment, and, most probably, to a cruel and ignominious death, may justly be regarded as an eminent type of Messiah in his prophetic office. Each typical person is one who has just a certain measure of the Spirit of Christ bestowed upon him—is placed in circumstances, to a certain extent, similar to those in which Messiah is to be placed—and consequently, exhibits a certain measure of the temper and character, which, "in the fulness of the time," Christ was intended to exhibit, of the work he was fitted to accomplish, and of the suffering he was destined to endure. In all these respects, Jeremiah was eminently a type of Messiah, whose day and kingdom he so clearly foresaw (see especially chap. 23. 5, 6. & 33. 14—18.). In one point of view, the character and circumstances of their respective times, there seems, no doubt, a wide difference; yet the sensual idolatry of the days of Jeremiah was not more idolatrous than the self-righteousness and traditions of the days of Christ, that had made "void the law of God," and converted the proud Pharisees into worshippers of themselves. The opposition, ingratitude, hatred, and cruelty, with which Jeremiah was treated by his countrymen, are striking similitudes of their subsequent treatment of Messiah. All these things, however, the Lord bore patiently, and prayed for the forgiveness of them that crucified him; and here Jeremiah has been supposed to have come short, and has been accused of an impatience and vehemence indicative of the spirit of a mere man, rather than of an inspired prophet. That neither Jeremiah nor any other has ever attained the full "measure of the stature of Christ," will readily be admitted; but that the accusations against him are unfounded, the offspring rather of a spurious sentimentalism, than of the "charity that thinketh no evil," it is hoped the previous notes have demonstrated. And while it is neither right, necessary, nor permissible, to defend, or even to palliate, an error in the servants of God; it is right, and an imperative duty to defend them against every unfounded accusation. In all the other attributes of a type, Jeremiah will be seen a striking image of his future Lord, and especially in the following points. (1) In the spirit of self-sacrifice when he prefers the companionship of his wretched and ungrateful kindred, to all the splendour and respect so generously proffered at the court of Babylon. (2) In the grief of heart he was called to endure. How accurately does he therein resemble the "man of sorrows," when he longs to weep "day and night for the slain of the daughter of his people!" (3) In the unshrinking boldness with which he denounced sin, and the affectionate earnestness with which he called sinners to repentance. (4) In the untiring energy with which, during a long and turbulent period, he continued to prosecute the work of his ministry; so that, like his Lord, he might well nigh say, "the zeal of thine house hath eaten me up." All these, with other graces, combined to shadow out in the servant, what his master would be at his appearing. And "all these things happened for our ensamples, and they are written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come." 1 Cor. 10. 11.

As an internal evidence of the antiquity of the book, it is not unworthy of remark that the months are reckoned by numbers; first, second, &c., a mode which was not used after the captivity, for during the seventy years, the Jews had learned, and afterwards continued to use, the Chaldaic names.

ADDITIONAL EDITORIAL NOTES ON THE BOOK OF JEREMIAH.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 15. Dan.—The north-eastern extremity of Judea, at which the Babylonians, coming from Damascus, entered the Holy Land. See ver. 6.——Ver. 16. Publish against Jerusalem, that watchers come from a far country.—"Watchers;" besiegers. An army, not of temporary marauders, but fully instructed in all the arts of war, and endurance of watchfulness.——Ver. 30. Though thou rendest thy face with painting.—"Though thou distend thine eyes with paint."—Boothroyd. The allusion is to the Eastern practice of painting the brows and edges of the eyelids black, which gives the white an enlarged and distended appearance, which custom has converted into an artificial beauty. So vain, so foolish, and so weak is humanity in departing from nature, when forsaking God!

CHAP. VI. Ver. 4, 5. The first clause conveys God's commission of judgment. The second, the alacrity of the summoned host to "go up at noon"—the usual time of repose. The third, declares their grief that they have not arrived in time to see to do the work of destruction; while, ver. 5. declares their impatience for a night attack—the ordinary time for the assault of fortresses.——Ver. 6. Cast a mount against Jerusalem.—The original is not a raised mount to overlook the walls, but any missile cast against them. The ballista, the catapulta, and the scorpion, were, in point of fact, enormous bows, variously contrived by means of springs, ropes, and levers, for shooting arrows or stones against besieged places.

CHAP. VIII. Ver. 3. Death shall be chosen rather than life.—Examples of the voluntary choice of death have frequently occurred among the Jews when cruelly persecuted under pretence of religion, but really on account of their wealth and usury. Thus, during the reign of king John, in the city of York in England, a large party, having first put their wives and children to death, set fire to the place in which they were assailed, and, with all their riches, perished miserably by their own hands.——Ver. 22. Balm in Gilead. The Balsamum Judaicum has been celebrated by Pliny, Tacitus, &c., for its costliness, its medicinal virtues, and as the product of Judea alone, and of one particular spot in that country which Josephus assigns to Jericho. Bochart, however, considers the Gilead balm to be the resin of the Terebinth, which grows abundantly in that district; and, as it, and similar products are often used in dressing wounds at particular stages, this opinion seems the most probable.

CHAP. X. Ver. 18. Behold, I will sling out the inhabitants.—"The inhabitant of the fortress" (ver. 17.) is here introduced, bemoaning his grievous wound and the captivity and loss of his children.——Ver. 20. My tabernacle is spoiled.—The union of the "tabernacle" with the "pastors and flocks," (ver. 21.) seems to fix the allusion to the tabernacle of the congregation in the wilderness; and which was afterwards set up in Jerusalem by David, previous to the building of the temple. It is the legitimate emblem of all religious ordinances and assemblies for the public worship of JEHOVAH.——Ver. 22. Behold, the noise of the bruit is come.—"Hark! a noise, behold it draws near."——Dragons.—There is perhaps no distinct species of animal to which the word "dragon" can be applied; it seems here rather a generic name for all wild beasts frequenting solitary places.——Ver. 23. The way of man is not in himself.—Man is neither wise enough to discover, nor steady enough to pursue the way of safety and success; his wisdom, and strength, and success must be the gift of God. Jam. 1. 17.——Ver. 24. O Lord, correct me, but with judgment.—"With judgment," to reform; not "with anger," to extirpate.

CHAP. XII. Ver. 4. He shall not see our last end.—Most probably an allusion to Deut. 32. 29., and the previous description of the "latter end," the state of the Jewish people in "the latter day," ver. 15—28. "He shall not see," the wickedness charged against this expression can scarcely refer to Jeremiah, as if he had prophesied falsely, or should not live to see his predictions fulfilled, but rather to God, of whom they insinuate or affirm that he is either indisposed or unable to execute his threatened judgments. See Eccl. 8. 11.——Ver. 16, 17. Then shall they be built in the midst of my people; but if they will not obey, I will utterly pluck up and destroy that nation.—This passage contains a distinct promise of the restoration of the Philistines, Moabites, &c., in the event of their conversion to Christ;—and in a form that seems to indicate that some of them will be converted, and thereupon restored and reorganized into kingdoms—while one will remain in obstinate heathenism, and be "utterly plucked up and destroyed."

CHAP. XIII. Ver. 1. Thus saith the Lord.—This is a prophecy in the distinctly symbolical form, and, in some sense, parallel to the parabolic teaching of our Lord.——Go and get thee a linen girdle.—The girdle is "linen" for two reasons. (1) Linen was of Egyptian origin, and is therefore used as a pictorial remembrance of past slavery, followed by future captivity. (2) Because, like Elijah and John, (2 Kin. 1. 8. Mat. 3. 4.) it is most probable the prophet had customarily worn a leathern girdle; and now he assumes the linen, to exemplify Judah's taste for foreign finery, and contrast with it the state of rotten and unwashed raggedness, into which sin was about to reduce her.

CHAP. XV. Ver. 1. Though Moses and Samuel stood before me, yet my mind could not be toward this people.—By intercessory prayer Moses prevailed (Ex. 32. 34. Num. 14. 20.), and Samuel likewise (1 Sam. 7. 9.); for this "power with God" they are specially mentioned, Ps. 99. 6, 8. And while men inquire, cavil, and will neither understand nor believe that these things are so, the humble Christian can rely upon the word which testifies that "the effectual fervent (inwrought) prayer of a righteous man availeth much." Jam. 5. 16.——Ver. 7. I will fan them with a fan in the gates of the land.—An allusion to "fanning" or winnowing corn in gateways for sake of the air-draught.——Ver. 8. A spoiler at noonday.—In addition to the spoiler by night (ch. 6. 5.), the evils of invasion in its most aggravated shape; a city taken by storm and delivered up to plunder.——Ver. 9. She that hath born seven languisheth.—Is not this a prophetic allusion to "all the men of might, even seven thousand," whom Nebuchadnezzar carried away captive? See 2 Kin. 24. 16.——Ver. 10. A man of contention to the whole earth; "whole land."—Ver. 10, & 11. must be regarded as a parenthesis, containing a lamentation of the prophet on his persecution, and a promise of the LORD to protect him and his "remnant," not of days but of believing ones "who had not bowed the knee to Baal."——Ver. 12. Shall iron break the northern iron?—Shall iron alone (Judah) be able to break the northern iron (the Assyrians) combined with steel (the Chaldeans)?

CHAP. XVI. Ver. 7. Cup of consolation to drink for their father or for their mother.—This was a refreshment sent to mourners by their friends. In ancient times the Jews were accustomed to send bread, fruits, and wine; in modern times they send eggs, salt, and a small loaf, (Allen's Modern Judaism, p. 439.) which is sometimes called "the bread of bitterness," and seems to be alluded to 2 Sam. 3. 35. Ezek. 34. 16, 17. Hos. 9. 4.

CHAP. XVII. Ver. 1. The sin of Judah is written with a pen of iron, and with the point of a diamond.—The key to this difficult passage seems to be chap. 19. 5., where the Jews are charged with sacrificing their children to Baal. May it not, accordingly, be paraphrased thus:—"The sin of Judah is written with a pen of iron (in blood), and with the point of a diamond (or flint, some hard species of stone formed into a sacrificial knife, as was common with the heathen); it is graven upon the tables of their (the people's hard) hearts, (from which natural affection has been obliterated,) and upon the horns (ye priests) of your altars, (to which horns the helpless victims are bound) when they (the people) commemorate their (sacrificed) children at their altars and their groves," &c.

CHAP. XIX. Ver. 2. Go forth unto the valley of the son of Hinnom, which is by the entry of the east gate.—The valley of Hinnom lay to the south, Jos. 15. 8. How then could the east gate be found there? This circumstance has given rise to many conjectures, new translations, and proposed emendations of the text. May not the difficulty be solved by attending to the following facts. (1) The ancient Hebrews and modern Orientals call every wind that blows between north and south from the eastward "an east wind;" not attending to the subdivisions of the compass, as maritime nations must. (2) The valley of Hinnom lying towards the south, Jerusalem might consequently contain the "east gate" within any of its eastern points.

CHAP. XX. Ver. 14. Cursed be the day wherein I was born.—Brown Patterson, whose notes to the work of his venerable relative are generally most judicious, has here referred to the reasonableness of "taking into account" the "poetical and rhetorical embellishment" of the passage, during the interpretation of it, and enters a caveat against its being "used as a model for our own feelings in reference to our birth," &c. And in this admission and caveat there are, undoubtedly, many who would concur. But surely such interpreters must forget, (1) that "Thus saith the LORD," (ver. 4, &c.), speaking by his inspired prophet! and, if inspired for one part, surely inspired for all. And if not for all, where does inspiration end, and man begin? (2) They must forget, that even though there is much that is called "poetical and rhetorical embellishment," it is the embellishment of the Spirit of God, and requires no drawback for its interpretation. (3) They must forget, that "these things were written for our ensamples," our "models;" and that the only caveat necessary is, that we take care rightly to understand "the mind of the Spirit"—"the mind of Christ"—speaking by the prophet, and imitate, not in our own spirit, but in God's.

CHAP. XXIV. Ver. 1. Two baskets of figs were set before the temple of the Lord.—An allusion to the first-fruits presented before the LORD in his temple, Deut. 26. 2.

CHAP. XXVII. Ver. 1. In the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim, the son of Josiah king of Judah.—In several MSS., and in the Syriac and Arabic, it is "Zedekiah," which change ver. 3 seems to require; and this reading is supported by commentators of the highest rank. Still there seems an insuperable difficulty in the way, viz., Jehoiakim is specially described as "the son of Josiah," whereas Zedekiah was his brother, 2 Kin. 24. 17. Is it not, therefore, necessary to conclude that the authorized reading is correct? And may it not be explained thus? The word came to the prophet "in the beginning of the reign of Jehoiakim;" and it not only foretold the captivity, but the extinction or degradation of the line of Jehoiakim, and the elevation of Zedekiah, and the sending of the yokes and bonds, either actually or prophetically, by the ambassadors of the neighbouring states, who should come to congratulate him upon his accession to the throne of Judah.

CHAP. XXVIII. Ver. 1. In the beginning of the reign of Zedekiah king of Judah, in the fourth year.—From what year was it the fourth? Some think from the jubilee; but of this there is no intimation. May it not be estimated thus? Nebuchadnezzar conquered Judea, and rendered Jehoiakim tributary, from which period the principal computation of the seventy years' captivity commences. At the end of three years, however, Jehoiakim rebelled, when the invasion was renewed; and, on the death of Jehoiakim, which occurred soon after, Jehoiakin succeeded, and reigned three months, and was succeeded by Zedekiah in the fourth year since the first subjugation of Judea, and of the first captivity.

CHAP. XXX. Ver. 12. Incurable.—The word has been translated "desperate;" and it has also been explained as signifying "incurable" by human means. And this exposition is countenanced by ver. 17, in which health and healing are promised by God himself. Still there is a sense in which the bruise (of sin) may justly be called "incurable;" for, in truth, the "old man" is not healed but "mortified;" the "body of sin" is not renovated, but "destroyed." "Old things pass away, and all things become new." Rom. 6. 6. & 8. 13. 2 Cor. 5. 17.——Ver. 24. The latter days.—Marked not by any chronology, but by historical description of facts. Thus, they are noted, (Dan. 2. 28), as the days during, and subsequent to the subversion of the fourth monarchy; and in Acts 2. 17, the "last days," which seem to be identical with the "latter days," are dated from the miraculous outpouring of the Spirit of God in tongues and other miraculous gifts at Pentecost.

CHAP. XXXII. Ver. 3. Zedekiah king of Judah had shut him up.—Zedekiah presents a melancholy, but common, example of anger against the messenger of unwelcome news, or the offerer of good advice. If, instead of treating him with harshness and cruelty, Zedekiah had asked for an evidence of his divine commission, Jeremiah could have easily satisfied him by referring to his prophecy against Pashur and his friends (chap. 20. 6), and that against Hananiah (chap. 28. 16, 17); both of which had received such evident fulfilment as to put the commission of the prophet beyond all dispute.

CHAP. XXXIV. Ver. 2. Into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall burn it.—This prediction was historically fulfilled according to the narrative, 2 Kin. 25. 9. 2 Chr. 26. 19.

CHAP. XXXV. Ver. 2. House of the Rechabites.—The original Hebrew more properly signifies "family."——Ver. 5. I said unto them, Drink ye wine.—The prophet has been thoughtlessly accused of tempting the Rechabites to sin. It is sufficient to reply, that the whole was emblematic, a living parable. He knew their steady character; he knew they would not swerve from the precepts of their father, and had no intention of tempting them to a violation, but merely of affording them an opportunity of exhibiting their obedience.——Ver. 19. Jonadab the son of Rechab shall not want a man to stand before me for ever.—"To stand before me," denotes attendance on the person and service of a prince. (1 Kin. 10. 8.) And, as it appears that some of the Rechabites, or Kenites, returned from the captivity (1 Chr. 2. 55), it has been inferred that they were admitted into some office about the temple. All, however, that is necessarily implied in the phrase is the perpetuation of the family of Rechab. And of this fact there seems the most unquestionable evidence. Benjamin of Tudela professes to have found them in Arabia in great prosperity. Niebuhr obtained information of the Beni Kheiber inhabiting the mountains on the north-east of Medina, and holding no intercourse with the other Jews. And Joseph Wolf learned from Rabbi Mose Secot at Jerusalem, that, in his opinion, the Beni Kheiber were the Rechabites, who firmly adhere to the precepts of the son of Jonadab, have neither house, nor field, nor vineyard, and observe the law of Moses by tradition.—Missionary Journal, 1824, pp. 257, 261.

CHAP. XXXVI. Ver. 32. Wrote therein, from the mouth of Jeremiah, all the words of the book.—It is vain to question how Jeremiah could possibly repeat all that he had formerly dictated to Baruch. If God gave a revelation once, he can surely as well give it a second time. He that bestows an imperfect memory, to bind the spirit to application and diligence, can just as easily bestow a perfect memory to enable that spirit to execute its Lord's commission.

Chap. XXXVIII. Ver. 1. Malchiah heard the words that Jeremiah had spoken unto all the people.—In forming an estimate of the unbelieving disregard shown by the princes and people to the word of the Lord by Jeremiah, it is necessary to observe the argument from patriotism they were able to allege against his advice to submit to the Chaldeans—the high, and not undeserved reliance they placed upon their military courage—and, strange to say, the dependence they placed upon the miraculous protection of that God whose laws they disregarded. See, for illustration, Josephus' Antiq.

Chap. XXXIX. Ver. 2. The city was broken up.—The walls being breached by battering-rams, the city sacked, and the inhabitants driven away or made prisoners. —Note. By a barbarous common consent, called "a law of nations," certainly, however, not a law of God, a city whose garrison has bravely held out till it is taken by storm, is delivered up to plunder. In such cases, the infuriated soldiery are let loose from all restraint, their officers lose all control, and the city is literally "broken up" by the hands of merciless destroyers. Lord, hasten the time when they shall "beat their swords into ploughshares, and men shall learn war no more!"

Chap. XLIV. Ver. 6. My fury and mine anger was poured forth.—There are those who object against the ascription of "fury and anger" to God. The objections would disappear if they were not viewed as human passions, but as sources of the divine judgments. The ruin and desolation of idolatrous lands are visible facts; the justice that inflicts them, sets forth and measures "the fury and anger" of the Lord.

Chap. XLVI. Ver. 1. The word of the Lord which came to Jeremiah the prophet against the Gentiles; against Egypt.—There are here two prophecies. The first before a battle between the Egyptians and Babylonians near Carchemish, in which the Egyptians suffered a severe defeat. The second begins at ver. 13, and the desolation foretold took place in the 27th year of Jehoiakim's captivity, and the 16th after the destruction of Jerusalem, as may be collected from Ezek. 29. 17, where Nebuchadnezzar's army receives a promise of the spoils of Egypt as wages for their fruitless toils and dangers in the siege of Tyre, which promise was fulfilled the same year. See Josephus' Antiq. b. 10. c. 9. and Rollin's An. Hist. vol. I. b. 1.

Chap. XLVIII. Ver. 1. Moab.—So called from Moab the son of Lot. It is bounded on the west by the Dead Sea, on the south by Midian, on the north by the river Arnon, and on the east by the deserts of Arabia. The Israelites were expressly forbidden to injure the Moabites (Deut. 2. 9), but this forbearance was repaid not only with inhospitality, but malice; for the Moabites hired Balaam to curse Israel, and joined with the Midianites in enticing them to sin, (Num. xxi. and xxiv. Deut. 23. 2.) During the period of the judges, Moab held Israel in bondage for 18 years, from which they were delivered by Ehud, (Jud. iii.) Moab was completely subdued by David; but, during the decline of the kingdom of Israel, they regained their independence, and seized on the greater part of the possessions of the tribe of Reuben, (2 Kin. 13. 20.) After an invasion by Shalmanezer (Is. xv, xvi. Amos 2. 1), Moab soon regained its strength, and became one of the most flourishing kingdoms of Asia. It was sadly devastated by Nebuchadnezzar, who carried into captivity the greater number of its inhabitants, (2 Kin. 24. 2. Ezek. xxv.) After various recoveries and disasters, it fell under the power of the Romans, and the whole country is studded with relics of that extinct empire. The natural fertility of the soil is nearly unparalleled, yet the whole country is a desert—a national monument of God's judgments upon national sins. See ver. 9.—— Ver. 38. House-tops of Moab.—The roofs of Eastern houses being generally flat, the "house-top" served as a principal apartment for the assembling of families.

THE LAMENTATIONS OF JEREMIAH

Are an appendix to his predictions; written not in the foresight, but on observing the desolations which they bewail;—not for Josiah's death, of whom there is not the smallest hint in the book, but for the destruction of Jerusalem and its temple, and the unhinging of the Jewish church and state, by Nebuchadnezzar. The composition is poetic and singular, each verse, in each chapter, beginning with a different letter of the alphabet, in order, as in some of the Psalms; only in the third every three verses begin with the same letter, somewhat in the form of Psalm cxix. Nothing can be conceived more tender, expressive, and affecting, than the descriptions. The grand design of them is to lead the captives to repentance and humiliation for their sins before God, and to inspire them with some hopes of deliverance.

[The book of Lamentations may be considered as a sequel to those prophecies of Jeremiah, which related to the Chaldean invasion, and the subsequent ruin of Judea, and the captivity or dispersion of the Jews. And although, by Josephus, Usher, and others, it has been considered as referring to the death of Josiah (2 Chr. 35. 25), yet the description of the "captivity" (chap. i. 3.), of the complete ruin of Jerusalem (chap. iv. 5, 12.), and of the capture of the king (chap. iv. 20), seems quite conclusive for referring the whole book to the days of Zedekiah.

The book is divided into five chapters, each of which contains a distinct subject of lamentation, subdivided into twenty-two stanzas, according to the letters of the Hebrew alphabet. In the first four chapters, the stanzas begin with the letters following in alphabetical order. In the first two chapters, each stanza forms a triplet, except the seventh of the first, and the nineteenth of the second, which have each a supernumerary line. In the third chapter, each stanza consists of three verses, which all commence with the same letter; so that the whole alphabet is thrice repeated. In the fourth and fifth chapters the stanzas are merely couplets, the fifth chapter being the only one not alphabetically arranged.

This arrangement is not to be considered as originating merely in the personal taste of the prophet, but as divinely directed for some special purposes. Among these purposes, it may be useful to note the following. (1) The Jewish and the Christian religions, (and which yet are not two, but one religion, under two forms or dispensations, and calculated for two conditions of mankind, the local and the diffused, the self-governing, and the governed); these are the only religions that have ever made education—the education of all ranks, without exception, an integral and necessary part of their constitution. They are, in a word, the only intellectual forms of religion; every false form, being calculated, either to tolerate ignorance, or foster sensuality; and every false, superstitious, and apostatical form of Judaism and Christianity, being more or less perverted to the same purposes. Now the alphabet, containing the elements of all intellectual education, it is not surprising that an intellectual religion should imbody some of its most important documents in an alphabetical form, so that the minds of children, under instruction (see Deut. 6. 6.), might associate their first steps in learning with the holy word of the Lord. No doubt there are those, who would pronounce such association unfavourable to future religious impressions; inasmuch as the first steps in learning are generally felt as a toil, and endured but as a slavery. But this, be it remembered, depends altogether upon the temper and the manner of the instructor, who generally has it in his power, by a judicious commixture of kindness and authority, to render a really intellectual education not only tolerable, but agreeable and delightful. (2) It is by no means improbable that, by adopting the alphabetical arrangement in his "Lamentations," the prophet meant to inculcate that sorrow was now the proper lesson, which Judah and Israel were called to study; while the threefold repetition would, not ineptly, shadow forth the long continued succession of afflictions, which they were destined to undergo. Nor is it contrary to the emblematical manner of the prophets to conclude, that the dropping of the alphabetical form in the last chapter—which consists of an earnest prayer—was intended to show, that when Judah and Israel should return and call upon the name of the Lord, then should their lesson of sorrows have an end, and the joy of their heart be renewed (ver. 15, 21). (3) This alphabetic elegy, this funeral dirge of Zion, may well remind the believer of Him, who came near "the city, and wept over it." And by comparing chap. v. 18, 19. with Ps. cii. 25. & Heb. i. 10—12. the Lord, before whom the prophet pleads and bemoans the melancholy ruin of his church and his country, is found to be the "King of Zion," the Lord Christ, who, in the book of Revelation, chap. i. 8, is styled the Alpha and Omega, the whole alphabet, as it were the study and instructor of his church.—Ed.]

rest: all [c] her persecutors overtook her between the straits.

4 [d] The ways of Zion do mourn, because none come to the solemn feasts; all her gates are desolate: [e] her priests sigh, her virgins are afflicted, and she is in bitterness.

5 [f] Her adversaries are the chief, her enemies prosper; for [g] the LORD hath afflicted her for the multitude of her transgressions: [h] her children are gone into captivity before the enemy.

6 And from the daughter of Zion all her beauty is departed: [i] her princes are become like harts that find no pasture; and they are gone without strength before the pursuer.

7 Jerusalem remembered in the days of her affliction and of her miseries all her [k] pleasant things that she had in the days of old, when her people fell into the hand of the enemy, and none did help her: the adversaries [l] saw her, and did mock at her sabbaths.*

8 Jerusalem hath grievously sinned; therefore she [†] is removed: all that honoured her despise her, because they have seen her nakedness; yea, she sigheth, and turneth backward.

9 Her filthiness is in her skirts; she remembereth not her last end; therefore she [m] came down wonderfully: she had no comforter. O LORD, behold my affliction; for the enemy hath magnified himself.

10 The adversary hath spread out his hand upon all her [n] pleasant things; for she hath seen that the heathen entered into her sanctuary, whom thou didst command that they should not enter into thy congregation.

11 All her people sigh, they seek bread; they have given their pleasant things [‡] for meat [§] to relieve the soul: see, O LORD, and consider; for I am become vile.

12 ¶ [‖] Is it nothing to you, all ye that [•] pass by? [†] behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow, which is done unto me, wherewith the LORD hath afflicted me in the day of his fierce anger.

13 From above hath he sent fire into my bones, and it prevaileth against them: [o] he hath spread a net for my feet; he hath turned me back; he hath made me desolate and faint all the day.

14 The yoke of my transgressions is bound by his hand; they are wreathed, and come up upon my neck: he hath made my strength to fall; the LORD [p] hath delivered me into their hands, from whom I am not able to rise up.

15 The LORD [q] hath trodden under foot all my mighty men in the midst of me; he hath called an assembly against me to crush my young men: the LORD [r] hath trodden [*] the virgin, the daughter of Judah, as in a wine-press.

16 [s] For these things I weep; mine eye, mine eye runneth down with water, because the comforter that should [†] relieve my soul is far from me: [t] my children are desolate, because the enemy prevailed.

17 [u] Zion spreadeth forth her hands, and there is none to comfort her: [x] the LORD hath commanded concerning Jacob, that his adversaries should be round about him: Jerusalem is [y] as a menstruous woman among them.

18 ¶ [z] The LORD is righteous; for [a] I have rebelled against his [‡] commandment: [b] hear, I pray you, all people, and behold my sorrow; [c] my virgins and my young men are gone into captivity.

19 [d] I called for my lovers, but they deceived me: [e] my priests and mine elders gave up the ghost in the city, while they sought their meat to relieve their souls.

20 [f] Behold, O LORD, for I am in distress; [g] my bowels are troubled; mine heart is turned within me; for I have [h] grievously rebelled: [i] abroad the sword bereaveth, at home there is as death.

21 [k] They have heard that I sigh; there is none to comfort me: all mine enemies have heard of my trouble; they [l] are glad [§] that thou hast done it: [m] thou wilt bring the day [l] that thou hast [•] called, and they shall be [n] like unto me.

22 [o] Let all their wickedness come before thee; and do unto them as thou hast done unto me [†] for all my transgressions: for [p] my sighs are many, and my heart is faint.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. I. Ver. 13, 14. By his devouring judgments he has consumed all our strength. He has entangled us so that we cannot escape. He has most furiously debased and destroyed us, and all that we had. The punishment and bondage, which we undergo for our sins, are bound so fast on us that we cannot shake them off: and our sufferings are so twisted together that we cannot break through them and escape.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Alas! how great is the desolation, when God withdraws, and we are deprived of a magistracy or ministry. Great is the slavery, the sorrow, the contempt, the poverty, to which sin brings men. And what neglect, profanation, and derision, of everything sacred it occasions! If we wilfully depart from God, the rest of our soul, we must not hope to find rest in anything else. And all afflictions are doubly heavy when we apprehend them coming from an incensed God. Affluence abused is the ready way to pining want: and cruel oppression of others prepares the like misery for ourselves. When sins become numerous and notorious, it is proper that God should rise to punish them. And amidst desolating judgments, nothing is more painful to gracious souls than the violation and contempt of God's ordinances, and the loss of those comforts which they once enjoyed in him and his favours. But it is a mercy that we may apply to him in hope, when all our friends forsake us, and our enemies abuse us. And it is doubly bitter if he then keep himself at a distance.—But if comforts be withdrawn, children murdered, friends turn enemies or be buried in death, if sword, famine, and pestilence devour, or if enemies insult, it is but the just punishment of our iniquities. No fiery judgments devour, no entangling providences befall, no servitude or misery crush, but what are all framed out of our own transgressions. Let us therefore always justify God, and blame ourselves: and the more that created friends, confidences, and comforts, disappoint us, let us the more itations of Jacob, and hath not pitied: he hath thrown down in his wrath the strong holds of the daughter of Judah; he hath [a] brought them down to the ground: he [c] hath polluted the kingdom and the princes thereof.

3 He hath cut off in his fierce anger [d] all the horn of Israel: he [e] hath drawn back his right hand from before the enemy, and he burned against Jacob like a flaming fire, which devoureth round about.

4 He [f] hath bent his bow like an enemy: he stood with his right hand as an adversary, and slew [†] all that were pleasant to the eye in the tabernacle of the daughter of Zion; he [g] poured out his fury like fire.

5 The LORD was as an enemy: he hath [h] swallowed up Israel, he hath swallowed up all her palaces; he hath destroyed his strong holds, and hath increased in the daughter of Judah mourning and lamentation.

6 And he hath violently [i] taken away [‡] his tabernacle,[‖] as if it were of a garden; he hath destroyed his places of the assembly: the LORD [k] hath caused the solemn feasts and sabbaths to be forgotten in Zion, and hath despised, in the indignation of his anger, [l] the king and the priest.

7 [m] The LORD hath cast off his altar; he hath abhorred his sanctuary: he hath [n] given up into the hand of the enemy the walls of her palaces; [o] they have made a noise[•] in the house of the LORD, as in the day of a solemn feast.

8 The LORD [p] hath purposed to destroy the wall of the daughter of Zion; he [p] hath stretched out a line,[†] he hath not withdrawn his hand from [‡] destroying: therefore he made the rampart and the wall to lament;[§] they languished together.

9 [q] Her gates are sunk into the ground:[‖] he hath destroyed and broken her bars; [r] her king and her princes are among the Gentiles: [s] the law is no more;[•] her prophets also find no vision from the LORD.

10 The elders of the daughter of Zion [t] sit upon the ground, and keep silence: they have cast up dust upon their heads; they have girded themselves with sackcloth: the virgins of Jerusalem hang down their heads to the ground.

11 [u] Mine eyes do fail with tears, my bowels are troubled, my [x] liver[†] is poured upon the earth, for the destruction of the daughter of my people; because the children and the sucklings [y] swoon in the streets of the city.

12 They say to their mothers, Where is corn and wine? when they swooned as the wounded in the streets of the city, when [•] their soul was poured out into their mothers' bosom.

13 What thing shall I take to witness for thee? what thing shall I liken to thee, O daughter of Jerusalem? what shall I equal to thee, that I may comfort thee, O virgin daughter of Zion? for [z] thy breach is great like the sea;[†] who can heal thee?

14 Thy prophets have seen vain and foolish things for thee: and they have not discovered thine iniquity, to turn away thy captivity; but have seen for thee [a] false burdens and causes of banishment.[‡]

15 All that pass [§] by [b] clap their hands at thee; they hiss and wag their head at the daughter of Jerusalem, saying, Is this the city that men call [c] The perfection of beauty, The joy of the whole earth?

16 All thine enemies [d] have opened their mouth against thee; they hiss and gnash the teeth: they say, [e] We have swallowed her up: certainly this is the day that we looked for; [f] we have found, we have seen it.

17 The LORD hath done that which he had [g] devised; he hath fulfilled his word that he had commanded in the days of old; [g] he hath thrown down, and hath not pitied; and [h] he hath caused [•] thine enemy to rejoice over thee; he hath set up the horn of thine adversaries.

18 Their heart cried unto the LORD, [i] O wall of the daughter of Zion, let tears run down like a river day and night: give thyself no rest; let not the apple of thine eye [†] cease.

19 Arise, cry out in the night: in the beginning of the watches [k] pour out thine heart like water before the face of the LORD: lift up thy hands toward him for the life of thy young children, that faint for hunger in the top of every street.[‡]

20 ¶ Behold, O LORD, and consider to whom thou hast done this: shall the women eat their fruit,[§] and children [‖] of a span[•] long? shall the priest and the prophet be slain in the sanctuary of the LORD?

21 The young and the old lie on the ground in the streets: my virgins and my young men are fallen by the sword: thou hast slain them in the day of thine anger; thou hast killed, and not pitied.

22 Thou hast called, as in a solemn day, my [l] terrors round about, so that in the day of the LORD's anger none escaped nor remained: those that I have swaddled and brought up hath mine enemy consumed.

earnestly supplicate his favour. A praying heart, and a prayer-hearing God will quickly produce the destruction of our enemies and our own deliverance. And after he has glorified himself in our corrections, he will magnify himself in the tremendous ruin of our destroyers.

CHAP. II.—Ver. 13, 14. What can equal your calamity? Your breaches are like those made by the sea, great and incurable. Your prophets of your own choosing, instead of charging your sins faithfully upon you, to bring you to repentance, and so prevent those judgments, preached their own flatteries, which hardened you in your sins, and hastened your ruin.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—Terrible is the issue when God becomes our enemy and fights against us: and correspondent to the counsels of his heart are the judgments of his hand. Justly he debases by his judgments those who had debased themselves by their sins, and mingles the blood of sinners with their

I AM the man* that hath seen affliction by the rod of his wrath.

2 He hath led me, and brought me into darkness, but not into light.

3 Surely against me is he turned; he turneth his hand against me all the day.

4 My flesh and my skin hath he made old; he hath broken my bones.

5 He hath builded against me, and compassed me with gall and travail.

6 He hath set me in dark places, as they that be dead of old.

7 He hath hedged me about, that I cannot get out: he hath made my chain heavy.

8 Also when I cry and shout, he shutteth out my prayer.

9 He hath inclosed my ways with hewn stone; he hath made my paths crooked.

10 He was unto me as a bear lying in wait, and as a lion in secret places.

11 He hath turned aside my ways, and pulled me in pieces: he hath made me desolate.

12 He hath bent his bow, and set me as a mark for the arrow.

13 He hath caused the †arrows of his quiver to enter into my reins.

14 I was a derision to all my people, and their song all the day.

15 He hath filled me with ‡bitterness, he hath made me drunken with §wormwood.

16 He hath also broken my teeth with gravel-stones,‖ he hath *covered me with ashes.

17 And thou hast removed my soul far off from peace: I forgat †prosperity.

18 And I said, My strength and my hope is perished from the LORD:

19 ‡Remembering mine affliction and my misery, the wormwood and the gall.

20 My soul hath them still in remembrance, and is §humbled in me.

21 This I ‖recall to my mind, therefore have I hope.

22 ¶ It is of the LORD's mercies that we are not consumed, because his compassions fail not:

23 They are new every morning; great is thy faithfulness.

24 The LORD is my portion, saith my soul; therefore will I hope in him.

25 The LORD is good unto them that wait for him, to the soul that seeketh him.

26 [b] It is good that a man should both hope and quietly wait for the salvation of the LORD.

27 It is good for a man that he bear the yoke* in his youth.

28 He sitteth alone, and keepeth silence, because he hath borne it upon him.

29 He putteth his mouth in the dust, if so be there may be hope.

30 [c] He giveth his cheek to him that smiteth him; he is filled full with reproach.

31 For the LORD will not cast off for ever:

32 But though he cause grief, yet will he have compassion according to the multitude of his mercies.

33 For he doth not afflict †willingly,‡ nor grieve the children of men.

34 To crush§ under his feet all the prisoners of the earth,

35 To turn aside the right of a man before the face of ‖the most High,*

36 To subvert a man in his cause, the LORD †approveth not.

37 ¶ Who is he that saith, and it cometh to pass, when the LORD commandeth it not?

38 Out of the mouth of the most High proceedeth not evil and good?‡

39 Wherefore doth a living man [d] complain,§ a man for the punishment of his sins?

40 Let us search and try our ways, and turn again to the LORD.

41 Let us lift up our heart with our hands unto God in the heavens.

42 We have transgressed, and have rebelled: thou hast not pardoned.

43 *Thou hast covered with anger, and persecuted us: thou hast slain, thou hast not pitied.

44 Thou hast covered thyself with a cloud, that our prayer should not pass through.

45 Thou hast made us as the offscouring and refuse in the midst of the people.

46 All our enemies have opened their mouths against us.

47 Fear and a snare is come upon us, desolation and destruction.

48 [f] Mine eye runneth down with rivers of water for the destruction of the daughter of my people.

49 Mine eye trickleth down, and ceaseth not, without any intermission,

50 Till the LORD look down, and behold from heaven.

51 Mine eye affecteth ‖mine heart,* †because of all the daughters of my city.

* The man.—"The strong, the mighty man."—An attentive consideration of this chapter will suggest, at least the probability, that it is a prophetic picture of the suffering Messiah, drawn for the instruction of Zion in the duty of humiliation and patience under the hand of the Lord. This interpretation of the chapter is suggested on the following grounds:—(1) The title, which is, literally, "mighty man." (2) The fact of his deep afflictions (Col. 4. 24). (3) The cruel mockery of his people (ver. 14. Mat. 27. 29). (4) The gall he gets to drink (Mat. 27. 34). (5) The cheek he turns to the smiter (ver. 30. John 19. 3). (6) His sympathetic weeping (ver. 48. Luke 19. 41). (7) His assertion that he was persecuted "without cause" (ver. 52. John 15. 25). (8) His life being "cut off" (ver. 53, 54. comp. Is. 53. 8). (9) His redemption from death (ver. 58. Ps. 16. 10. Acts 2. 24—36). (10) His fearless appeal to his judge (ver. 59. John 8. 40. Heb. 9. 14). (11) The continuous plotting of his enemies (ver. 61, 62. Mat. 26. 16—20. & 8. 15). (12) The corresponding language of his companions, the apostles (ver. 45. comp. 1 Cor. 4. 13. also Ps. 44. 22. with Rom. 8. 36). (13) The experience of all believers, that the only argument that can reach the judgment or the heart of the afflicted, is derived from a recital and view of the sufferings of Christ (Heb. 12. 1—3). (14) That Christ and his sufferings are similarly introduced in the Psalms and the Prophets. The only objection to this interpretation arises from comparing ver. 4. with John 19. 36. But the breaking of his bones there denied, is the act of his enemies, the breaking in ver. 4, is the act of God: and, when compared with Ps. 51. 8. Is. 38. 13. Jer. 50. 17. will be seen to be the emblem of extreme affliction, such as our Lord endured when he "bore our griefs and carried our sorrows, was wounded for our transgressions, and bruised for our iniquities."—ED.

sacrifices; yea, deprives of sabbaths and solemn ordinances those who would not religiously observe them. Grievous sorrows follow upon grievous sinning. And men must either mourn over their sins or over the dreadful effects of them. Alas! what a fearful curse it is to be given up to the delusions of unsent and hypocritical ministers! nor is any thing more destructive and damning. It is highly proper, in trouble, to observe the exact agreement between God's judgments and his word; and to ease our broken hearts by pouring our complaints into his bosom. He alone can help us; and none ever truly sought him in vain.

[*] In evil times, good men are often not merely despised but persecuted; and, no matter how precious in the sight of God, are devoted to destruction by men.—Ed.

[†] The word so translated is a general name for all large and cruel animals, whether of the land or water. Among sea animals the Phocæ are remarkable for maternal tenderness: amongst land animals, the Bear. So wonderfully has God distributed these preservative instincts amongst the lower creatures; which here serve as a lesson of reproof to man their appointed ruler.—Ed.

[†] Sodom perished at once—the daughter of Zion died many deaths, through famine, sickness, plunder, loss of children, and exile.—Ed.

[‡] The word either applies to those who were separated to God by a religious vow (Num. 6. 2—20.) or who are separated from their brethren by providential occurrences. (Gen. 49. 26.) The tenor of the description here would seem to refer it to those who were separated from their brethren by elevated rank.—Ed.

[§] The effect of the famine, toils, and dangers of a protracted siege, in changing the complexion and appearance, has often been noticed by the historians of such calamities.—Ed.

[‖] Jerusalem was not only fortified by art, but by nature, which, thus combined, rendered its capture most improbable; but it was defended by a people so warlike and determined, that it seemed absolutely impossible. Yet it fell, for sin was in it, and the judgment of God was upon it.—Ed.

[*] The priests, who should have been the ministers of mercy and justice, were the principal persecutors of Jeremiah, (Jer. 20. 1). Their successors were afterwards the chief persecutors of Christ, (Mat. 27. 1.) Again, the heathen priests and their satellites were the persecutors of the apostles and the primitive church. (Acts 4. 1—3). And finally, the priests of Rome were, and have been, the persecutors of the fathers and continuators of the blessed reformation.—Ed.

[†] Blind through prejudice against truth, and love of their traditions, by ignorance of the righteousness of God, and the vain and sinful attempt of establishing their own.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—How tremendous are the fatherly corrections of JEHOVAH! and very criminal must be the sins which so provoke him against the objects of his love. The children of light, and heirs of joy, sometimes walk in the greatest darkness of calamity and grief, and even despondency: and many and diversified are God's arrows of affliction, flying swift and piercing deep. But if men will walk in crooked paths of iniquity, it is but just that God should cross their designs and break their measures; and if they will regard iniquity, it is just in him to shut out their prayers, than which few things are more galling to a gracious heart.—Saints can never enter the lowest hell, being preserved by grace: but, by multiplied troubles from God, from devils, and from men, they may have a hell upon earth. Yet God will deliver his people and churches in due time, when they are thoroughly melted and purified in his furnace. In their worst cases they are neither helpless nor hopeless. Let us therefore always acknowledge him kind and faithful. If our troubles be heavy and sharp, let us eagerly claim and live upon him as our portion, and comfort ourselves with his compassion, and with a persuasion that all he does is the fulfilment of his gracious word, on which he has caused us to hope. Let us complain to God, but never complain against him. And let us earnestly work together with God, and labour to promote the same self-debasing and soul-sanctifying ends. Experience of former kindness should encourage us to hope for more. And, having cast our burdens on the Lord, we should continue waiting instant and patient in prayer; and at last we shall find an answer of peace. There is no prison so deep or dark but God can bring us out of it; no enemy so strong but God can destroy; and no request of faith so silent but he will hear it for our good. But wo to those, however powerful, haughty, merry, or scornful, against whom God's favourites plead! And think, my soul, what of all those troubles Jesus underwent—in infinite love underwent—and all for me!

CHAP. IV.—Ver. 13—15. Their priests and prophets have persecuted the Lord's prophets, and have ruined the nation by flattering them in their sins. They formerly wandered from God's law in acts of violence and murder, and now they cannot walk in the streets without polluting themselves by dead bodies.—Yea, every one, even the heathens, abhor them as unclean lepers, or persons too despicable to live on the earth.

CHAPTER V.

Zion utters her complaint to God in prayer.

REMEMBER, O LORD, what is come upon us: consider, and behold our reproach.

2 Our inheritance is turned to strangers, our houses to aliens.

3 We are orphans and fatherless, our mothers are as widows.

4 We have drunken our water for money; our wood* is sold unto us.

5 Our necks are under persecution: we labour, and have no rest.

A. M. cir. 3416.
B. C. cir. 588.

* The Jews allege an ordinance of Joshua rendering certain forests common property, where all might cut such wood as they required for fuel; and such a law or custom prevails in all woody and thinly peopled countries, where the export of timber is not a trade, and where the clearing of the land for pasture or tillage is a principal object of the owner. The invaders, however, took exclusive possession of the forests. See Neh. 2. 8.—ED.

6 [a] We have given the hand* to the Egyptians, and to the Assyrians, to be satisfied with bread.

7 Our fathers have sinned, and are not; and we have borne their iniquities.†

8 Servants have ruled over us: there is none that doth deliver us out of their hand.

9 We gat our bread with the peril of our lives because of the sword of‡ the wilderness.§

10 Our skin was black like an oven because of the ‖ terrible famine.

11 They ravished the women in Zion, and the maids in the cities of Judah.

12 Princes are hanged up by their hand:* the faces of elders were not honoured.

13 They took the young men to† grind, and the children fell under‡ the wood.

14 The elders have ceased from the gate, the young men from their music.

15 The joy of our heart is ceased; our dance is turned into mourning.

16 [b] The crown is fallen from our head: wo unto us, that we have sinned!

17 For this our heart is faint; for these things our eyes are dim,

18 Because of the mountain of Zion, which is desolate; the foxes§ walk upon it.

19 Thou, O LORD, remainest for ever; thy throne from generation to generation

20 Wherefore dost thou forget us for ever, and forsake us ‖ so long time?

21 Turn thou us unto thee, O LORD, and we shall be turned; renew our days as of old.

22 * But thou hast utterly rejected us;† thou art very wroth against us.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—When God forsakes a people, their honour leaves them. And if rulers will not act for God, it is but just that he should make them contemptible. They who live in the greatest plenty and pomp know not to what straits they may be reduced before they die. And delicate and high living renders hardships doubly grievous when they come to be experienced. God's vengeance on his own people often astonishes his and their enemies. And scarcely ever does the vengeance of God light upon nations and churches without clerical wickedness having a distinguished share in procuring it. No wonder then that the very monsters of wickedness at last contemn and abhor unfaithful ministers. There is no escaping from the vengeance of God appointed for us. If we make creatures our trust, or the breath of our nostrils, God, who is our life, will confound them, and disappoint us. Yet the troubles of the godly will continue no longer than till they have accomplished the purification intended by them. But such as ridicule and insult Jesus Christ, and his people or ordinances, will at last render themselves ridiculous and miserable. And in the end their sin shall be discovered and punished, however secret and hidden.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Alas, what hurt sin has done! through it this world is but a scene of awful changes! And peculiarly terrible is the misery of ravaged and conquered nations. But under all our trouble, it is a comfort to reflect that God sees all that comes upon us; and that, if we patiently and penitently suffer for the sins of our fathers, he will quickly return to us in mercy: yea, there is a Canaan above, of which none can deprive us; and though God frown, he will not forget us. If our earthly provision be scanty, our abundant spiritual provision can more than balance its defects; and if the Son has made us free, we shall be free indeed; yea, honoured, glad, and glorious for evermore. If the honour of his oracles and ordinances on earth go nearer our heart than our secular interests, he will quickly transport us to his sanctuary above, where we shall be ever with the Lord. His mercy may be hid, but it is not clean gone; and there is enough in it to redress all our grievances. If by his grace he renew our hearts, he will by his favour renew our days, and restore our wonted prosperity. Let me therefore, under my afflictions, complain to, and plead with, my God; but never quarrel with his conduct, discredit his love, or despair of his favours.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF LAMENTATIONS.

For every possible circumstance of human life, the Scriptures seem to furnish, not merely a text, or a portion, but an entire book: Genesis furnishes genealogy; Exodus, emigration; Leviticus, religious rites; Numbers, organization; Deuteronomy, such repetition, explanation, and commentary, as the frailty of humanity requires; Joshua, conquest and government; Judges, a country often falling into sin and thraldom, but struggling for independence; Ruth, special providence; Samuel, the influence of a pious maternal education on the prophet and judge; the evil of an ungoverned temper in Saul; the blessing of self-restraint (not from himself arising, but from providence and grace), in David; Kings and Chronicles, a mirror for kings and nations; Ezra and Nehemiah, mirrors for patriotic reformers; Esther, a mirror for queens; Job, for men in adversity; Psalms, a mirror for hearts; Proverbs, mirror for parents in the work of private education; Ecclesiastes, for preachers in the work of public instruction; the Song of Solomon, for husbands and wives; Isaiah, reproof and encouragement for the church; Jeremiah, warning to the state; Lamentations, the sorrows of God's people for both church and state overturned by national sins.

It were easy to pursue such specialities to "Revelation," of which the particular object is to place and preserve the church in her proper attitude of prayer and watchfulness until the coming of her Lord. But it is needful to forbear.

"Wicked men and seducers wax worse and worse." And so do nations, when any evil principle or object, such as profanity, sabbath desecration, licentiousness, covetousness, hasting to be rich, or lust of power and conquest, take possession of rulers or people. And so likewise do churches degenerate when, under the specious pretence of "free inquiry," a false philosophy supersedes revelation—when a partial morality is substituted for universal holiness—a cold formality, for fervent devotion—when a sordid worldliness controls liberality, and an indulgent luxury banishes self-denial—when the love of ease, and the lust of power, combine to "lay heavy (ritual) burdens upon men's shoulders," but "refuse to touch them with one of their fingers"—when Christ is followed, not for the "miracles" he has performed, but for the "loaves and fishes" he owns and distributes—when profession is all, and practice nothing; and finally, when obedience to the church is substituted for allegiance to her King, then may God spare for a little, amidst many warnings—but such "vessels of wrath" are fitting themselves for destruction, and judgment is whetting its sword to begin at the house of the Lord.

In all such melancholy cases of defection, there is generally, however, a remnant "that sigh and that cry for all the abominations that are done in the land:" and who live to lament over the ruin they have foreseen, and against the coming of which they vainly lifted up the voice of expostulation or warning. Such was Jeremiah. In the midst of a demoralized state, he warned kings and nobles, and lived to see, and weep over their fall. In the midst of an heretical and idolatrous priesthood, he continued to preach JEHOVAH, to denounce idolatry, and to exhort to repentance; and he lived to see the vessels of the holy temple, which its priests had profaned, transferred to the temple of Bel, and the temple of Jerusalem itself reduced to the ruin he had foretold. And his book of Lamentations remains as the manual of sorrows uttered over a state misgoverned, impoverished, and ruined, by self-sufficient, covetous, and oppressive rulers—and a church infected, misled, and betrayed, by an immoral, heretical, and time-serving ministry.—ED.

ADDITIONAL EDITORIAL NOTES ON THE LAMENTATIONS OF JEREMIAH.

CHAP. I. Ver. 1. How doth the city sit solitary.—When Jerusalem was taken by Titus Vespasian, the Roman emperor had a coin struck, upon which is a palm-tree, the emblem of Judea, and beneath it a solitary woman, the emblem of Jerusalem, sitting with her head leaning sadly upon her hand, with the legend, "Judea capta." ——How is she become as a widow.—Deprived of her earthly king, who is a captive, and rejected, and outcast from her God,—a widow indeed; for "her Maker was her husband." Is. 54. 5.——How hath she become tributary.—First to Pharaoh-necho, king of Egypt, and now to the emperor of Babylon.

CHAP. II. Ver. 1. Cast down from heaven unto the earth.—Believers can always say, "our conversation (our citizenship) is in heaven." And this "conversation," or citizenship, is twofold—inward, that of faith; outward, that of church fellowship and enjoyment of ordinances. From this inward citizenship, as a right, the believer is never "cast down;" but of all its outward benefits, as an enjoyment, he may be, and often is deprived. But, while through all storms the true believer clings to the Saviour by whom he has been "apprehended," there are individuals, multitudes, and churches, who are judicially "cast down from heaven unto the earth," are deprived of church-fellowship and ordinances; because never having had the root of faith, but the mere leaves of profession, they are condemned to wither away as severed branches, and all their "beauty" perishes.——Ver. 2. Swallowed up all the habitations of Jacob.—The flood of invasion that, in wrath, has passed over the land, has swept away in its violence, and "swallowed up" in its depths, all the habitations, the villages, and cities of the land. See Wylie's Modern Judea, chap. x.

CHAP. IV. Ver. 3. Cruel, like the ostriches in the wilderness.—On the least noise (says Dr Shaw) or trivial occasion, the ostrich forsakes her eggs or her young ones, to which, perhaps, she never returns; or if she does, it may be too late to restore life to the one, or preserve it to the others. The Arabs often meet with a few of the little ones, half-starved, straggling and moaning about, like so many distressed orphans, for their mother.——Ver. 16. The Lord hath divided them: he will no more regard them.—How does this consist with the opinion of a Jewish restoration to Canaan? Perfectly. JEHOVAH "will no more regard them" as a people—the restoration will be of the "remnant according to the election of grace," from whom the nation will be reconstructed, 2 Kin. 19. 31. 2 Chr. 30. 6. Ezra 9. 8. Is. 11. 11—16. Jer. 23. 3. Ezek. 6. 8. Rom. 9. 27. & 11. 5.—— Ver. 21. Rejoice and be glad, O daughter of Edom.—This is commonly interpreted as an irony; but such a figure seems very inconsistent with the serious and melancholy mood of the prophet's mind. Is it not rather a call to the representative of the "widows" and "fatherless children" of Edom, whom God promised to "preserve" amidst the ruin of their country (Jer. 49. 11), to "rejoice" sympathetically and sincerely at the accomplished punishment of Zion (ver. 22), and that blessed restoration from which she will never more be carried into captivity (see ver. 22); intimating, that though Edom will never be restored as a nation, her "daughter" will rejoice as a participator in the blessings of Zion?

CHAP. V. Ver. 4. We have drunken our water for money.—The primitive history of Israel is much connected with wells, as may be seen in the history of Abraham, some of whose chief movements are associated with their names. See Gen. 21. 25, 30. & 24. 13. & 26. 15, 18. And the bringing of water into Jerusalem by conduits, has not been thought unworthy of a place in the history of Israel's kings (2 Kin. 20. 20. 2 Chr. 32. 30). The buying of the water of their fathers' wells, seemed, therefore, to Israel, a grievous act of usurpation and oppression. It is clear the reference must be to a Chaldean impost upon the water in Jerusalem; for when carried away, the captives "sat by the streams of Babel," and had water in abundance.

THE BOOK

OF THE

PROPHET EZEKIEL.

EZEKIEL was also a priest; and prophesied among the captives in Chaldea, while Jeremiah prophesied in Judea and Egypt. His predictions, especially the first and last nine chapters, are extremely figurative. But if we search them with reverence, humility, and diligence, we may from them find much encouragement to our faith and hope in God; even as in natural things we may reap much benefit from those, the nature, connexions, and influences of which we do not well understand. We have in them (1) His divine call to his prophetical office; i—iii. (2) His visions, and messages of reproof and threatening to the Jews; iv—xxiv, xxxiii. (3) His predictions of ruin to the enemies of the Jews; particularly the Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites, Philistines, Tyrians, Egyptians, and Turks; xxv—xxxii, xxxv, xxxviii, xxxix. (4) Promises of mercy to the Jews after their captivity in Babylon, and their present dispersion; which are likewise typical of the glorious privileges of the gospel church; xxxiv, xxxvi—xlviii.

Ezekiel and Jeremiah were both priests; were contemporaries, and prophesied mostly of the same events. Ezekiel, however, was carried captive to Babylon, and dwelt on the banks of the Chebar, a tributary of the Euphrates. Jeremiah remained in Judea, so that, in each country, God had his faithful witness. The prophecies of Ezekiel extend to a wide field, including not merely the Jews, but also the Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites, Philistines, Tyrians, Egyptians, and the northern nations, governed by Gog, designated the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal. Like the other prophets, he sets forth under various emblems, the times and the glories of Messiah. He began to prophesy in the fifth year of his captivity, and continued in the faithful discharge of his duties for about twenty years.—ED.]

EXPLANATORY NOTES.—CHAP. I. Ver. 4—15. These living creatures may denote angels, as ministering in the dispensations of Providence, and ministers, as serving in the church. Their being living denotes their own life and liveliness, and the quickening influence of their work: their being four, denotes their sufficiency for all the ends of the earth, and under all the empires of it; their four faces;—viz. of a man, denotes their wisdom, prudence, and tender com-came out of the north, a great cloud, and a fire infolding itself, and a brightness was about it, and out of the midst thereof as the colour of amber, out of the midst of the fire:*

5 Also out of the midst thereof came the likeness of four† living creatures.‡ And this was their appearance; they had the likeness of a man.

6 And every one had four faces,§ and every one had four wings.

7 And their feet were straight feet;‖ and the sole of their feet was like the sole of a calf's foot: and they sparkled like the colour of burnished brass.

8 And they had the hands of a man* under their wings on their four sides; and they four had their faces and their wings.

9 Their wings were joined† one to another; they turned not when they went;‡ they went every one straight forward.

10 As for the likeness of their faces, they four had the face of a man,§ and the face of a lion, on the right side: and they four had the face of an ox on the left side; they four also had the face of an eagle.

11 Thus were their faces: and their wings were stretched upward; two wings of every one were joined one to another, and two covered their bodies.

12 And they went every one straight forward: whither the spirit was to go, they went; and they turned not when they went.

13 As for the likeness of the living creatures, their appearance was like burning coals of fire, and like the appearance of lamps: it went up and down among the living creatures; and the fire was bright, and out of the fire went forth lightning.

14 And the living creatures ran and returned as the appearance of a flash of lightning.

15 Now, as I beheld the living creatures, behold, one wheel‖ upon the earth by the living creatures, with his four faces.

16 The appearance of the wheels* and their work was like unto the colour of a beryl; and they four had one likeness: and their appearance and their work was as it were a wheel in the middle of a wheel.

17 When they went, they went upon their four sides;* and they turned not when they went.

18 As for their rings, they were so high† that they were dreadful; and their rings were full of eyes round about them four.

19 And when the living creatures went, the wheels went by them; and when the living creatures were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up.

20 Whithersoever the spirit was to go,‡ they went, thither was their spirit to go; and the wheels§ were lifted up over against them: for the spirit of the living creature was in the wheels.

21 When those went, these went; and when those stood, these stood; and when those were lifted up from the earth, the wheels were lifted up over against them: for the spirit of the living creature was in the wheels.

22 And the likeness of the firmament upon the heads‖ of the living creature was as the colour of the terrible crystal, stretched forth over their heads above.

23 And under the firmament were their wings straight, the one toward the other: every one had two, which covered on this side, and every one had two, which covered on that side, their bodies.*

24 And when they went, I heard the noise of their wings,† like the noise of great waters, as the voice of the Almighty, the voice of speech, as the noise of an host: when they stood, they let down their wings.

25 And there was a voice‡ from the firmament that was over their heads, when they stood, and had let down their wings.

26 ¶ And above the firmament that was over their heads was the likeness of a throne, as the appearance of a sapphire-stone: and upon the likeness of the throne was the likeness as the appearance of a man§ above upon it.

27 And I saw as the colour of amber, as the appearance of fire round about within it: from the appearance of his loins even upward, and from the appearance of his loins even downward, I saw as it were the appearance of fire,‖ and it had brightness round about.

* A whirlwind is the emblem of speedy judgment, and total ruin. (Job 11. 9.) The north, the seat of the invading nations. The cloud, the fire, and the brightness, are the same emblems of divine presence, energy, and judgment, that appeared on Sinai; indicating that the same God was present to inflict deserved punishment upon the rebellious transgressors of his law, and the idolatrous apostates from his worship.—Ed.

† As "seven" is the emblem of perfection originating in time and work, so "four" is the emblem of perfection originating in place and form. See Gen. 2. 10. Ex. 27. 1. Deut. 22. 12. 1 Kin. 6. 33. Ezek. 37. 9. Dan. 7. 2. Mat. 24. 31. Rev. 7. 1. & 21. 16. The other applications of the term seem all derivable from this original.—Ed.

‡ Living creatures, to distinguish them from agents of judgment by natural laws—as famine, pestilence, drought, &c. Likeness of a man.—Beings intelligent, but passionate.—Ed.

§ The principal organs of sense being situated in the face, and these, being the chief servants of the intellect, "four faces" indicate perfection of the senses and understanding. —Wings, emblems of celerity in fulfilling the divine will.—Ed.

‖ Straight feet—indicating straightness in the way of obedience. (See Josh. 6. 5. 1 Sam. 6. 12. Is. 40. 3. Jer. 31. 9).—A calf's foot—indicative of youth, of ceremonial cleanness, of suitableness for sacrifice, (Lev. 9. 2), and promise of growth, (Mal. 4. 2.—Burnished brass—indicative of strength and splendour.—Ed.

* Hands of a man.—The hand is the chief servant of the intellect—the emblem of practised skill and power.—Ed.

† Wings joined.—Perfect consent of spirit, and unity of effort.—Ed.

‡ They needed not to "turn;" having every one four faces, they lost no time in preparing for action; no enemy could come behind them. God's providential purposes cannot be eluded.—Ed.

§ A man—intellect with passion.—A lion—strength and readiness to assail, (2 Sam. 1. 23. Ps. 7. 2).—An ox—labour, productiveness, (Deut. 25. 4. Prov. 14. 4.)—An eagle—soaring aloft, yet finding the prey, Is. 4. 31. Mat. 24. 28.—Ed.

‖ One wheel, &c.—That is, one wheel by each of the "living creatures," see ver. 16.—Ed.

* Wheels.—The emblems of the revolutions of time, the progressive rise and fall of kingdoms; the onward but providential movements of events.—Ed.

A. M. cir. 3410.
B. C. cir. 594.

* Went upon their four sides.—All moving together, by one consent and energy. Turned not—to mark that God is never turned back from his purposes of grace or judgment.—Ed.

† Their rings were so high.—The designs of Providence are vast; reaching not merely from earth, but from hell to heaven, from everlasting to everlasting. Full of eyes.—No events dependent upon blind chance; all guided by certain foreknowledge and unerring design.—Ed.

‡ Where God's Spirit leads, the spirit of his servants follows.—Ed.

§ The living God guides the spirit of the obedient, and controls and restrains the spirit of the refractory and rebellious, and so directs every movement of providence, according to the counsel of his sovereign and gracious will.—Ed.

‖ To denote the inferiority of all agents to God, the firmament is "upon their heads." Terrible crystal—dazzling the eyes with its lustre, and so "terrible" to the weakness of the organ. In this sense the sun is "terrible." But nothing is so terrible as to gaze upon the wheel of Providence reaching from the lowest hell to the highest heaven, and the firmament of his power over the heads of all his creatures, and the wonders of his omnipresence whereby, while here, on earth, he is yet exalted "far above the heavens."—Ed.

* Covered their bodies. When the purpose of Providence is most rapidly in progress, from the eyes of worldly men, the agent is totally hid: and when they search for the origin of their disasters, even the true second causes they seldom discover; and the great cause of all—God judging them for their sins—the blindness of their eyes, and the hardness of their hearts will not permit them to see.—Ed.

† When a providential work is accomplished, his servants have rest: Stephen "fell asleep" in Jesus; when Paul had "finished his course" he saw the crown waiting for him in the hand of his Lord.—Ed.

‡ The voice of the Son of God, saying, "Well done, good and faithful servants."—Ed.

§ "God manifest in the flesh," by whom and for whom all things were created and governed.—Ed.

‖ The appearance of fire.—The manifested baptism of the Holy Ghost with fire (Mat. 4. 11.); which baptism is seen perfect in Christ, from whom it is dispensed in measure to his disciples. John 3. 34. 1 Cor. 12. 11.—Ed.

passion;—of a lion, their courage, boldness, and might;—of an ox, their indefatigable labour and patience;—of an eagle, their clear and piercing knowledge, high contemplations, and holy affections. Their four wings, covering their bodies, stretched upwards, and joined to their fellows, denote their diligence, speedy success, consciousness of their own infirmities, and mutual harmony and love. Their straight feet, like those of a calf, and sparkling, denote their upright, steady, persevering, pure, and glorious ministrations and behaviour. Their many hands under their wings denote their great, but prudently directed and humble activity in their whole work. Their fiery appearance denotes their ardent love and holy zeal. The Spirit moving among them denotes the Holy Ghost as calling them and qualifying them for, and directing and actuating them in, their work; and all directed by the voice of the Almighty, who is enthroned in heaven. 15—25. The four wheels, with four faces each, and coloured like beryl, mysterious in their form, dreadfully high in their rings, full of eyes, and moved by the living creatures straight forward, may denote the manifold, precious, glorious, mysterious, dreadful, wise, and prudent providences of God, perseveringly, self-consistently, and righteously conducted by the ministration of angels in all parts of the world: or they may denote the churches of Christ, mysterious in their form, uniform in their appearances, perseveringly advancing to the overlasting state, precious and shining in their oracles, ordinances, and true members, fearing God, and dreadful to their enemies, intelligent, prudent, and watchful, and directed and actuated by the Spirit of God, through the instrumentality of ministers, according to the word of an enthroned Redeemer. 26—28. This man, amber-coloured, and fiery in appearance, enthroned in heaven over the wheels and animals, and encircled with a rainbow, represents Jesus Christ, in our nature, as terrible to his enemies, but full of love to, and zeal for, his people, exalted to his Father's right hand, to be the Head and Director of angels and ministers, and ever attending to and administering the covenant of grace to the world.

CHAPTER II.

(1) The commission: 1—5. (2) The instruction: 6—8. (3) The roll of Ezekiel's prophecy: 9, 10.

AND he said unto me, Son of man,[*] stand upon thy feet, and I will speak unto thee.

2 And the spirit[†] entered into me when he spake unto me, and set me upon my feet, that I heard him that spake unto me.

3 And he said unto me, Son of man, I send thee to the children of Israel, to a rebellious [‡] nation that hath rebelled against me: they and their fathers have transgressed against me, even unto this very day.

4 For they are [‡] impudent children and stiff-hearted. I do send thee unto them; and thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD.

5 And they, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear, (for they are a rebellious house,) yet shall know that there hath been a prophet among them.

6 ¶ And thou, son of man, be not afraid of them, neither be afraid of their words, though [‖] briers and thorns [‖] be with thee, and thou dost dwell among scorpions:[*] be not afraid of their words, nor be dismayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious house.

7 And thou shalt speak my words unto them, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear; for they are [b] most rebellious.

8 But thou, son of man, hear what I say unto thee; Be not thou rebellious like that rebellious house: open thy mouth, and [c] eat that I give thee.

9 ¶ And when I looked, behold, an hand was sent unto me; and, lo, a roll of a book was therein;

10 And he spread it before me: and it was written within and without: and there was written therein lamentations, and mourning, and wo.

[‖] What specific plants are meant, it is impossible to determine. The general use of the words translated "briers and thorns" leaves, however, no doubt that they are some of the many prickly plants with which many parts of Asia and Africa abound. "One of the inconveniences," says a learned traveller, "of the vegetable thickets of Egypt is, that it is difficult to remain in them, seeing nine-tenths of the trees and plants are armed with inexorable thorns, which suffer only an unquiet enjoyment of the shadow." The "brier and thorn" are memorials of the curse originally pronounced upon the earth because of sin. Gen. 3. 18. Heb. 6. 8.—ED.

[*] According to some authorities, the name is derived from two words that signify "father-killer;" and Pliny informs us that it is the property of the young scorpions to slay their parents. Parkhurst derives it from two words that signify to squeeze or pinch violently, as the creature is armed with forceps, and takes a violent hold. It is a small, but very venomous animal, having a poisonous sting in its tail. It is an animal of a very hideous appearance; and, from its aspect and poisonous properties, furnishes an awful emblem of a malignant people.—ED.

CHAPTER III.

(1) The prophet eats the roll: 1—3. (2) Is encouraged: 4—14. (3) The rule of prophecy: 15—21. (4) God alone shuts and opens the mouth of the prophet: 22—27.

MOREOVER, he said unto me, Son of man, eat that thou findest;[*] eat this roll, and go speak unto the house of Israel.

2 So I opened my mouth, and he caused me to eat[†] that roll.

3 And he said unto me, Son of man, cause thy belly to eat, and fill thy bowels with this roll that I give thee. Then did I eat it; and it was in my mouth as honey[‡] for sweetness.

4 ¶ And he said unto me, Son of man, go, get thee unto the house of Israel, and speak with my words[§] unto them.

5 For thou art not sent to a people of a strange speech, and of an hard language, but to the house of Israel:

6 Not to many people of a strange speech, and of an hard language, whose words thou canst not understand: [a] surely, had I sent thee to them, they would have hearkened unto thee.

7 But the house of Israel will not hearken unto thee; for they will not hearken unto me: for all the house of Israel are [b] impudent and hard-hearted.

8 Behold, I have made thy face strong against their faces, and thy forehead strong against their foreheads.

9 As an adamant,[‖] harder than flint, have I made thy forehead: fear them not, neither be dismayed at their looks, though they be a rebellious house.

10 Moreover, he said unto me, Son of man, all my words that I shall speak unto thee receive in thine heart, and hear with thine ears.

11 And go, get thee to them of the captivity, unto the children of thy people, and speak unto them, and tell them, Thus saith the Lord GOD, whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear.

12 Then the spirit took me up, and I heard behind me a voice of a great rushing,[*] saying, Blessed be the glory of the LORD from his place.[†]

[‡] Honey is the emblem of sweetness collected by industry, and preserved by care—of which the bee is one of the most remarkable natural examples. It here represents the sweetness of those reflections that arise from the knowledge and meditation of God's word, and ready obedience to his will.—ED.

[§] This expression, "Speak with my words unto them," is such a plain and explicit assertion of full and complete verbal inspiration in one prophet, that unless it be found explicitly disavowed, which it never is, the same amount of inspiration must be ascribed to every other prophet. See ver. 10.—ED.

[‖] What particular stone is intended cannot be determined, nor is the determination important, as the import of the passage is sufficiently plain. God had endowed the prophet with knowledge by means of the roll, or revealed word: he, in face of all opposition, with honesty and courage, determined to deliver his message.—ED.

[†] The glory of the Lord from his place, was the Shechinah in the wilderness—in the tabernacle, God manifest in light and cloud. "The glory of the Lord from his place" in the temple, (Mal. 3. 1.) was "the Word made flesh" and dwelling among men, who thus beheld "his glory, the glory of the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth." "The glory of the Lord from his place" in the heavens, is Christ sitting at the right hand of God, and ever living to make intercession for us.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—Wherever God has a people, he will find ministers for them. And there is great need that these should have a clear and distinct call from him to their work, considering the important dangers attending, and the awful issues and accounts thereof. All discoveries of God ought to fill our minds with deep awe and reverence of him. May I then, like these living creatures, be endowed with the Holy Ghost, filled with spiritual knowledge and prudence, and be uniformly active and upright in the Lord's way; always under his direction and influence, and making my light so to shine before men, as that they may see my good works, and glorify my Father which is in heaven. However strange and intricate the form of ordinances, churches, and providences be, let me revere them, as framed and managed by God for his own glory; and always look, above all, to his infinitely glorious self, particularly as manifested in my nature, and the Lamb as it had been slain in the midst of the throne.

CHAP. II.—Ver. 1—6. The title, Son of man, so often given to Ezekiel, and sometimes to Daniel, who also prophesied in Chaldea, might be given them to render them humble under their enjoyment of so many divine visions: or as an honourable representation of them as types of the Son of God in our nature. And the Jews are called briers, thorns, and scorpions, to represent what cursed, mischievous, malignant, subtle, fierce, frowning, venomous, and murderous persecutors they would be to him.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—Ministers had need always to keep in view their own infirmities, as well as the dignity of their office; and the Spirit of God must enable them to receive as well as to declare their instructions. Alas! how fast men's wickedness cleaves to them under the heaviest afflictions! God exactly knows what men are and will be, and what entertainment his word and ordinances will get among them. And marvellous is his patience and pity in using all common methods to reform the most stubborn. And if ministers preach by his commission, and in his authority, whether men be edified or not, he will be glorified by the faithful publication of his truths. They must indeed, in the discharge of their office, expect the most unnatural and infernal persecution; and from none more than from hardened hypocrites. But, let them be used as they may, they must faithfully adhere to and publish God's truths, however mournful or cutting. And, in order hereto, they must consider, understand, and experience the power of them on their own hearts, before they preach them to others.

CHAP. III.—Ver. 1—3. This roll noted his prophetic commission, or the messages he was to deliver. The eating imported his cordial reception of his messages, and serious meditation on them, that he might understand them. Its being sweet in his mouth imported that his commission was delightful to him at first, though afterwards he was filled with grief and anguish, when he found that he was to deliver such terrible messages, and those to be so little regarded. 8, 9. I 13 I heard also the noise of the wings of the living creatures that touched one another, and the noise of the wheels over against them, and a noise of a great rushing.

14 So the spirit lifted me up, and took me away, and I went in bitterness,* in the heat† of my spirit; but the hand of the LORD was strong upon me.

15 ¶ Then I came to them of the captivity at Tel-abib, that dwelt by the river of Chebar, and I sat where they sat, and remained there astonished among them seven days.‡

16 And it came to pass, at the end of seven days, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

17 Son of man, I have made thee a watchman unto the house of Israel: therefore hear the word at my mouth,§ and give them warning from me.

18 When I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; and thou givest him not warning, nor speakest to warn the wicked from his wicked way, to save his life; the same wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand.

19 Yet if thou warn the wicked, and he turn not from his wickedness, nor from his wicked way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul.‖

20 Again, When a righteous man doth turn from his righteousness,* and commit iniquity, and I lay a stumblingblock† before him, he shall die: because thou hast not given him warning, he shall die in his sin, and his righteousness which he hath done shall not be remembered; but his blood will I require at thine hand.

21 Nevertheless, if thou warn the righteous man, that the righteous sin not, and he doth not sin, he shall surely live, because he is warned; also thou hast delivered thy soul.

22 ¶ And the hand of the LORD was there upon me; and he said unto me, Arise, ‡go forth into the plain, and I will there talk with thee.

23 Then I arose, and went forth into the plain; and, behold, the glory of the LORD stood there, as the glory which I saw by the river of Chebar: [d] and I fell on my face.

24 Then the spirit entered into me, and set me upon my feet, and spake with me, and said unto me, Go, [e] shut thyself within thine house.

25 But thou, O son of man, behold, [f] they shall put bands upon thee, and shall bind thee with them, and thou shalt not go out among them:

26 And I will make thy tongue cleave to the roof of thy mouth, that thou shalt be dumb,* and shalt not be to them † a reprover; for they are a rebellious house.

27 But when I speak with thee, I will open thy mouth, and thou shalt say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD, [g] He that heareth, let him hear; and he that forbeareth, let him forbear: for they are a rebellious house.

And such an one may fall away from that profession in which, for a time, he "did run well:" and that, either through ignorance of the real nature of the gospel, (Mat. 13. 19), or want of "root in himself," or the dread of persecution (Mat. 13. 21), or through "care of the world and deceitfulness of riches," and the seed may thus be choked, and the plant become "unfruitful."—ED.

These and other such "stumblingblocks" God is said to "lay before" men—not to induce them to stumble and fall — not to tempt them to evil—but to punish them for their sins — to bring out from beneath the garb of profession, thereality within; and to be a warning to him that "thinketh he standeth (by faith) to take heed lest he fall" (by sense.)—ED.

will endow thee with boldness to deliver my messages, and with courage and constancy to hold out against all opposition. 12—14. The great rushing, &c., denotes the great commotions and troubles which he was to foretell, and in which God would be glorified.—The noise of the wings of the animals, and of the wheels, denotes the great activity of angels, ministers, and others, in executing God's threatenings and providences. 20. If a man, who is but apparently righteous, without any real principle of grace, abandon his seemingly virtuous course, and give up himself to a continued practice of wickedness, and I lay in his way what his lusts shall improve to his destruction, whatever seeming good things once appeared about him, they shall in no wise avail to prevent his punishment. And if thou hast not warned him, thou shalt be punished as guilty of his destruction. 25. These bands may either denote the restraints which God put upon him during his four hundred and thirty days' emblematical siege of Jerusalem, [chap. iv.] or the restraints which the Jews would lay upon him, in order to prevent his denouncing judgments against them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—God's word ought to be received, as the delightful food of our soul, without disputing: and the more readily we obey God's difficult commandments, we shall receive the more comfort in the issue. Saints may receive with delight what speaks terror to the wicked. And they who minister in holy things, ought to meditate on and experience their subject, before they deliver it to others. But unless God give them a spirit of wisdom and understanding, their own labours can avail but little. The more impudent sinners are in opposition to religion, the more bold and resolute should ministers and others appear in defence of it, that, if any obstinately reject the counsel of God, they may be rendered inexcusable. And if we be called to hard services, he will fit and furnish us for them. Nor must the want of desired success discourage us, or in the least abate our faithfulness and diligence. What struggles of fear and unbelief may there be where grace reigns! It is very discouraging for ministers to be sent to preach to such as are uncontrollably wicked, and hate to be reformed. And their great griefs are often too big to be uttered. But God can bow their hearts, as well as furnish their heads, and so prevent their refusal or desertion of their work. And he often for a time straitens them whom he intends to exalt.—Perseverance in sin, and apostasy from God, must certainly issue in temporal and eternal destruction. But readily will God pardon the most wicked if penitent. O the infinite importance of the ministerial office! What influence the execution thereof hath upon the everlasting happiness or misery of mankind! and ministers are acquitted or condemned as guilty of the destruction of souls, as they faithfully deliver God's messages or not. Men's apostasy from, or perseverance in, good works, clearly manifests the counterfeit or real nature of their religion and grace. But they who follow God's direction shall have his necessary comforts always attending them. They who sinfully evade God's public work, are ordinarily punished with temporary restraints from it: and they who hate reproof, are deprived of faithful reprovers. Such as intend public preaching ought to be prepared for it by much reading, meditation, and prayer, as their messages are deeply connected with the eternal salvation or damnation of multitudes.

CHAP. IV.—Ver. 1—7. It is most probable that these things were really done, and not in mere vision. provision. The brittle tile represented Jerusalem's weakness and readiness to be irrecoverably ruined. The pan or slice of iron, represented the walls of Jerusalem, or the resolution and fortifications of the Chaldean besiegers; the three hundred and ninety days on his left side, answering to the years of wickedness by the less regarded ten tribes after Jeroboam had become king, [1 Kings xii.] might also figure out three hundred and ninety days of siege by the Chaldeans, before they went off to fight the Egyptians, [Jer. xxxvii. 5.] The forty days on his right side, answering to the Jews' years of wickedness under Manasseh, Jehoiakim, and Zedekiah; or beginning from the 13th or 18th year of Josiah, might represent the forty days of siege after the Chaldeans returned before the city was taken. —His setting his face against the portrait of Jerusalem, and having his arm bare, marked how furiously the Chaldeans should besiege it, and how ready they would be to use their swords in murdering the inhabitants.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—God accurately marks and avenges the iniquities of preceding ages upon obstinate apostates who have continued in them. And with earnestness and resolution the instruments of his wrath proceed in their work against hardened transgressors. If God require it of us, we must be ready to endure any hardship or disgrace for his sake. And it is prudent to accustom ourselves to hardships, as we know not to what we may be put before we die. The fear of sinning chiefly affects a gracious soul. And amidst pinching wants, it is very comfortable to have a conscience untainted with wilful guilt. But how ready God is, and how ready then should we be, to regard the conscientious scruples of his people!

CHAP. V.—Ver. 1—4. This imports that Jerusalem, which had been the head of the nation, full of inhabitants, and numerous, but now weak, as hairs, should undergo the foulest disgrace and bitterest grief; and, being weighed in the balances of God's justice, should have punishment answerable to their guilt: the

* The threefold division of judgments (chap. 5. 12), seems, most probably, to have been adapted to three political factions into which the people were divided. 7 And the slain shall fall in the midst of you; and [g] ye shall know that I am the LORD.

8 ¶ Yet will I leave [h] a remnant, that ye may have some that shall escape the sword among the nations, when ye shall be scattered through the countries.

9 And they that escape of you shall [i] remember me among the nations whither they shall be carried captives, because [k] I am broken[§] with their whorish heart, which hath departed from me, and with their eyes, which go a whoring after their idols: and they shall loathe themselves for the evils which they have committed in all their abominations.

10 [l] And they shall know that I am the LORD, and that I have not said in vain that I would do this evil unto them.

11 ¶ Thus saith the Lord GOD, [m] Smite with thine hand, and stamp with thy foot,[¶] and say, Alas for all the evil abominations of the house of Israel! for they shall fall by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence.

12 He that is far off shall die of the pestilence; and he that is near shall fall by the sword; and he that remaineth and is besieged shall die by the famine: thus will I accomplish my fury upon them.*

13 Then shall ye know that I am the LORD, when their slain men shall be among their idols round about their altars, upon [n] every high hill, in all the tops of the mountains, and under every green tree, and under every thick oak, the place where they did offer sweet savour to all their idols.

city should be taken and burnt; one-third of the inhabitants consumed in the flames, or by the pestilence and famine; another slain during the siege, or in attempting to escape; the other be led captive to Chaldea, or flee for refuge to Egypt, Moab, and Ammon, whither the sword of the Chaldeans would pursue them. A few of them seemed reserved for mercy; but the slaughter of Gedaliah their governor, and others, and their flight into Egypt, not only issued in their own ruin, but provoked the Chaldeans to further cruelties against the remains of their nation.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—If men will not be reformed, they must certainly be ruined: and with great ease, and by a vast variety of judgments, God can accomplish the destruction of obstinate sinners. It is very awful when those, who appeared as marked for monuments of mercy, are destroyed in wrath: and highly criminal when such as had been singularly privileged with God's favours, oracles, and ordinances, for promoting the welfare of all around them, become a plague, and the vilest monsters in wickedness: and yet often apostate professors become more abandoned than heathens! How awful it is when idols and their services are admitted into God's land, his temple, his church, and the heart formed for himself! The immediate agents in the ruin of sinners are all the instruments of an angry God: and when his wrath is kindled, who can abide it! It is dreadful to have him glorified by, or rejoicing in, our everlasting destruction. And, alas, in what unpitied condition must the impenitent perish for ever! If public reproofs cannot restrain public wickedness, public judgments must follow at last. Some must be destroyed for the instruction and warning of others. And if God bear long with us in our sins, his judgments must be the severer when they are inflicted. And the most incredulous will at length be forced to believe his word, though it should be by their own everlasting destruction.

war make in nations. And no place, no idol, no station, can protect from God's wrath. If men will not destroy idols, he will find a way, even by idolaters, to destroy both together. His persevering patience, as well as both mercies and judgments, encourage and excite to a cordial and thorough repentance. And loathsome and abominable is the most beloved sin to a person truly penitent. Yea, hopeful is the case when sinners begin to remember God, and the base affronts which they have given him. And nothing more deeply wounds awakened consciences than a sense of their base ingratitude, and of grieving the holy Spirit of God. God will make all men, either by their ruin, or especially by their hearty repentance, effectually to acknowledge his perfections, to feel the equity and veracity of his word, and justify him in the accomplishment of it. The sins and judgments of others should affect us as well as our own. And ministers must often weep over them who never shed a tear for themselves.

CHAP. VII.—Ver. 7. The beginning of desolation is come upon you who remain in Judea; and ye shall quickly meet with real and terrible trouble, and not more fears and ill-grounded fancies of it. 10—15. Since pride and violence have come to such intolerable heights among all ranks, the haughty and cruel Chaldeans are in readiness to punish you; and all orders shall be equally involved in your misery: such as sell fields shall not return to them in the year of jubilee, being captives in Babylon; yea, after their seventy years' captivity, it will be impossible for many to find their own inheritances. This prediction of the desolation of the country, and of its inhabitants, shall not fail of exact accomplishment: nor shall any be able to secure themselves from those judgments threatened, so long as they continue in their evil courses. They may blow the trumpets, to call them together for war; but, deprived of all courage and resolution, by my wrath upon them, none shall dare to assemble. 16—22. The few appointed for escape shall indeed be preserved, and scattered here and there for their safety; and they shall bitterly bewail their calamities and sins. All shall be quite dispirited, and incapable of helping themselves; and shall be quite overwhelmed with grief, terror, and shame. Their wealth shall be altogether unprofitable to them; nay, they shall be glad to be rid of it, or shall have it seized by the enemy: or, in the famine, it shall be unable to procure them sufficient food,—since they have made it the occasion of manifold wickedness, and have employed it in the service of idols. And as for my magnificent and beautiful temple, which has long been the glory of their nation, and which they have defiled with their idols and the service of them, I will quickly drive them far from it into Chaldea, and will give it into the hands of the most infamous heathens, to be defiled, plundered, and destroyed. 23—27. † Fire—the emblem of power to consume in judgment, (2 Pet. 3. 7.)—Brightness—the excellence and glory of Christ.—Amber—neither as fire to consume, nor bright as light, but a chastened radiance which the eye might look upon with pleasure, Is. 45. 22. John 1. 14. Heb. 1. 2. 1 John 1. 1—3.—ED.

Acts 8. 39, 40. 2 Cor. 12. 2—4), or merely in "the visions of God," it is impossible decisively to say. Both modes of revelation are alike easy to God. ᵇ Ver. 5, ch. 7. 24. 2 Chr. 4. 9. 2 Kin. 16. 14.

§ The seat.—The niche, or pedestal, on which the image was placed. It is called "image of jealousy," because it provoked the LORD who is "a jealous God"—jealous of his own honour; jealous of any perversion of his truth, or degradation of his worship; and jealous lest any base idol or abominable lust should steal away from him the love of his children—the allegiance of his subjects—the fidelity of the church he had espoused in the bonds of the everlasting covenant.—ED.

4 And, behold, the glory of the God of Israel was there, according to the vision that I saw in the plain.

5 ¶ Then said he unto me, Son of man, lift up thine eyes now the way toward the north. So I lifted up mine eyes the way toward the north, and behold northward, at the gate of the altar, this image of jealousy in the entry.

6 He said furthermore unto me, Son of man, seest thou what they do? even the great abominations that the house of Israel committeth here, that I should go far off ᵘ from my sanctuary? but turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations.

8 Then said he unto me, Son of man, dig now in the wall: and when I had digged in the wall, behold a door.

13 ¶ He said also unto me, Turn thee yet again, and thou shalt see greater abominations that they do.

14 Then he brought me to the door of the gate of the LORD's house which was toward the north; and, behold, there sat women ᵍweeping for Tammuz.§

17 Then he said unto me, Hast thou seen this, O son of man? ʰ Is it a light thing to the house of Judah that they commit the abominations which they commit here? for they have filled the land with violence, and have returned to provoke me to anger; and, lo, ⁱthey put the branch† to their nose.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—God gives to sinners fair warning of their approaching ruin; and with composure and unblemished equity he destroys them. But fearful and various are the plagues which men's diversified iniquities entail upon them. And nothing can avail for their defence when God rises up to judgment. Sins and sorrows are inseparable. But happy then are they who mourn after a godly sort! Blessed are they that weep now, for they shall be comforted! Money is a dangerous snare to such as inordinately love it, and altogether unprofitable in the day of God's wrath, or in the eternal state. Justly are God's ordinances taken from those who despised and profaned them. If men will not be governed by the laws, and experience the power, of godliness, it is not meet that they should long be honoured by the form of it. And if all ranks will add sin to sin, it is but just that God should make all of them to share in miseries, one after another.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—God keeps a particular account of every message that he sends us, and will shortly call us to account for them. And when we are faithful and active in improving the discoveries which God hath bestowed upon us, we may expect more. The more we retire from the world into our own heart, and fix our attention on things above, we may more reasonably hope for still further communications from God. And to see his glory is an excellent mean of discovering to us the infinitely odious nature of idolatry

HE cried also in mine ears with a loud voice, saying, Cause them that have charge* over the city to draw near, even every man with his destroying weapon in his hand.

2 And, behold, six men† came from the way of the higher gate, which lieth toward the north, and every man a slaughter-weapon in his hand; and one man among them was clothed with linen,‡ with a writer's inkhorn [a] by his side: and they went in, and stood beside the brazen altar.

3 And the glory of the God of Israel was gone up§ from the cherub, whereupon he was, to the threshold of the house: and he called to the man clothed with linen, which had the writer's inkhorn by his side;

4 And the LORD said unto him, Go through the midst of the city, through the midst of Jerusalem, and set a mark‖ upon the foreheads of the men that sigh and that cry for all the abominations that be done in the midst thereof.

5 ¶ And to the others he said in mine hearing, Go ye after him through the city, and smite; let not your eyes spare, neither have ye pity:

6 Slay* utterly old and young, both maids, and little children, and women; but come not near any man upon whom is the mark; and begin at my sanctuary. Then they began at the ancient men† which were before the house.

7 And he said unto them, Defile the house, and fill the courts with the slain; go ye forth. And they went forth, and slew in the city.

8 ¶ And it came to pass, while they were slaying them, and I was left, that I fell upon my face, and cried, and said, Ah Lord GOD! wilt thou destroy all the residue of Israel in thy pouring out of thy fury upon Jerusalem?

9 Then said he unto me, The iniquity of the house of Israel and Judah is exceeding great, and the land is *full of blood,† and the city full of ‡perverseness: for they say, [b] The LORD hath forsaken the earth, and the LORD seeth not.

Some early Christian writers admitting this to be the mark, yet held it was in the Samaritan character, which was in form of a cross—thus showing how early the superstitious use of that symbol of salvation had crept into the church. From Rev. 14. 1, the mark will be found to be the names of the Father, acknowledging his children, and sealing them with the spirit of promise until the day of redemption; and the name of the Lamb, (Rev. 22. 4), acknowledging those whom he had redeemed, washed in his blood, and clothed in his righteousness. (1) Vision of coals of fire: 1—7. (2) Vision of the cherubims: 8—22.

THEN I looked, and, behold, in the firmament that was above the head of the cherubims there appeared over them as it were a sapphire-stone, as the appearance of the likeness of a throne.

2 And he spake* unto the man clothed with linen, and said, Go in between the wheels,† even under the cherub, and fill ‡thine hand with coals of fire from between the cherubims, and scatter them over the city. And he went in in my sight.

§ Right side.—The pillar called Jachin, or the strengthener, stood upon the right side of the entrance. —The brazen sea, representing the washing of regeneration, stood on the right (side. 1 Kin. 7. 39.)—There also were the candlesticks, representing gospel light, (1 Kin. 7. 49.) On the right side of the altar stood the angel that heralded the Messiah (Luke 1. 11.); and on the right side of the sepulchre, the angel that announced and testified his resurrection. (Mark 16. 5.) From these facts it will be easy to gather why the cherubim, either the representatives of the "ministering spirits, that minister to them who shall be heirs of salvation," or the emblems of the church of the redeemed, represented by her apostolic messengers, should take their place on the "right side of the house," which was also the side of the ship upon which our Lord directed his disciples to cast their net (John 21. 6)—the directory for their conduct when they act as "fishers of men." and other wickedness, which turns his truth into a lie, and his glory into shame. What multitudes of abominations crowd together! If one be found, we may reckon of thousands which still lie hid. But it will require a diligent search to find them out, either in ourselves or others. And nowhere may we expect greater or more heinous abominations than in connexion with the worship of God. Many make a fair show in God's house in public, who, if followed to their secret chambers, would be found sunk in filthiness and impiety. And seldom can any be found worse than evil ministers and magistrates. Nothing more encourages men to indulgence, or even impudence, in sin, than a practical disbelief of God's all-seeing knowledge and all-present majesty. If once women transgress the natural modesty of their sex, they bid fair to stick at nothing horrid or obscene. And if men once turn their back upon God's institutions, they bid fair endlessly to wander after their own inventions. But shortly shall the most secret abominations be discovered, and the most shocking and daring be sufficiently punished.

CHAP. IX.—Ver. 2—11. The six armed destroyers denote the Chaldeans, and other instruments of God's vengeance. The man with the inkhorn denotes Jesus Christ, who manages all the slaughter of apostate nations, nay, all in the world, so as may consist with the preservation of his people, especially those who faithfully mourn over, and testify against, abounding iniquities.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—God's ministers of wrath, no less than of mercy, are always ready at his call. But how exceeding loath he is to leave a church, till their obstinacy and impudence, as it were, force him away! And gradual even then are the removals of his comfortable presence. But even in the midst of ruin and destruction, he takes peculiar care of the protection of his followers, however weak and concealed their holiness and zeal may be. He knows them that are his; and not one of them shall be lost. And he will keep them safe amidst common calamities, who keep themselves pure amidst abounding provocations. But when he has gathered his wheat into his garner, nothing remains for the chaff but unquenchable fire. Those who persist in impenitence must die without mercy. And none meet with more terrible destruction than unfaithful magistrates and ministers. God's temple protects penitent, not obstinate, offenders. And if judgment begin at the house of God, where shall the ungodly and sinner appear? If servants in it defile it with their idolatries, no wonder that God should suffer the enemies of it to defile it with their violences.—But if God spare us in mercy, we ought to intercede for our sinful brethren.—And even though for their sinfulness God should refuse to grant our requests, he will condescend to show us the reasons of his conduct.

CHAP. X.—Ver. 1—7. The throne, ver. 1. denotes God's coming in a way of judgment against the Jews. The man clothed in linen, taking the fire from between the cherubims to scatter over the city, 2, 6, 7, denotes Christ as executing the destructive vengeance of God on Jerusalem, according to the predictions of his prophets, and by the ministration of angels. The bright cloud that filled the inner court, 3, 4, might denote the terrible vengeance of God on the priests; or his presence, as leaving the Jews and coming to the Gentiles. The terrible sound 18 Then the glory of the LORD departed from off the threshold of the house, and stood over the cherubims.*

19 And the cherubims lifted up their wings, and mounted up from the earth in my sight: when they went out, the wheels also were beside them; and every one stood at the door of the east gate of the LORD's house; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above.

‡ The word "cherub" being here substituted for "ox" in the former vision (chap. i. 10.), has led to the opinion that the cherubims in the temple were delineated with the faces of oxen, and wings of birds—emblems of peace, patience, strength, and labour, combined with alacrity. This opinion, however, is rendered somewhat doubtful by the mention of cherubims and oxen as separate species (1 Kin. 7. 29), but these may have been mere oxen, and not winged oxen, the one setting forth the alacrity that gives perfection to the labour of the other.—ED.

a Ch. 8. 12, 14, 22. & 9. 2. ver. 24. Acts 8. 39. 1 Kin. 18. 12.

* Five and twenty men.—The Jewish senate, or sanhedrim, consisted of six representatives or heads of each tribe, in all 72, but usually called the seventy: these were all discovered to have secretly turned idolaters. (chap. 8. 11, 12.) Next, the LORD discovered to the prophet 25 (more than one-third of the whole) who had turned their backs upon the temple, and openly and avowedly become sun-worshippers and abettors of violence and bloodshed, (chap. 9. 16, 17. See ver. 6.) These seem to be the 25 evil counsellors, now discovered and denounced.—ED.

‡ Or, it is not for us to build houses near.

§ As if they had said, "the destruction of the city—the judgment of God—is not near. When this city shall become a caldron, and we the flesh, then, but not till then (that is, never) will the prophecy of Ezekiel be fulfilled." Thus mocking Ezekiel by a reference to Jeremiah, who had compared the judgments of Jerusalem to a seething-pot. Jer. i. 13.—ED.

b Ch. 2. 2. & 3. 17, 24. Ex. 4. 12.

‖ The prophets and other innocent persons slain in the times of Manasseh—they have found Jerusalem indeed a caldron—but "I will bring you forth out of the midst of it," (ver. 11), and adjudge you to many deaths—the living death of cowards, (ver. 8), the drudgery of slaves, (ver. 9), the vain regrets of exiles, and the pitiless execution of a foreign sword, ver. 10.—ED.

* Hamath on the "border" (Num. 34. 8, 11), was the place where the sons of Zedekiah and all the princes were slain. Jer. 52. 9, 10.—ED.

c Ch. 6. 7. & 12. 9, 14, 21, 23. Is. 26. 11. Ps. 9. 16.

1 MOREOVER, [a] the spirit lifted me up, and brought me unto the east gate of the LORD's house, which looketh eastward: and behold at the door of the gate five and twenty men;* among whom I saw Jaazaniah the son of Azur, and Pelatiah the son of Benaiah, princes of the people.

2 Then said he unto me, Son of man, these are the men that devise † mischief, and give wicked counsel in this city;

3 Which say, ‡ It is not near;§ let us build houses: this city is the caldron, and we be the flesh.

4 ¶ Therefore prophesy against them, prophesy, O son of man.

5 And the spirit of the LORD [b] fell upon me, and said unto me, Speak; Thus saith the LORD, Thus have ye said, O house of Israel: for I know the things that come into your mind, every one of them.

6 Ye have multiplied your slain in this city, and ye have filled the streets thereof with the slain.

7 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Your slain,‖ whom ye have laid in the midst of it, they are the flesh, and this city is the caldron: but I will bring you forth out of the midst of it.

8 Ye have feared the sword; and I will bring a sword upon you, saith the Lord GOD.

9 And I will bring you out of the midst thereof, and deliver you into the hands of strangers, and will execute judgments among you.

10 Ye shall fall by the sword: I will judge you in the border* of Israel; and [c] ye shall know that I am the LORD.

of the cherubim's wings heard even to the outer court, 5, may denote the terrible judgments of God on the Jews, heard of among the heathen; or the gospel published by the Apostles to the Gentiles. 13. I plainly discerned, that every providential dispensation, and every particular church, was under the direction and government of some superior being, even God himself. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—How glorious and majestic are the appearances of God in his providence or church! Awful is the ministration of angels, or messages of faithful ministers! And terrible are the denunciations of JEHOVAH's wrath, especially against apostate professors! And deep the concern of Jesus Christ, and his angels and ministers, in the execution of it! He hath all judgment committed to him; and at his last coming, he will scatter his coals of fire over our earth, and for ever over the world of the ungodly. Harmonious and uniform, steady and regular, are the motions of Providence, and the divine management of churches amidst all their variations. All things are fixed by God's unalterable decree, and brought to pass by his irresistible energy.—But by slow degrees, and in seeming aversion, doth he remove his gracious presence and ordinances from a people, as one glad to return upon their gospel repentance and humble requests.

CHAP. XI.—Ver. 2, 3. They contrive schemes for the defence of the city, and encourage the people to rebel in defiance of God's threatenings, pretending that the Chaldeans will not in their times be able to take the city, or pluck them out of it. 6—11. Since you have seduced the people to stand out against the Chaldeans, contrary to the direction of God, therefore the most of them are slain, and become like flesh in a pot; and the Chaldeans shall carry you ringleaders in 12 And ye shall know that I am the LORD: [e] for ye have not walked in my statutes, neither executed my judgments, but [e] have done after the manners of the heathen that are round about you.

13 ¶ And it came to pass, [f] when I prophesied, that Pelatiah the son of Benaiah [g] died.[†] Then [h] fell I down upon my face, and cried with a loud voice, and said, Ah Lord GOD! wilt thou make a full end of the remnant of Israel?

14 ¶ [i] Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

15 Son of man, thy [k] brethren, even thy brethren, the men of thy kindred, and all the house of Israel wholly, are they unto whom the inhabitants of Jerusalem have said, [l] Get you far from the LORD; unto us is this land given in possession.[‡]

16 Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Although [m] I have cast them far off among the heathen, and although I have scattered them among the countries, yet will I be to them as [n] a little sanctuary[§] in the countries where they shall come.

17 Therefore say, Thus saith the Lord GOD, I will even [o] gather[‖] you from the people, and assemble you out of the countries where ye have been scattered, and I will give you the land of Israel.

18 And they shall come thither, and they shall [p] take away all the detestable things thereof, and all the abominations thereof, from thence.

19 And [q] I will give them one heart, and I will put a new spirit within you; and I will take the [r] stony heart out of their flesh, and will give them an heart of flesh:

20 [s] That they may walk in my statutes, and keep mine ordinances, and do them: [t] and they shall be my people, and I will be their God.

21 But as for them whose heart walketh after the heart of their detestable things and their abominations, I will recompense their way upon their own heads, saith the Lord GOD.

22 ¶ [u] Then did the cherubims lift up their wings, and the wheels beside them; and the glory of the God of Israel was over them above.

But the prophet also digged, in vision, through the wall of the temple (chap. 8. 8); and the attendants of Zedekiah are described as digging through the wall, which must mean the wall of the city, through which they escaped in the siege; and there can be no question that both these walls were of stone. wickedness out of Jerusalem to Riblah in Syria, or to Babylon, and there barbarously kill you. 15—19. It is for these your brethren in Chaldea you should pray, who are ridiculed by the Jews at Jerusalem as voluntary forsakers of the Lord, his land and worship, and forfeiters of their property to such as maintained their station and interest in Canaan.—To these, in their scattered condition, will I be a protector, and will accept their worship, as well as if at Jerusalem. These will I gather together, and restore to their country in due time; purge from their idolatries; renew in all the faculties of their souls, and change their stubborn, rebellious, and incorrigible dispositions into those which are tender, tractable, and pliable.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—The higher men are in office, the more criminal is their unfaithfulness. Wicked counsellors hurry a deluded people to the precipice of ruin. But they who put far from them the evil day, will find it terribly surprise them before they are aware. Mockery at God's words will quickly end in misery. It is common for Satan to make sinners look on their punishment as either doubtful or distant. Ministers have therefore need to be exceedingly bold and faithful, in warning self-flatterers and deceivers of others. And for this God sometimes renders some unexpected monuments of his vengeance, that others may hear and learn, and do no more so wickedly.—Proud transgressors often disclaim and detest their inferiors in guilt, and insult such as, in obedience to God, have given place unto wrath. To be banished from public ordinances is heavy to gracious souls; but God's presence and acceptance can more than balance the want. And great is the mercy when remarkable pardons, regeneration, and reformation, coincide with, and prepare for, remarkable outward deliverances. But however loath God be to proceed, the obstinately wicked shall never pass unpunished. When sinners have filled up the measure of their iniquity, he will be glorified in their torment.—The most remarkable visions of God here are but short-lived. But it is of great use when ministers faithfully impart to others what themselves have heard and learned of the Father.

* There is an impatient interpretation of prophecy which is not satisfied unless predicted events can be shown to be just at hand—and this is near akin to enthusiasm. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Ministers ought to accommodate themselves, not only to the weakness, but even to the wilfulness of their hearers. They ought cheerfully to comply with the most difficult and self-debasing method, which God directs for promoting his glory or the welfare of souls. It is necessary that we be affected ourselves with the truths with which we wish to affect others. And we have need to sit loose to this world, and be always preparing to leave it.—God exactly observes what entertainment is given to his ministers or messages, and is highly displeased if they are overlooked or contemned. It is easy for him to take the greatest in his snares, and to make the most hardened sinners either glorify him by their distinguished destruction, or by their conversion and candid acknowledgments of sin.—It is just that they who abuse plenty should be punished with want. Anxious care and slavish terrors can strangely imbitter our comforts, and render them sore judgments. The decay of virtue in nations brings along with it the decay of everything valuable, or a curse on what remains. And if once neighbours, by fraud, oppression, and murder, devour one another, let them expect that God will plague them with common devourers; and that he will make himself known, either in the terrors of his wrath to the impenitent, or in the riches of his grace to such as humble themselves under his mighty hand. How dreadful is it when corrupt speeches become common proverbs, by which Satan hardens sinners against the words or ways of God! But they, who will not believe God's warnings, will too late be terribly convinced by the infliction of his judgments. And let sinners put the evil day as far from them as they please, his threatenings will in due time prevail, and vindicate themselves.

CHAP. XIII.—Ver. 2—6. According to their own inclinations and affections, they publish their own imaginations without any warrant from me, and are extremely crafty, covetous, hardened, and mischievous. But they never do anything to reform the people, or to prevent judgments, or for the security and defence of church or state, which can enable them to hold out in the day of the Lord's judgments. Yea, their visions are but false and counterfeit, though, by their high pretences to inspiration, they have made the credulous people to believe their predictions will be accomplished. 9—16. I will manifest my power in punishing these false prophets, and will expel them from among my people, and I will deny them a return from captivity, because some of them affirmed their seductions for truths, and others supported them by specious, but weak pretences. Yea, the Chaldeans, by their desolating ravage and fury, shall disprove their counterfeit oracles, and every argument used to support them. 18—21. They, by their signs of pillows and kerchiefs, and especially by their flattering predictions of peace and prosperity, lull all ranks into vain confidence and carnal security. By fitting their predictions to every one's humour, they promote their destruction, instead of saving them. For the most pitiful rewards, they pretend my name and authority to countenance their abominable flatteries, denouncing destruction to those in Babylon, whom I will preserve; and promising life and liberty to those in Jerusalem, whom I will destroy. Therefore will I so refute and expose their delusions, that no one shall be in danger of being ensnared thereby; and I will make them more and more abhorred than ever they were loved or feared.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIII.—God never places any in offices for which he does not qualify them. Nor have covetous and men-pleasing preachers any proper evidence of a divine mission. How daring and blasphemous is it to counterfeit commissions from God, or to father the devil's falsehoods, flatteries, and impieties upon him! Very dreadful shortly shall be the condition of such. And they who will not be awed by God's threatenings, forfeit his promised blessings. Alas, how terrible are the winds and storms of vengeance that God has in readiness to plague his opposers! and none shall share more dreadfully in them than deceitful preachers, who have flattered their hearers in wickedness. Shamefully shall they be stripped of their usurped honour, and exposed to indignation and wrath. And all their arts of seduction; their tormenting of the godly, and encouraging of the wicked, will at last redound to their own infamy and ruin. And it is a great mercy to be delivered from such as would impose on, or tyrannize over, our conscience.

CHAP. XIV.—Ver. 3—10. They have given their idols the highest place in their esteem and affections, and have set them up before them as objects of worship.—If any such consult me by a prophet, let them expect nothing but fearful denunciations of judgments, answerable to their abominable idolatries, and the horrid wickedness of their heart; answerable likewise to my glorious perfections, 20 [i] Though Noah, Daniel, and Job, were in it, as I live, saith the Lord GOD, they shall deliver neither son nor daughter; [k] they shall but deliver their own souls by their righteousness.

21 ¶ For thus saith the Lord GOD, † How much more when I send [l] my four sore judgments upon Jerusalem, the sword, and the famine, and the noisome beast, and the pestilence, to cut off from it man and beast?

22 ¶ [m] Yet, behold, therein shall be left a remnant that shall be brought forth, both sons and daughters: behold, they shall come forth unto you, and ye shall see [n] their way and their doings: and [o] ye shall be comforted concerning the evil that I have brought upon Jerusalem, even concerning all that I have brought upon it.

23 And they shall comfort you, when ye see their ways and their doings: and ye shall know that [p] I have not done without cause‡ all that I have done in it, saith the Lord GOD.

CHAPTER XV.

The unfitness of a vine branch for any mechanical purpose, an emblem of the condition and rejection of Jerusalem.

A. M. cir. 3411.
B. C. cir. 593.

* Israel is beautifully compared to a vine, spreading from the Mediterranean to the Euphrates, and covering the hills with its shadow (Ps. 80. 8.); and our Lord takes it as an emblem of his body and his members, and of that godly discipline which, by his providence, or by his church, he exercises for their purification and fruitfulness. John 15. 1—8.—ED.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, What is the vine-tree* more than any tree, or than a branch which is among the trees of the forest?

3 Shall wood be taken thereof to do any work? or will men take a pin of it to hang any vessel thereon?

4 Behold, it is cast into the fire for fuel;

A. M. cir. 3411.
B. C. cir. 593.

* They have "multiplied" their idols, and I, the LORD, will proportionally "multiply" my judgments. —ED.

† That my judgments may take them captive among the idols of their hearts —in their consciences —and make them ashamed of the vanities they have worshipped, rather than JEHOVAH.—ED.

‡ Stranger.— Not every occasional stranger, but any professed Gentile proselyte.—ED.

§ The Israelites did not purpose to "separate" themselves from God—nay, they came with apparent teachableness, to receive instruction from his prophet—yet God pronounced them "separate," because he had said, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me." An awful lesson to those churches both in the East and the West, that have combined pictures, images, relics, and tutelary saints, with the worship of Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; and not less awful to those of the reformed churches, who, rejecting all outward idolatry, have yet set up in their hearts the love of the world, in any of its idolatrous forms. Col. 3. 5. 1 John 2. 15, 16. & 5. 21.—ED.

‖ Not by a reply from the prophet, but by a judgment inflicted by my own hand.—Note. This is the case with all who are seekers after religious knowledge, but careless of religious practice, or living in the indulgence of some secret sin. Let them know assuredly "their sin will find them out," and their Judge who seeth in secret will punish them openly. —ED.

* God does not influentially deceive the prophet into an error; but, if, like Balaam, the prophet "love the wages of unrighteousness," then God adjudges him to be given over to the counsel of his own heart, (Rom. 24. 28); and if, like Judas, he be a traitor to his country or his God, God adjudges him to be given up to Satanic possession (Luke 22. 3—6), and so he becomes at once the dupe and the propagator of lies.—ED.

† Their righteousness.—"The righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ, unto all and upon all them that do believe" (Rom. 3. 22). To him, and to him alone, as "the end of the law for righteousness," gave all the prophets witness. Noah bore witness to him by sacrifice; Job knew him as his living Redeemer; and Daniel proclaimed him as the Son of man whose dominion was to be an everlasting dominion, and whose kingdom should not pass away. which I will magnify in making them the lasting monuments of just indignation. —Their false prophets will I give up to the delusions of their own heart, that I may fearfully destroy them, and those who consult them. 21—23. Either the deep repentance and penitent acknowledgments of those who should be brought to Babylon, or their sinful obduracy and horrid vices, would convince these who had been formerly carried captive, that God had justly desolated their country, and make them glad that themselves had been so early carried captive.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—The very worst of men too often hypocritically put on specious appearances of religion. But it is at their peril to mock God, or attempt imposing upon him. His judgments will fall upon them answerably to what they really are in his sight. Their sin, shame, and misery, are all owing to themselves. And of all sinners, the doom of hypocrites and deceitful preachers will be the most terrible. If we serve idols, our heart cannot fail to be estranged from God, and we must be for ever separated from him. If we love to be flattered in our sins, God will justly give us up to such flattery. And dreadful at last shall be the punishment both of deceivers and deceived. The punishments of sin on earth are intended to prevent others from the commission of it. Nor does God ever take men into covenant with himself without purging them from their odious iniquities. National sins, carried on to an enormous height, cannot long fail to bring on national judgments. And if men who receive distinguished favours notoriously rebel, they may expect complicated judgments. God often averts general calamities for the sake of a few, who, in the general corruption, are singularly upright, pious, humble, and mighty in prayer. But if nations be singularly ripened for ruin, such can only obtain their own deliverance, or a blessing on their own share in the common calamity. Yet how pleasant is it in evil days to see God reserving some monuments of mercy, and to see such benefited by his judgments and repenting of their sin! And it is well when God is not only justified, but glorified, in the manifested wisdom and goodness of his afflictive dispensations.

† These several things — broidered work, badgers' skins, linen, silk, &c.—are first to be considered as literal national attainments, the products of art and industry. And, viewed as such, no doubt, they are so often either idolis-d or dedicated to pride and vanity, that they appear unfit emblems of the humble graces of the Spirit. But to argue from the abuse, against the use of any thing, is most unjust. Even the merely ornamental arts are not sinful in themselves, else God had not so employed them in the garniture of the temple, nor adduced them as evidences of his paternal kindness. It is by considering them as such, that all the evils that to many seem inseparable from manufactures, and all the pride so often exhibited in ornamental dress, are to be counteracted and remedied. He that "gives God thanks" may make what he will; he that "gives God thanks" may wear what he will. But, without thankfulness, the rags of the beggar and the purple of the king are alike liable to conduct into sin.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XV.—In great condescension, God often explains his providences for the satisfaction of his servants and people. But none are more unprofitable than degenerate professors of the true religion. They who will not be useful for the glory of God and his grace, must be made fuel for the fire of his wrath; and must pass from one trouble into another, till they be consumed. And the complete ruin of his implacable adversaries will manifest his excellencies, as well as the perfect happiness of his obedient friends.

CHAP. XVI.—The whole of this chapter emblematically represents the original sinfulness and misery, the gracious conversion, the fearful apostasy, severe corrections, and sovereign recovery of the gospel church, and of elect men. 3—5. Abraham and Sarah were originally idolaters; and their posterity lived in Egypt most wickedly and wretchedly. 6—14. These figurative expressions represent all the favours which God heaped upon them in the days of Moses, Joshua, David, and Solomon; their deliverance from Egypt; preservation in the wilderness; the adoption of them by covenant into his family; giving them his oracles, ordinances, tabernacle, and temple; multiplication of their numbers; rendering them his only church, and a most wealthy, powerful, prosperous, and famous nation. 15—34. Proud of their privileges, they abandoned themselves to idolatry, and employed the wealth which God had given them, in making and serving idols everywhere throughout their country. Their first-born children, who were sacred to God, they sacrificed to Molech. By costly presents they courted the alliance of their 21 That thou hast slain [1] my children, and delivered them to cause them to pass through the fire for them?

22 And in all thine abominations and thy whoredoms thou hast not remembered [m] the days of thy youth, when thou wast naked and bare, and wast polluted in thy blood.

23 And it came to pass, after all thy wickedness, (wo, wo unto thee! saith the Lord GOD,)

24 That thou hast also built unto thee an [n] eminent place,* and hast made thee an high place in every street.

25 Thou hast built thy high place at every [o] head of the way, and hast made thy beauty† to be abhorred, and hast opened thy feet to every one that passed by, and multiplied thy whoredoms.

26 [p] Thou hast also committed fornication with the Egyptians thy neighbours, great of flesh;‡ and hast increased thy whoredoms, to provoke me to anger.

27 Behold, therefore [q] I have stretched out my hand over thee, and have diminished thine ordinary food,§ and delivered thee unto the will of them that hate thee, the [r] daughters of the Philistines,‖ which are ashamed of thy lewd way.

28 Thou hast played the whore also [s] with the Assyrians, because thou wast unsatiable; yea, thou hast played the harlot with them, and yet couldest not be satisfied.

29 [t] Thou hast, moreover, multiplied thy fornication in the land of Canaan unto Chaldea; and yet thou wast not satisfied herewith.

30 How weak is thine heart,* saith the Lord GOD, seeing thou doest all these things, the work of [u] an imperious whorish woman;

31 † In that thou buildest thine eminent place‡ in the head of every way, and makest thine high place in every street; and hast not been as an harlot, in that thou scornest hire;

32 But as [x] a wife that committeth adultery, which taketh strangers instead of her husband!

33 They give gifts to all whores: but thou givest thy gifts to all thy lovers, and § hirest them, that they may come unto thee on every side for thy whoredom.

34 And the contrary is in thee from other women in thy whoredoms, whereas none followeth thee to commit whoredoms: and in that thou givest a reward, and no reward is given unto thee, therefore thou art contrary.‖

35 ¶ Wherefore, O harlot, [y] hear the word of the LORD:

36 Thus saith the Lord GOD, [z] Because thy filthiness was poured out, and thy nakedness discovered through thy whoredoms with thy lovers,* and with all the idols of thy abominations, and by the blood of thy children, which thou didst give unto them;

37 Behold, therefore [a] I will gather all thy lovers, with whom thou hast taken pleasure, and all them that thou hast loved, with all them that thou hast hated: I will even gather them round about against thee, and will discover thy nakedness unto them, that they may see all thy nakedness.

38 And I will judge thee, as [b] women that break wedlock,† and shed blood, are judged; and [c] I will give thee blood in fury and jealousy.

39 And I will also give thee into their hand, and [d] they shall throw down thine eminent place, and shall break down thy high places: they shall strip thee also of thy clothes, and shall take ‡ thy fair jewels, and leave thee naked and bare.§

40 They shall also bring up a company against thee, and they shall stone thee with stones, and [e] thrust thee through with their swords.

41 And they shall burn thine houses with fire, and execute judgments upon thee in the sight of [f] many women: and I will cause thee to cease from playing the harlot,‖ and thou also shalt give no hire any more.

42 So will I make my fury toward thee to rest, and my jealousy shall depart from thee, and I will be quiet, and will be no more angry.

43 Because thou hast [g] not remembered the days of thy youth, but hast fretted* me in all these things; behold, therefore I also will recompense thy way upon thine head, saith the Lord GOD; and thou shalt not commit [h] this lewdness above all thine abominations.

44 ¶ Behold, every one that useth proverbs shall use this proverb against thee, saying, As is the mother,† so is her daughter.

45 Thou art thy mother's daughter, that [i] loatheth her husband and her children; and thou art the sister of thy sisters, which loathed their husbands and their children: your mother was an Hittite, and your father an Amorite.

47 Yet hast thou not walked after their ways, nor done after their abominations; but, * as if that were a very little thing, thou wast corrupted more than they in all thy ways.

48 As I live, saith the Lord GOD, Sodom

† The name of "Sodom" is applied to Jerusalem, (Is. 1. 10), because of her resemblance to that wicked city in luxury, impurity, pride, oppression, and other abominations. But here Sodom is not identified, but contrasted with Jerusalem, (see also ver. 46). Scott, and other eminent expositors understand "Sodom" as representing the Gentiles; but this cannot well be, as they have already been largely converted, while Jerusalem remains in unbelief. Piscator and others render the passage, "If I shall return," &c.; and understand it as saying, "to restore thy captivity is not in my thoughts or purposes; this, however, will not accord with the promise, ver. 60—63. Is not "Sodom" rather to be taken literally, (as undoubtedly "Samaria" is taken for "Israel,") which is to be restored, and understood to mean Moab and Ammon, the descendants of Lot, who escaped out of Sodom when the LORD miraculously destroyed it, and "set it forth as an example, suffering the vengeance of eternal fire?" (Jude 7.) See Jer. 48. 47. & 49. 6. where the restoration of these two nations is expressly promised. And though human history be unable to distinguish them among men, this ignorance cannot interfere with the knowledge and purposes of God.—Ed.

CHAPTER XVII.

(1) The parable of two eagles and a vine, showing God's judgment upon Jerusalem for revolting from Babylon, and turning to Egypt: 1—21. (2) The promise of planting a cedar,—the emblem of the covenant of grace: 22—24.

AND the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, put forth [a] a riddle, and speak a parable unto the house of Israel;

3 And say, Thus saith the Lord GOD, [b] A great eagle with great wings,[•] long-winged, full of feathers, which had [†] divers colours, [c] came unto Lebanon, and took the highest branch of the cedar:

4 He cropped off the top of his young twigs,[‡] and carried it into [§] a land of traffick; he set it in a [d] city of merchants.

5 He took also of the [•] seed of the land,[‖] and [f] planted it in a fruitful field; he placed it by great waters, and set it as a willow-tree:

6 And [g] it grew, and became a spreading vine of low stature, whose branches turned toward him, and the roots thereof were under him: so it became a vine, and brought forth branches, and shot forth sprigs.

7 There was also [h] another great eagle with great wings and many feathers; and, behold, this vine did bend her roots toward him, and shot forth her branches toward him, that he might water it by the furrows of her plantation.

8 [i] It was planted in a good [•] soil by great waters, that it might bring forth branches, and ness, and in sinning against more warnings, mercies, and judgments. 60—63. In pursuance of my covenant made with Abraham, and in the wilderness, I will forgive their iniquities, render them deeply penitent for their sins, and receive them back to their land; and not by the ceremonial dispensation, but by the preaching of the gospel, will I convert not only the ten tribes, but the very worst of the Heathens, to Christ, and unite them into one church.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVI.—Ministers have great need to be faithful in representing to men the sinfulness of their heart and life, and the misery which attends it. But what an astonishing change is made upon them by union to Christ, justification, adoption, sanctification, and spiritual comfort! All our life, honour, safety, perfection, and comeliness, are the free gifts and almighty productions of our Redeemer: and these benefits are all infinitely enhanced from the deplorable condition in which he finds us. But the most shocking wickedness, perjury, idolatry, murder, yea, everything horrid, is produced by pride, ingratitude, and forgetfulness of God and of ourselves. Nor will apostate hypocrites grudge to sacrifice wealth, life, health, and honour, to the service of devils and insatiable lusts. Not even the most abandoned monsters can vie with such in aggravated wickedness: and justly therefore the Lord brings upon them complicated judgments answerable to their complicated crimes; and makes their partners in sin their tormentors in punishment. If sinners will not be warned, they must be destroyed and damned. If they will make themselves vile by their sins, God must make them still more vile by their sufferings. But it is not all the terrors and punishments of time or eternity, but the pardoning and renewing grace of God, that can make men truly penitent for sin. O how infinite is his mercy to pardon and save those who have plunged themselves into the infinite depths of guilt and pollution! and soon shall that mercy be fully displayed in converting both Jews and Gentiles by his grace, and cordially uniting them in the one mystical body of Christ!

CHAP. XVII.—Ver. 2—7. Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, and Pharaoh-hophra king of Egypt, are represented as great eagles, because of their great power, high dignity, tyrannical murder, and oppression of their neighbours. Their great wings represent their extensive dominions. King Jeconiah, and his family and princes, carried to Babylon, were the highest branch carried into a land of traffick. Zedekiah made king by Nebuchadnezzar, as his sworn tributary over the Jewish multitudes in Judea, in a state of subjection to the Chaldeans, is the seed of the land planted with circumspection in a fruitful field, that it might be a vine of low stature. Its bending its roots and branches towards the other eagle, refers to his sending ambassadors to Pharaoh-hophra, for procuring troops to assist him against that it might bear fruit, that it might be a goodly vine.

9 Say thou, Thus saith the Lord GOD, [k]Shall it prosper? [l]shall he not pull up the roots thereof, and cut off the fruit thereof, that it wither? it shall wither in all the leaves of her spring, even without great power or many people to pluck it up by the roots thereof.

10 Yea, behold, being planted, shall it prosper? [m]shall it not utterly wither* when the east wind toucheth it? it shall wither in the furrows where it grew.

11 ¶ Moreover, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

12 Say now to the [n]rebellious house, [o]Know ye not what these things mean? tell them, [p]Behold, the king of Babylon is come to Jerusalem, and hath taken the king thereof, and the princes thereof, and led them with him to Babylon;

13 And hath taken of the king's seed, and made a covenant with him, and hath [q]taken an oath of him: he hath also taken the mighty of the land;†

14 [r]That the kingdom might be base, that it might not lift itself up, [s]but that by keeping of his covenant it might stand.

15 [t]But he rebelled against him in sending his ambassadors into Egypt, that they might give him horses, and much people: [s]shall he prosper? shall he escape that doeth such things? or shall he break the covenant, and be delivered?

16 As I live, saith the Lord GOD, surely in the place where the king dwelleth that made him king, [u]whose oath he despised, and whose covenant he brake, even with him [x]in the midst of Babylon he shall die.

17 [y]Neither shall Pharaoh, with his mighty army and great company, make for him in the war, by casting up mounts, and building forts, to cut off many persons:

18 Seeing he despised the oath by breaking the covenant, (when, lo, he had [z]given his hand,) and hath done all these things, he shall not escape.

19 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, As I live, [a]surely mine oath that he hath despised, and my covenant that he hath broken, even it will I recompense upon his own head.

* This proverb of Israel threw the blame upon Adam in Paradise; or those who murmured in the wilderness; or upon Jeroboam or Manasseh—and by misinterpreting the second commandment, concluded that though they suffered, they had not sinned. The second commandment, no doubt, threatens to "visit the iniquities of the fathers upon the children;" but this threatening is not against the children that love him, but unto the third and fourth generation of them that (actually continue to) hate God, inheriting not merely the blood and property, but through education and example, the wicked principles and practices of their fathers.—ED.

THE word of the LORD came unto me again, saying,

2 What mean ye, that ye use this proverb concerning the land of Israel, saying, The fathers have eaten sour grapes,* and the children's teeth are set on edge?

3 As I live, saith the Lord GOD, ye shall not have occasion any more to use this proverb in Israel.

4 Behold, all souls are mine; as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son is mine: the soul that sinneth, it shall die.

5 ¶ But if a man be just, and do that which is lawful† and right,

6 And hath not eaten upon the mountains,‡ neither hath lifted up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, neither hath defiled his neighbour's wife, neither hath come near to a menstruous woman,

7 And hath not oppressed any, but hath re-

the Chaldeans. 22—24. Out of the royal family of David I will raise up the Messiah, exalt him to my right hand, and make him Head of his church, and of all things to her; and to him shall multitudes of all nations be converted, for salvation and comfort, and become members of his church. And all the nations of the world shall remark my power in exalting and prospering my once despised church, and in bringing down her most powerful enemies, Chaldeans, Jews, Romans, Antichristians, or Turks.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVII.—Ministers must turn themselves every way to promote the conviction or conversion of sinners; and plain similitudes are of great use for the illustration of divine truths, and impression of them upon men's minds. What a despicable appearance, even as ravenous beasts, do the mightiest conquerors and kings make before a great and righteous God! And if his providence reduce us to a low condition, it is our wisdom, and will be our comfort, to submit to our lot, and improve it in the best way we can. But it is dreadfully criminal and dangerous to violate oaths and covenants with God, or even with wicked men, as God is made witness and guarantee of the solemn transaction. Men's sinful evasions to extricate themselves do but involve them in more certain and tremendous ruin. And fatal experience will at last force sinners to believe God's threatenings. It is in vain to attempt restoring the credit of decayed families till God himself rise for their help. And it is infinitely to the glory of his sovereign grace that scenes of wickedness and ruin introduce exhibitions of Jesus Christ, and his eternal redemption and glory.

CHAP. XVIII.—As the observance of God's law was the covenanted condition upon which the Jews held the land of Canaan, and prospered in it, the rewards and punishments here mentioned may immediately respect temporal safety and stored to the debtor his pledge,* hath spoiled none by violence, [a] hath given his bread to the hungry, and hath covered the naked with a garment;

8 He that hath not given forth upon usury,† neither hath taken any increase, that hath [b] withdrawn his hand from iniquity, hath executed true judgment between man and man,

9 Hath walked in my statutes, and hath kept my judgments, to deal truly; [c] he is just,‡ he shall surely live,§ saith the Lord GOD.

10 ¶ If he beget a son that is a [i] robber, a shedder of blood, and [*] that doeth the like to any one of these things,

11 And that doeth not any of those duties, but even hath [d] eaten upon the mountains, and [e] defiled his neighbour's wife,

12 [f] Hath oppressed the poor and needy, hath spoiled by violence, hath not restored the pledge, and hath [g] lifted up his eyes to the idols, hath committed abomination,

13 Hath given forth upon usury, and hath taken increase: shall he then live? he shall not live: he hath done all these abominations; he shall surely die;† his [h] blood shall be upon him.

14 ¶ Now, lo, if he beget a son, [i] that seeth all his father's sins which he hath done, and considereth, and doeth not such like;

15 That hath not [k] eaten upon the mountains, neither hath lifted up his eyes to the idols of the house of Israel, hath not defiled his neighbour's wife,

16 Neither hath oppressed any, [l] hath not withholden the pledge, neither hath spoiled by violence, but [m] hath given his bread to the hungry, and hath covered the naked with a garment;

17 That hath taken off his hand from the poor, that hath not received usury nor increase, hath executed my judgments, hath walked in my statutes; he shall not die for the iniquity of his father, he shall surely live.

18 As for his father, [n] because he cruelly oppressed, spoiled his brother by violence, and did that which is not good among his people, lo, even he shall die in his iniquity.

19 ¶ Yet say ye, Why? [o] doth not the son bear the iniquity of the father? When the son hath done that which is lawful and right, and hath kept all my statutes, and hath done them, he shall surely live.

20 The soul that sinneth, it shall die. The son shall not bear the iniquity of the father, neither shall the father bear the iniquity of the son: the righteousness of the righteous shall be upon him, and the wickedness of the wicked shall be upon him.

21 ¶ [p] But if the wicked will turn from all his sins that he hath committed, and keep all my statutes, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall surely live, he shall not die.

22 All his transgressions that he hath committed, they shall not be mentioned unto him: [q] in his righteousness that he hath done* he shall live.

23 Have I any pleasure at all that the wicked should die? saith the Lord GOD; and not that he should return from his ways, and live?

24 ¶ But when the righteous turneth away† from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and doeth according to all the abominations that the wicked man doeth, shall he live? All his righteousness that he hath done shall not be mentioned: in his trespass that he hath trespassed, and in his sin that he hath sinned, in them shall he die.

25 ¶ Yet ye say, The way of the LORD is not equal. Hear now, O house of Israel, Is not my way equal? are not your ways unequal?

26 When a righteous man turneth away from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, and dieth in them; for his iniquity that he hath done shall he die.

27 Again, when the wicked man turneth away from his wickedness that he hath committed, and doeth that which is lawful and right, he shall save his soul alive.

28 Because he considereth, and turneth away from all his transgressions that he hath committed, he shall surely live, he shall not die.

29 Yet saith the house of Israel, The way of the LORD is not equal. O house of Israel, are not my ways equal? are not your ways unequal?

30 Therefore [r] I will judge you, O house of Israel, every one according to his ways, saith the Lord GOD. Repent, and turn ‡ yourselves from all your transgressions; so iniquity shall not be your ruin.

31 ¶ Cast away from you all your transgressions, whereby ye have transgressed; and make you a new heart,§ and a new spirit: for why will ye die, O house of Israel?

32 For I have no pleasure in the death of him that dieth, saith the Lord GOD: wherefore turn ‖ yourselves, and live ye.

Ezekiel —the Spirit speaking by him—describes a perfect character, negatively and positively; which, if any can claim, he is just. * In his righteousness that he hath done.—How is this to be reconciled with Ps. 14. 1—3. & 53. 1—3. Eccl. 7. 20. Rom. 3. 10, which all concur in denying that there is any righteous—any that doeth good. There is no contradiction. The sinner who has sought a Saviour, (Acts 16. 30), has been "justified freely by grace," (Rom. 3. 24), and is accounted righteous in the sight of God. But how can the sinner be said to have "done" this righteousness? Observe, in answer, what, through grace, the sinner has done — actually done. Through faith in Jesus, and led by the Spirit (Rom. 8. 14), he hath penitently forsaken his sin, (ver. 21. Acts 10. 43.) And, because, through grace, he has done this, the prophet speaks of "the righteousness that he hath done." But all his doing (see Phil. 2. 13), lies in rejecting his own righteousness, (Phil. 3. 9), and receiving, as a gift, (Rom. 5. 15—17,) "the righteousness of God which is, by faith of Jesus Christ, unto all and upon all them that do believe." Rom. 3. 22.—Ed.

† This verse by no means impugns the doctrine of perseverance in grace, (see 1 Pet. 1. 23). It merely states the possibility that a believer may fall into sin—a fact implied in the Lord's prayer, when it inseparably unites the petition for daily bread, with the petition for forgiveness of sin. And when it declares "he shall die in his trespass and sin," it does not necessarily mean that he shall die sinner their guilt, and so perish eternally; but that he shall die under their punishment, as an example and a warning. See Ps. 99. 8.—Ed.

§ Make you a new heart.—This statement detracts nothing from the necessity of being "born again" "of water, even of the Spirit," John 3. 3, 5, (so the Kai is translated. Rom. 8. 23. 1 Cor. 15. 34. 2 Cor. 1. 5. & 11. 13 James 3. 9); nor does it attribute to the deceitful heart of man (Jer. 17. 9) the power of self-renewal, which is as much a new creation in the heart, as was the first creation of the world, (2 Cor. 5. 17). It merely describes that grace whereby "God works in the believer both to will and to do," as his instrument; and whereby the believer, not of his own inclination or power, but "through the Spirit," mortifies the deeds of the body that he may live. Rom. 8. 13.—Ed.

prosperity, annexed to sincere observance, and miseries annexed to gross violations of God's law. It is certain the righteousness, from which a person can fully and finally fall away, (ver. 24, 26.) cannot consist in truly gracious dispositions of heart, or conduct in life, the saints being infallibly preserved in these, 1 Pet. i. 5; Job xvii. 9; Prov. iv. 18. And though men may reform their external behaviour, without supernatural influences from Christ, yet it is not supposed that they can truly repent of their sin, and renew their hearts; (23, 30—32.) but that it is their duty to have gracious and penitent hearts, and therefore to attend the ordinances of the gospel, and receive newness of heart and repentance, as the free gifts of Jesus Christ offered therein, and implanted by his Holy Spirit.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XVIII.—Hardened sinners readily dare to strive with their Maker, and charge him with injustice, when he but justly punishes them. Nor can anything less than the ruin they deserve silence their presumptuous murmurings. Let God reward or punish men's behaviour as exactly as he can, prejudiced criminals will hold his conduct unjust, and their own equal. How extensive is the amiable character of a truly good man! Cordial worship of the true God alone, chastity, honesty, equity, mercy, and withdrawing from fellowship in wickedness, jointly taken, are the necessary lines of it. And none can expect a glorious reward, unless by grace he persevere in his righteousness. But it is vain to seek righteousness as it were by the works of the law, which

CHAPTER XIX.

(1) A lamentation for the princes, under the emblem of young lions: 1—9. (2) For Jerusalem, under the emblem of a vine transplanted into a barren wilderness: 10—14.

A. M. cir. 3411.
B. C. cir. 593.

MOREOVER, take thou up [a] a lamentation for the [b] princes of Israel,

2 And say, What is thy mother?* [c] A lioness: she lay down among lions, she nourished her whelps among young lions.

3 And [d] she brought up one of her whelps: it became a young lion, and it learned to catch the prey; it devoured men.

4 [e] The nations also heard of him; he was taken in their pit, and they brought him with chains unto the land of Egypt.

5 Now, when she saw that she had waited, and [f] her hope was lost, then she took another† of her whelps, and made him a young lion.

6 [g] And he went up and down among the lions, he became a young lion, and learned to catch the prey, and devoured men.

7 And he knew [h] their desolate palaces,‡ and he laid waste their cities; and the land was desolate, and the fulness thereof, by the noise of his roaring.

8 Then the nations set against him on every side from the provinces, and spread their net over him: he was taken in their pit.§

9 And they put him in ward ‖ in chains, and brought him to the king of Babylon: they brought him into holds, that his voice should no more be heard upon the mountains of Israel.

10 ¶ Thy mother is like a vine * in thy blood,† planted by the waters: she was fruitful, and full of branches, by reason of many waters.

11 And she had strong rods for the sceptres of them that bare rule, and her stature was exalted among the thick branches, and she appeared in her height with the multitude of her branches.

12 But she was plucked up in fury, she was cast down to the ground, and the east wind dried up her fruit: her strong rods were broken and withered; the fire consumed them.

13 [i] And now she is planted in the wilderness,‡ in a dry and thirsty ground.

* The address seems to be to Jehoahaz, (comp. ver. 4. with 2 Kin. 23. 34), whose mother was Hamutal, (2 Kin. 23. 31). But by "mother," Jerusalem is evidently to be understood, the nurse and nursery, as it were, of the degenerate prince. The allusion to a mother, however, records a fact often observed, and of deep import—that the good or evil of human character is generally to be traced to the early influence of maternal rather than paternal precept and example. —Ed.

And if by "another" is to be understood Jehoiachin (comp. ver. 9, with 2 Kin. 24. 8—16), neither was his mother Hamutal, but Nehushta. 2 Kin. 24 8.—Ed.

2 Then came the word of the LORD unto me, saying,

7 Then said I unto them, [r] Cast ye away every man the abominations of his eyes, and [s] defile not yourselves with the idols of Egypt: I am the LORD your God.

8 But they [t] rebelled against me, and would not hearken unto me; they did not every man cast away the abominations of their eyes, neither did they forsake the idols of Egypt: [u] then I said, [u] I will pour out my fury upon them, to accomplish my anger against them in the midst of the land of Egypt.

requires of us what only infinite power can effect. And it is infatuated to attempt holiness of life while our hearts are unrenewed by grace. But infinitely dangerous is it to rush upon death and damnation, notwithstanding the most earnest warnings, entreaties, and offers, of a gracious God; or to indulge ourselves in neglect of the most difficult duties, when God hath graciously promised to work them in us.

CHAP. XIX.—Ver. 1—9. The kingdom of Judah, and family of David, abandoned to violence and oppression, associated themselves with their heathen neighbours, their princes and nobles, and learned their ways. Jehoahaz, son of king Josiah, was scarcely enthroned by the nation when he became a tyrannical oppressor. But the Egyptians quickly dethroned him, and carried him off a prisoner. The Jews, finding that there was no hope of his restoration, or of freeing themselves from their dependence on the Egyptians, did, with their consent, make Jehoiakim their king. Conversing with his heathen neighbours, he soon became a most cruel oppressor, and rendered his kingdom everywhere miserable by his tyrannical rage. The Chaldeans and their allies quickly invaded their country, and by making him their prisoner, restrained his oppressive cruelties. Not long after, they transported to Babylon king Jehoiachin his son, and almost all the princes of Judah; and after eleven years more, Zedekiah; and laid the land desolate. 10—14. Once the Jewish state and family of David wonderfully flourished, had many valiant princes fit to sway the sceptre, and in glory and power could have vied with any of the neighbouring nations. But by the Egyptians, and especially by the Assyrians and Chaldeans from the east, the nation is wholly ruined, and the princes either murdered or carried captive; and now the poor remains of the nation are miserable captives in Babylon. And king Zedekiah, by his rebellion against Nebuchadnezzar, hath occasioned the ruin of his family and nation; and never shall any of his family be honoured with an earthly sceptre.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIX.—Faithful ministers have often mournful work put into their hands to declare the awful consequences of sin. It is just and common for those, who terrified and enslaved others, to be affrighted and enslaved in their turn. And they, who fill up the measure of their fathers' sins, lay up sorrows and lasting matter of lamentation for their children.

CHAP. XX.—Ver. 4. Do not intercede for, but reprove, convince, and condemn them for their own and their fathers' abominable iniquities, which they imitate. 5, 6. 22 [x] Nevertheless I withdrew mine hand, and [y] wrought for my name's sake, that it should not be polluted in the sight of the heathen, in whose sight I brought them forth.

23 [z] I lifted up mine hand unto them also in the wilderness, that I would scatter them among the heathen, and disperse them through the countries;

24 [a] Because they had not executed my judgments, but had despised my statutes, and had polluted my sabbaths, and [b] their eyes were after their fathers' idols.

25 [c] Wherefore I gave them also statutes that were not good,* and judgments whereby they should not live:

26 [d] And I polluted them† in their own gifts, in that they caused to pass through the fire all that openeth the womb, that I might make them desolate, to the end that they [e] might know that I am the LORD.

27 ¶ Therefore, son of man, speak unto [f] the house of Israel, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Yet in this your fathers have [g] blasphemed me, in that they have ‡ committed a trespass against me.

28 For when [h] I had brought them into the land, for the which I [i] lifted up mine hand to give it to them, then they saw [k] every high hill, and all the thick trees, and they offered there their sacrifices, and there they presented the [l] provocation of their offering: there also they made their sweet savour, and poured out there their drink-offerings.

29 Then § I said unto them, What is the high place‖ whereunto ye go? [m] And the name thereof is called Bamah* unto this day.

30 ¶ Wherefore say unto [n] the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD, [o] Are ye polluted after the manner of your fathers? and commit ye whoredom after their abominations?

31 For when ye [p] offer your gifts, when ye make your sons to pass through the fire, ye pollute yourselves with all your idols, even unto this day: [q] and shall I be inquired of by you, O house of Israel? As I live, saith the Lord GOD, I will not be inquired of by you.

32 And that which cometh into your mind shall not be at all,[†] that ye say, [r] We will be as the heathen, as the families of the countries, to serve wood and stone.

33 ¶ As I live, saith the Lord GOD, [s] surely with a mighty hand, and with a stretched-out which ye with pleasure lift up your eyes in worshipping them. 9, 14, 22. Out of respect to my honour and glory, I spared them, and proceeded to bestow further deliverances on them. 12. I gave them my sabbaths and ordinances, as a token of the covenant relation between me and them, and in order to promote their sanctification in heart and life. 11, 13, 21. No doubt a perfect fulfilment of the broken covenant of works, if possible, would entitle a man to eternal life; but the immediate meaning of these verses is, that, in a careful observance of God's laws, the Jews should enjoy prosperity in Canaan. 25, 26, 28. I permitted them to make for themselves wicked and destructive rules of superstitious and idolatrous worship, and even to provoke me to desolate their country, by the sacrificing of their own children to Molech.—For by their inventions in my worship, or in that of their idols, they have exceedingly disparaged my wisdom, sovereign authority, and sole Deity. 29, 30. And do not ye to this day impudently keep up the superstitious and idolatrous worship of the high places, notwithstanding all my remonstrances against it? And do not ye, elders, continue in the idolatries of your fathers, notwithstanding the judgments inflicted upon you for the same. 32—38. In vain ye hope to prosper by imitating the heathen idolatries; for I will manifest my power over you in inflicting upon you the most terrible judgments. And I will, in the most wrathful manner, gather you out of all the countries around your own land, and carry you to Chaldea, or some worse place, to be slaves to the most arm, and with fury poured out, will I rule over you:[a]

34 [t] And I will bring you out from the people, and will gather you out of the countries wherein ye are scattered, with a mighty hand, and with a stretched-out arm, and with fury poured out.

35 And I will bring you into the [u] wilderness of the people, and there will [x] I plead with you face to face.

36 [y] Like as I pleaded with your fathers in the wilderness of the land of Egypt, so will I plead with you, saith the Lord GOD.

37 And I will cause you to [z] pass under the rod,[†] and [a] I will bring you into [b] the bond of the covenant.

38 And [c] I will purge out from among you the rebels, and them that transgress against me: I will bring them forth out of the country where they sojourn, and they shall not enter into the land of Israel; and [d] ye shall know that I am the LORD.

39 As for you, O house of Israel, thus saith the Lord GOD, Go ye, serve ye every one his idols, and hereafter also, if ye will not hearken unto me: but [e] pollute ye my holy name no more with your gifts, and with your idols.

40 For in mine holy mountain, in the mountain of the height of Israel, saith the Lord GOD, there shall all the house of Israel, all of them in the land, serve me: there will I accept them, and there will I require your offerings, and the [‡] first-fruits of your oblations, with all your holy things.

41 I will accept you with your [f] sweet savour, when I bring you out from the people, and gather you out of the countries wherein ye have been scattered; and I will be sanctified in you before the heathen.

42 And ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall bring you into the land of Israel, into the country for the which I lifted up mine hand to give it to your fathers.

43 And there [g] shall ye remember your ways, and all your doings, wherein ye have been defiled; and ye shall loathe yourselves in your own sight for all your evils that ye have committed.

44 And [h] ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I [i] have wrought with you for my name's sake, not according to your wicked ways, nor according to your corrupt doings, O ye house of Israel, saith the Lord GOD.

45 ¶ Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

46 Son of man, [k] set thy face toward the south, and drop [l] thy word toward the south,[*] and prophesy against the [m] forest of the south field;

47 And say to the forest of the south, Hear the word of the LORD; Thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, [n] I will kindle a fire in thee, and it shall devour every green tree in thee, and every dry tree: the flaming flame shall not be quenched, and all faces [o] from the south to the north shall be burnt therein.

48 [p] And all flesh shall see that I the LORD have kindled it: it shall not be quenched.

49 Then said I, Ah Lord GOD! they say of me, [q] Doth he not speak parables?

* Of the providential methods whereby God will effect the gathering of his people, it is not possible to speak with precision, seeing God reveals the fact rather than the means. This passage, however, seems to intimate a series of terrible judgments, both upon the unbelieving Jews, (ver. 38), and idolatrous Gentiles, (ver. 34), by which the separation will be finally effected. Such separations have again and again been exemplified, as in the expulsion of the Moors from Spain, and the Huguenots from France. (See The Suppression of the Reformation by D. D. Scot.) But the Lord knoweth the means; and, when his time arrives, not one jot or tittle, either of threatening or promise, will his providence leave unfulfilled. See ver. 40—42.—ED.

Phil. 2. 9); which power the Jews now reject, but to which, in God's good time, they will humbly and faithfully submit.—ED.

* Jerusalem might be called a "forest," from its lofty buildings; or from the many shady and fruitful trees that gave the surrounding country the aspect of a forest. barbarous nations; and there will I execute my judgments upon you, to manifest my own perfections, and convince you of your wickedness.—And by severe corrections, and by distinguishing the real saints and obstinate transgressors in my punishments, I will re-acknowledge you as my peculiar people, and reduce you to covenant fellowship with, and obedience to myself. 39—44. For a time I will indeed abandon you to your idolatries, and reject you from being my people; but after the captivity, and especially after the dispersion, I will bring you back to your own land, restore my worship among you, work wonders of mercy for your establishment and happiness, and render you deeply sensible of, and penitent for, your own and your fathers' iniquities. 46—48. Since Jerusalem is now filled with inhabitants, unfruitful in holiness or virtue, and is become a harbour for cruel oppressors, thieves, and murderers, I, by the Chaldeans, will burn it to a heap, and destroy all ranks of people in it without remedy.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XX.—Wretched is their stupidity, and presumptuous their heart, who, even under sufferings, ask God's leave to go on in sin! God's choice of us, and his manifestation of himself to us, are altogether of sovereign grace; and to these, not to our own deserts, we owe our happiness. And it is from regard to God's own honour that corrupt churches, nations, families, and persons are so long borne with and preserved. Our disobedience to his laws originates in an inward bias towards the world and the flesh; and if once bad principles or customs be rooted, it is almost impossible to extirpate them. Though, by disobedience to God's laws, men plainly rush upon their own death and damnation; yet where parents are negligent in the education of children, children rarely make the laws of God the object of their earnest study. But when men profane God's ordinances and sabbaths, he ordinarily gives them up to strong delusions in their principles and worship. And dreadful is the case of those to whom the slavery of their own lusts is allotted for their punishment; and when they will not take warning by all the admonitions against, or mischievous consequences of, sin, which have taken place before them.—But they, who will not acknowledge God as their gracious Saviour and righteous ruler, shall feel him their judge and destroyer. His purpose must stand: and he will easily find both place and time to punish obstinate apostates, and to pluck them out from among his people, whom they have corrupted; nor will either sinful compliances or carnal projects avail to their safety. They, who think to serve themselves by sin, do but make themselves slaves to it. And pretences to religion, in such a case, do but add profaneness and hypocrisy to iniquity, and lose men the favour of the world, while they render them the detestation of God.—Even God's chosen must often be saved as by fire, their transgressions are so many, and their corruptions so strong. But afflictions must purge them; and, through all the changes on earth, they must be prepared for their comforts here, and heavenly inheritance hereafter. Their persons being once accepted in Christ, the acceptance of their services done in faith must follow. And O what baseness, malignity, and ingratitude do they discern in sin through the glass of his redeeming love, while they loathe themselves on account of it, and are more engaged to his service. But, alas, that sinners should need to be so repeatedly warned of their ruin; that God's fruitful vine should become an unfruitful forest, and his house a den of thieves! But if all ranks combine in wickedness, they must be jointly involved in punishment. They, who are unwilling to profit by God's word, ordinarily pick quarrels with it, or the manner of delivering it. But if people deride ministers, it is enough that they have a God to complain to.

the righteous and the wicked, therefore shall my sword go forth out of his sheath [d] against all flesh from the south to the north:

5 That all flesh may know that I the LORD have drawn forth my sword out of his sheath; [e] it shall not return any more.

6 Sigh therefore, thou son of man, with the breaking of thy loins; [*] and with bitterness sigh before [f] their eyes.

7 And it shall be, when they say unto thee, Wherefore sighest thou? that thou shalt answer, For the tidings; because it cometh: and every heart shall melt, and all hands shall be feeble, and every spirit shall faint, and all knees [†] shall be weak as water: behold, it cometh, and shall be brought to pass, saith the Lord GOD.

8 ¶ Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

9 Son of man, prophesy, and say, Thus saith the LORD, Say, A sword, a sword is sharpened, and also furbished:

10 It is sharpened to make a sore slaughter; it is furbished that it may glitter: should we then make mirth? [‡] it contemneth the rod of my son, [§] as every tree.

11 And [‖] he hath given it to be furbished, that it may be handled: this sword is sharpened, and it is furbished, to give it into the hand of the slayer.

12 Cry and howl, son of man; for it shall be upon my people, it shall be upon all the princes of Israel: [h] terrors, by reason of the sword, shall be upon my people: smite therefore upon thy thigh.

13 [i] Because it is a trial, and what if the sword contemn even the rod? it shall be no more, saith the Lord GOD. [*]

14 Thou therefore, son of man, prophesy, and smite [†] thine [1] hands together, and let the sword be doubled the third time, the sword of the slain: it is the sword of the great men that are slain, which entereth into their privy chambers. [‡]

15 I have set the [§] point of the sword [k] against all their gates, that their heart may faint, and their ruins be multiplied: ah! it is made bright, it is [‖] wrapped up for the slaughter.

16 [‖] Go [*] thee one way or other, either on the right hand, [†] or on the left, whithersoever thy face is set.

17 I will also smite mine hands together, and [m] I will cause my fury to rest: I the LORD have said it.

18 ¶ The word of the LORD came unto me again, saying,

19 Also, thou son of man, appoint thee two ways, [*] that the sword of the king of Babylon may come: both twain shall come forth out of one land; and choose thou a place, choose it at the head of the way to the city.

20 Appoint a way, that the sword may come to Rabbath of the Ammonites, and to Judah in Jerusalem the defenced:

21 For the king of Babylon stood at the [†] parting of the way, at the head of the two ways, to use divination: [‡] he made his arrows [§] bright, he consulted with [n] images, he looked in the liver. [‖]

22 At his right hand was the divination for Jerusalem, to appoint [o] captains, to open the mouth in the slaughter, to lift up the voice with shouting, to appoint battering-rams against the gates, to cast a mount, and to build a fort.

23 And it shall be unto them as a false divination [*] in their sight, [p] to them that have sworn oaths: but he will call to remembrance the iniquity, [†] that they may be taken.

24 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Because ye have made your iniquity to be remembered, in that your transgressions are discovered, so that in all your doings your sins do appear; because, I say, that ye are come to remembrance, ye shall be taken with the hand. [‡]

25 ¶ And thou, profane wicked prince of Israel, [§] whose day is come, when iniquity shall have an end;

26 Thus saith the Lord GOD, Remove the diadem, and take off the crown; this shall not be the same: [‖] exalt him that is low, and abase him that is high.

27 [*] I will overturn, overturn, overturn it; and it shall be no more, until he come whose right [†] it is; and I will give it him.

28 ¶ And thou, son of man, prophesy, and say, Thus saith the Lord GOD concerning the Ammonites, and concerning their reproach; [‡] even say thou, The sword, the sword is drawn: for the slaughter it is furbished, to consume because of the glittering:

29 Whiles they see vanity unto thee, whiles they divine a lie unto thee, to bring thee [§] upon the necks of them that are slain, of the wicked,

* The Jews will despise this mode of divination; and, because they know the mode to be a mere pretence, will conclude the prediction to be false.—Note. The success of such divinations is no more evidence of their divine origin than would be the success of a prophecy that the sun would rise. That rising is foretold by experience anticipating the uniform course of nature. Even so—they can never err that prophesy evil against evil men: it is the uniform course of Providence.—Ed.

CHAP. XXI.—Ver. 10—13. The king and princes shall be no more able to resist or avoid the Chaldean sword than the meanest of the common people. That terrible calamity will so disgrace the royal power of David's family, that none of them shall ever afterwards sway an earthly sceptre; and when the Chaldeans have executed my judgments on others, they themselves shall be destroyed. 19. Mark on a tile, or on the ground, two ways, one leading from Babylon to Jerusalem, and the other leading to Rabbath the capital of the Ammonites; and pitch on a proper place for Nebuchadnezzar to consult which way he should go first. 23. The Jews, who have perfidiously violated their oath of subjection to Nebuchadnezzar, will contemn and deride his divinations: but he will quickly punish them for their treacheries, by murdering or taking them captives. 25—27. Thou, wicked Zedekiah, who hast profanely broken thine oath to Nebuchadnezzar, shalt now be punished, and an end put to thy idolatry, perfidy, and other abominations, in thy destruction. Thou shalt be disgracefully dethroned, and the whole nation and royal family turned upside down; Jehoiakim, now in prison, shall be exalted, and thou shalt be debased. Dreadfully shall the nation be overturned by the Chaldeans, Syro-Grecians, and Romans, &c. Nor shall it ever attain its wonted lustre and dignity, or any of the family of David wear a sceptre, till Christ take his spiritual kingdom in the gospel church, nay, in the millennium. 29. Your diviners falsely promise you safety and happiness, and that you shall tread down the Jews, whose wickedness hath made them fully ripe for punishment: but they will really bring you into the same miserable condition with these wicked Jews.

CHAPTER XXII.

(1) The sins of Jerusalem: 1—12. (2) Their judgment: 13—22. (3) The conspiracy of prophets, priests, princes, and people: 23—30. (4) Their terrible judgment: 31.

MOREOVER, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Now, thou son of man, wilt thou [*]judge, [†]wilt thou judge the [a]bloody city? yea, thou shalt [‡]show her all her abominations.

3 Then say thou, Thus saith the Lord GOD, The city sheddeth blood in the midst of it, that her time may come, [§]and maketh idols against herself to defile herself.

4 Thou art become guilty in thy blood that thou hast shed; and hast defiled thyself in thine idols which thou hast made; and thou hast caused thy days to draw near, and art come even unto thy years: therefore have I made thee a reproach unto the heathen, and a mocking to all countries.

5 Those that be near, and those that be far from thee, shall mock thee, which art [b]infamous and much vexed.

6 Behold, the princes of Israel, every one were in thee to their [‖]power to shed blood.[*]

7 In thee have they set light[†] by father and mother; in the midst of thee have they dealt by [‡]oppression with the stranger; in thee have they vexed the fatherless and the widow.

8 Thou hast despised mine holy things, and hast profaned my sabbaths.

9 In thee are [c]men that carry tales to shed blood; and in thee they eat upon the mountains; [§]in the midst of thee they commit lewdness:

10 In thee have they discovered their father's nakedness; in thee have they [d]humbled her that was set apart for pollution.

11 And [*]one [e]hath committed abomination with his neighbour's wife; and [†]another hath [‡]lewdly [f]defiled his daughter-in-law; and another in thee hath humbled his sister, his father's daughter.

12 In thee [g]have they taken gifts to shed blood: [§]thou hast [h]taken usury and increase, and thou hast greedily gained of thy neighbours by extortion, and hast [‖]forgotten me, saith the Lord GOD.

13 Behold, therefore I have [k]smitten mine hand[‖] at thy [‖]dishonest gain which thou hast made, and at thy blood which hath been in the midst of thee.

14 [m]Can thine heart endure, or can thine hands be strong, in the days that I shall deal with thee? [n]I the LORD have spoken it, and will do it.

15 And I will [o]scatter thee among the heathen, and disperse thee in the countries, and [p]will consume[*] thy filthiness out of thee.

16 And thou shalt [†]take thine [q]inheritance in thyself in the sight of the heathen; [r]and thou shalt know that I am the LORD.

17 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

18 Son of man, the house of Israel is to me become [s]dross: all they are [t]brass, and tin, and iron, and lead, in the midst of the [u]furnace; they are even the [§]dross of silver.

19 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Because ye are all become dross, behold, therefore [x]I will gather you into the midst of Jerusalem.

20 [‖]As they gather silver, and brass, and iron, and lead, and tin, into the midst of the furnace, to blow the fire upon it, to melt it; so will I gather you in mine anger, and in my fury, and I will leave you there, and melt you.

21 Yea, [y]I will gather you, and blow upon you in the fire of my wrath, and ye shall be melted in the midst thereof.

22 As silver is melted in the midst of the furnace, so shall ye be melted in the midst thereof; and ye shall know that I the LORD [z]have poured out my fury upon you.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXI.—There is great need that ministers should use great plainness of speech in dealing with souls; should observe God's hand in his public judgments, in which even the godly share with the wicked; and should deny themselves, and be affected with their messages, in order to edify others. Alas! infinite is their danger who have God against them. Nothing can defend them from his righteous and terrible judgments. And while wicked men abound everywhere, his wrath shall follow without restraint. Nor is it proper to be jovial, but penitent, when his judgments are abroad in the earth, in order to vindicate his perfections. But it is matter of comfort to saints, that all judgments are managed by Christ, the Son of God, and their Husband and Saviour: and that to them they are but corrective trials, not blows aimed for their destruction.—God can easily force the most proud and crafty plotters on earth to court his direction in their concerns, and lead them, even by events apparently fortuitous, to his proper work. None are more ready to despise God's warnings than perfidious and profane swearers. And in none do these sins look worse than in magistrates and ministers who profess the true religion. But if men despise the warnings and offers of God's grace, they shall be seized by his vengeance; and none are so high but God can debase them, nor any so low but he can exalt them. Pride goes before destruction; and before honour is humility. At what pains and cost do men destroy one another! But if all overturnings in the world make way for Christ, the rightful Sovereign of nations and churches, and his gracious designs, let us be therewith content.—Nevertheless, let the proud reproachers and oppressors of God's people, who wish to extirpate his and their name from the world, remember their iniquities will but draw similar vengeance on themselves, and neither rights nor possessions on earth will avail them anything.

CHAP. XXII.—Ver. 16. I, who was once your inheritance, have cast you off, and now you may support yourselves in your notorious wretchedness in the best way you can. 18—22. They are even growing worse and worse in the midst of my judgments upon them, and therefore shall be terribly punished and destroyed

30 And I [h]sought for a man among them that should make up the hedge, and stand in the gap before me for the land, that I should not destroy it: but I found none.§

5 And Aholah [e]played the harlot when she was mine;‡ and she [f]doted on her lovers, on the Assyrians her neighbours,

6 Which were clothed with blue, captains and rulers, all of them desirable young men, [g]horsemen riding upon horses.

7 Thus she [§]committed her whoredoms with them, with all them that were [‖]the chosen men of Assyria, and with all on whom she doted: with all their idols she defiled herself.

8 Neither left she her [h]whoredoms brought from Egypt: for in her youth they lay with her, and they bruised the breasts of her virginity, and poured their whoredom upon her.

9 Wherefore [i]I have delivered her into the hand of her lovers, into the hand of the Assyrians, upon whom she doted.

10 These [k]discovered her nakedness: they took her sons and her daughters, and slew her with the sword; and she became [l]famous* among women: for they had executed judgment upon her.

11 And when her sister Aholibah saw this, [m]she was more corrupt in her inordinate love than she, and in her whoredoms† more than her sister in her whoredoms.

12 She doted upon the [n]Assyrians her neighbours, captains and rulers clothed most gorgeously, horsemen riding upon horses, all of them desirable young men.

13 Then I saw that she was defiled, that [o]they took both one way;

14 And that [p]she increased her whoredoms: for when she [q]saw men pourtrayed upon the wall, the images of the Chaldeans pourtrayed with vermilion,

15 [r]Girded with girdles upon their loins, exceeding in dyed attire‡ upon their heads, all of them princes to look to, after the manner of the Babylonians of Chaldea, the land of their nativity:

16 And [§]as soon as she saw them with her eyes, she doted upon them, and [s]sent messengers unto them into Chaldea.

24—30. They are not refined, nor washed, by the judgments which I have inflicted. Their prophets combine against upright persons: and persecute, rob, and murder such as oppose them. Their priests wrest my laws to countenance their oppression and impiety: they irreverently officiate in my service; and neither in preaching nor in practice make any difference between right or wrong, clean or unclean; they take no care to have my sabbaths observed: and thus dishonour me by their infamous conduct. Their princes have abandoned themselves to cruelty, murder, oppression, and extortion. Their prophets, by false reasonings, and unstudied discourses, pretended visions, and presages of peace and prosperity, flatter them in their sinful courses. And there is none among them who either apply themselves to reform the nation, or to supplicate the prevention of my judgments.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXII.—Lord, what are men, that they, that professors of the true religion, should be such monsters! And what an awful connexion there is between the different forms of wickedness! There is nothing so abominable but forgetfulness of God, and of his relations and favours, may produce it. But very base and contemptible before God are degenerate and hypocritical professors. Dreadful is the case of a nation when prophets, priests, and princes, are accomplices and ringleaders in guilt. And when there is scarcely a faithful opposer or importunate intercessor, God's vengeance must break in upon them, and render them infamous and miserable. Then shall they tremble under his hand, and feel what a wretched exchange they have made by their apostasy from him. And as their stations aggravated their offences, they shall enhance their misery and ruin.

CHAP. XXIII.—Whoredom here, and in many other places, denotes an idolatrous apostasy from God, their covenanted husband, to idols, and a dependence on heathen alliances. Ver. 4. The Israelites are called AHOLAH, her own tabernacle, because their worship, appointed by Jeroboam, was of their own invention: and the Jews AHOLIBAH, my tabernacle is in her, as they enjoyed the temple and 17 And the [a]Babylonians [t]came to her into the bed of love, and they defiled her with their whoredom, and she was polluted with them, and her mind was [u]alienated from them.

18 So she discovered her whoredoms, and discovered her nakedness: then my mind [x] was alienated from her, like as my mind was alienated from her sister.

19 Yet she [y] multiplied her whoredoms, [z] in calling to remembrance the days of her youth, wherein she had played the harlot in the land of Egypt.

20 [a] For she doted upon their paramours, [†] whose flesh is as the flesh of asses, and whose issue is like the issue of horses.

21 Thus [b] thou calledst to remembrance the lewdness of thy youth, in bruising thy teats by the Egyptians for the paps of thy youth.

22 ¶ Therefore, O Aholibah, thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, [c] I will raise up thy lovers against thee, from whom thy mind is alienated, and I will bring them against thee on every side;

23 [d] The Babylonians, and all the Chaldeans, Pekod, and Shoa, [‡] and Koa, and all the Assyrians with them, all of them [e] desirable young men, captains and rulers, great lords and renowned, all of them riding upon horses.

24 And they shall come against thee [f] with chariots, [§] waggons, and wheels, and with an assembly of people, which shall set against thee buckler, and shield, and helmet, round about: and [g] I will set judgment before them, and they shall judge thee according to their judgments.

25 [h] And I will set my jealousy against thee, and they shall deal furiously with thee: [‖] they shall take away thy nose and thine ears; [•] and thy remnant shall fall by the sword: they shall take thy sons and thy daughters: and [i] thy residue shall be devoured by the fire.

26 They shall also [k] strip thee out of thy clothes, and take away thy [†] fair jewels.

27 Thus [l] will I make thy lewdness to cease from thee, and thy whoredom brought from the land of Egypt; so that thou shalt not lift up thine eyes unto them, nor remember Egypt any more.

28 For thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, [m] I will deliver thee into the hand of them whom thou hatest, into the hand of them from whom thy mind is alienated:

29 [n] And they shall deal with thee hatefully, and shall take away all thy labour, and shall leave thee naked and bare: and the nakedness of thy whoredoms shall be discovered, both thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.

30 I will do these things unto thee, [o] because thou hast gone a whoring after the heathen, and because thou art polluted with their idols.

31 [p] Thou hast walked in the way of thy sister; therefore will I give [q] her cup into thine hand.

32 Thus saith the Lord GOD, [r] Thou shalt drink of thy sister's cup deep and large: [s] thou shalt be laughed to scorn, and had in derision; it containeth much.

33 Thou shalt be filled with drunkenness and sorrow, with the cup of astonishment and desolation, with the cup of thy sister Samaria.

34 [t] Thou shalt even drink it, and suck it out, and thou shalt break the sherds thereof, and [u] pluck off thine own breasts: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord GOD.

35 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, [x] Because thou hast forgotten me, and cast me behind thy back, therefore [y] bear thou also thy lewdness and thy whoredoms.

36 ¶ The LORD said moreover unto me, Son of man, wilt thou [z] [•] judge Aholah and Aholibah? yea, [a] declare unto them their abominations;

37 [b] That they have committed adultery, and blood is in their hands, and with their idols have they committed adultery, and have [•] also caused their sons, whom they bare unto me, to pass for them through the fire to devour them.

38 Moreover, this they have done unto me; they [d] have defiled my sanctuary in the same day, and have profaned my sabbaths:

39 For when they had slain their children to their idols, then they came the same day into my sanctuary to profane it; and, lo, [•] thus have they done in the midst of mine house.

40 And furthermore, [f] that ye have sent for men [†] to come from far, unto whom a messenger was sent; and, lo, they came: for whom thou [g] didst wash thyself, paintedst thine eyes, [‡] and deckedst thyself with ornaments,

41 And satest upon a [h] stately bed, and [ı] a table prepared before it, whereupon thou hast set mine incense and mine oil.

42 And a voice of [k] a multitude being at ease was with her: and with the men [§] of the common sort were brought [ı] Sabeans [‖] from the wilderness, which [m] put bracelets upon their hands, and beautiful crowns upon their heads.

43 Then said I unto her that was [n] old in adulteries, Will they now commit [•] whoredoms with her, and she with them?

44 [o] Yet they went in unto her, as they go in unto a woman that playeth the harlot: so went they in unto Aholah and unto Aholibah, the lewd women.

CHAPTER XXIV.

(1) The parable of a boiling pot displays the irrevocable doom of Jerusalem: 1—14. (2) By the sign of the tearless funeral of the prophet's beloved wife, is set forth the calamity of the Jews surpassing all sorrow.

A. M. cir. 3414. B. C. cir. 590.

AGAIN, in the [a]ninth year, [*] in the tenth month, in the tenth day of the month, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, write thee the name of the day, even of [b]this same day: the king of Babylon set himself against Jerusalem this same day.[†]

3 And utter a parable unto the rebellious house, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Set on a [c]pot,[‡] set it on, and also pour water into it:

4 Gather the pieces thereof into it, even every good piece, the thigh, and the shoulder; fill it with the choice bones.

5 Take the choice of the flock, and [§]burn also the bones under it, and make it boil well, and let them seethe the bones of it therein.

6 Wherefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Wo to the bloody city, to the pot whose [d]scum is therein, and whose scum is not gone out of it! bring it out piece by piece; [‖]let no lot fall upon it.

7 For [*]her blood is in the midst of her; she set it upon the top of a rock; she poured it not upon the ground, to cover it with dust;

8 That it might cause fury to come up to take vengeance; I have set her blood upon the top of a rock, that it should not be covered.

9 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, [f]Wo to the bloody city! I will even [§]make the pile for fire great.

10 Heap on wood, kindle the fire, consume the flesh, and [h]spice it well, and let the bones be burnt..

11 Then [i]set it empty upon the coals thereof, that the brass of it may be hot, and may burn, and [k]that the filthiness of it may be molten in it, that the scum of it may be consumed.

12 [l]She hath wearied [m]herself with lies, and [n]her great scum went not forth out of her: [o]her scum shall be in the fire.

13 [p]In thy filthiness is lewdness: [q]because I have purged thee, and thou wast not purged, [r]thou shalt not be purged from thy filthiness any more, [s]till I have caused my fury to rest upon thee.

14 [t]I the LORD have spoken it: it shall come to pass, and I will do it; I will not go back, [u]neither will I spare, neither will I repent: according to thy ways, and according to thy doings, shall they judge thee, saith the Lord GOD.

15 ¶ Also the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

16 Son of man, behold, I take away from thee the desire of thine eyes with a stroke: [*] yet neither shalt thou mourn nor weep, neither shall thy tears [†]run down.

17 [‡]Forbear to cry, make no mourning for the dead, [z]bind the tire of thine head upon thee, and put [y]on thy shoes [§]upon thy feet, and [a]cover not thy [a]lips, [‖]and eat not [b]the bread of men. [*]

18 So I spake unto the people in the morning: and at even my wife [c]died; and I did in [d]the morning [e]as I was commanded.

19 ¶ And the people said unto me, [f]Wilt thou not tell us what these things are to us, that thou doest so?

20 Then I answered them, The word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

21 Speak unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, I will profane my sanctuary, the excellency of your strength, the desire of your eyes, and [†]that which your soul pitieth; and [§]your sons and your daughters whom ye have left [‡]shall fall by the sword.

22 [h]And ye shall do as I have done: ye shall not cover your lips, nor eat the bread of men.

have wallowed in ease and luxury, and have even courted the friendship of the base and thievish Arabians, that they might bring them ornamenting presents. Where and when are these base alliances and idolatries to stop?

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIII.—Disgraceful to men, and dishonourable to God, are sinful confederacies and confidence in an arm of flesh. And the greater our privileges, and nearer our connexions with God, the more criminal is our apostasy from him. If men will strengthen their corruptions, and bid defiance to repentance, by long-continued customs of sinning, or by reflecting on their former wickedness with pleasure and pride, and will alienate their affections from God, let them not wonder if he mark his detestation of them in the most fearful calamities. If we follow the pattern of punished transgressors, we must expect to share with them in their tremendous plagues. And if we indulge ourselves in forgetfulness of God, the most shocking treachery, gross idolatry, barbarous murder, heaven-daring profaneness, and confederacy with the worst and basest of mankind, will most probably follow. And what can then await us but disappointments, and miseries unnumbered and tremendous? But most shameful is it, when the heathen executioners of God's judgments are less wicked than the hypocritical professors on whom they execute them.

CHAP. XXIV.—Ver. 4—13. Gather the Jews, especially their great men, kings, princes, and rulers in church and state, into Jerusalem, that there my kindled wrath may render them and their people inexpressibly miserable, by sword, famine, or pestilence. Since they continue obstinate in wickedness, let them be destroyed, one after another, by diversified judgments. By their open and avowed wickedness, they have provoked me to punish them with public, correspondent, and destructive judgments. Let resentment and hope of plunder animate the Chaldeans utterly to destroy the inhabitants, and even burn up their city; to see if that will cure them of their vain hopes, heathen confederacies, and obstinacy and impudence in wickedness, notwithstanding all my reproofs, threatenings, and lesser judgments. 21—23. I will give up the temple, that magnificent structure, on which ye rely for security and indemnity, to be defiled and destroyed by the Chaldean heathens; and your friends left at Jerusalem to be murdered; and yet ye shall not dare to make any open discoveries of your mourning for them, but shall secretly, in your own breasts, or with one another, bewail your misery, and pine away in sorrow.

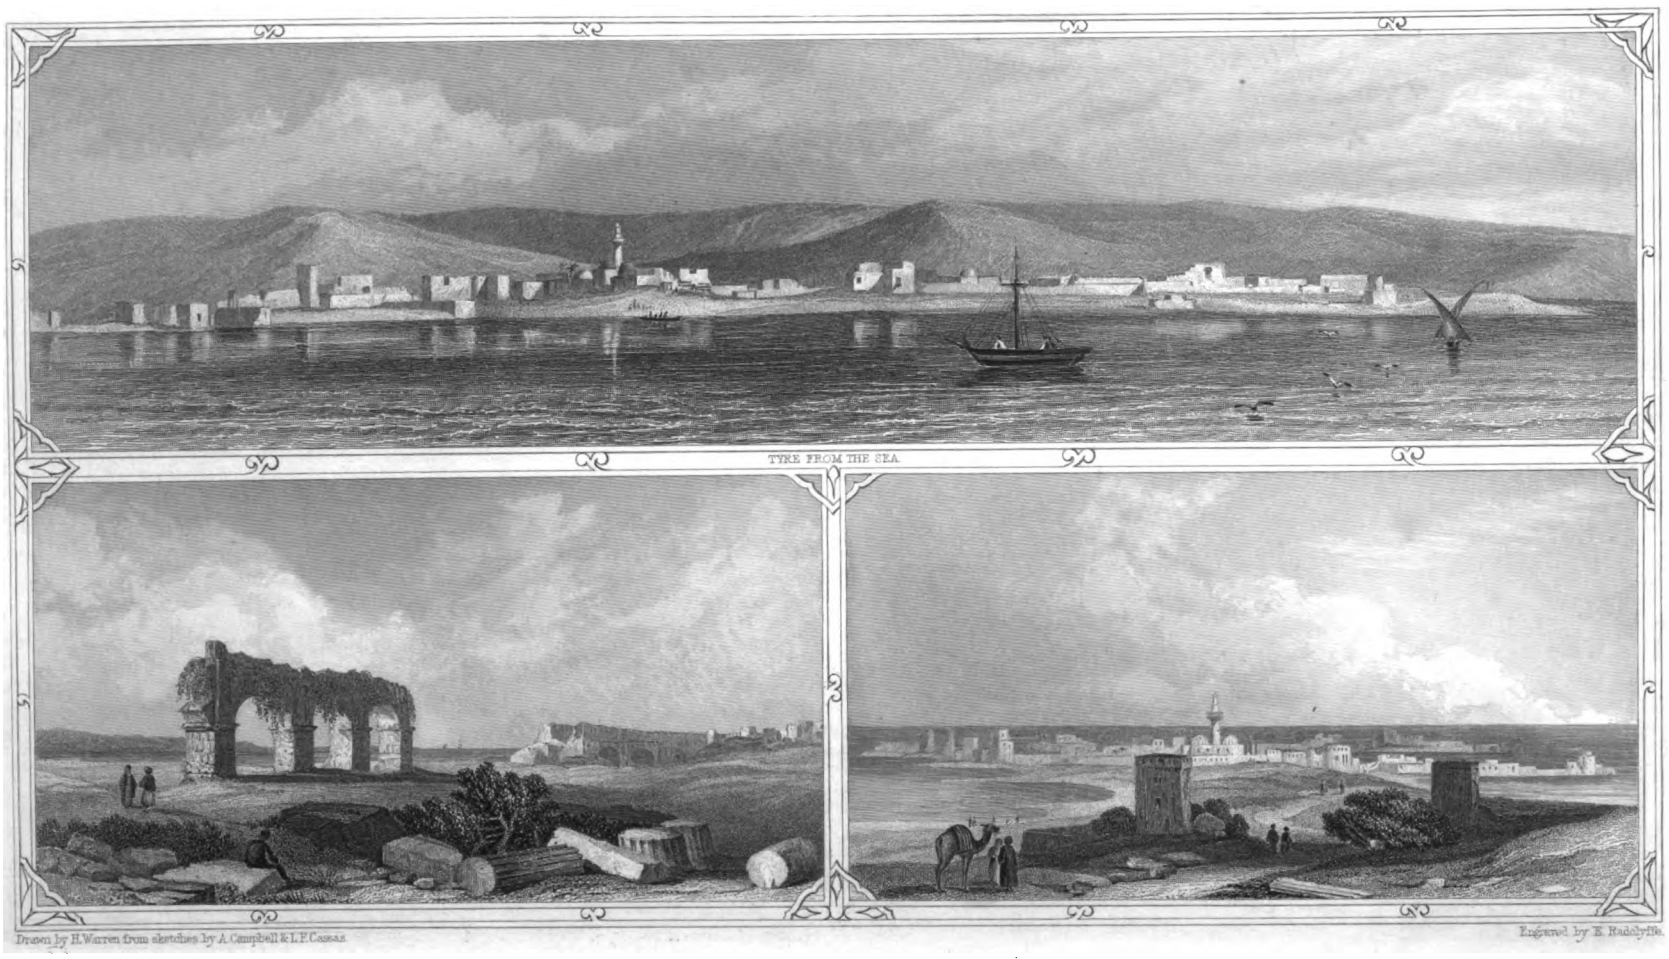
REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIV.—All times, places, and events are under the immediate inspection of God: and it is useful to keep an exact account of his remarkable providences. But men only weary and ruin themselves by following after lying vanities. And inviolable are the threatenings, and tremendous the judgments, of God against obstinate sinners. Daring sinners must be made a spectacle to angels and men. They who harden themselves against God's means for their conversion, must perish without remedy: and they, who obstinately indulge their lusts, must at last be abandoned to them. Agreeable marriage connexions are very delightful. But our dearest created comforts are always on the wing to depart from us: and if they be taken from us, let us eye the hand of God, and hear his language therein:—and by faith let us take himself and his fulness to supply their room. Such submission will exceedingly sweeten our wormwood and gall. The removal of other men's comforts ought to make us think of parting with our own.—But if men hate the power of godliness, it is just that God should strip them of their beloved forms of it, and make them to mourn for their sufferings who never would mourn for their sins; yea, that he should make hardened sinners to feel the truths which they slighted when preached to them. But dreadful is the situation when miseries are so heavy as to stupify and overwhelm the mind. And still more so when men, under terrible calamities, pine away in their sin.



REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXV.—In all ages the seed of the serpent have hated the people of God, or those who had their appearance. And especially in their distress, what unnatural and barbarous instances have they given thereof, as if they imagined the saints had lost their ALL when they lost their outward prosperity! It is indeed mournful when professed saints, by their apostasy, give occasion to the enemies of the Lord to blaspheme. But if God severely correct his own people, he will severely punish their enemies. And they who boasted of any other defence

(1) Tyre is threatened: 1—6. (2) Nebuchadrezzar and his army: 7—14. (3) The astonishment of the sea-kings at the fall of Tyre: 15—21.

A. M. cir. 3416. B. C. cir. 588.

AND it came to pass in the eleventh year,* [a] in the first day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, because that Tyrus hath said against Jerusalem,† [b] Aha, she is broken that was the [c] gates of the people;‡ [d] she is turned unto me;§ I shall be replenished, now she is laid waste:

3 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, [e] Behold, I am against thee, O Tyrus, and will cause [f] many nations to come up against thee, as the sea causeth his waves to come up.

4 And they [g] shall destroy the walls of Tyrus, and break down her towers: [h] I will also scrape her dust from her, and make her like the top of a rock.

5 [i] It shall be a place for the spreading of nets [j] in the midst of the sea: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord GOD; and [k] it shall become a spoil to the nations.

6 And her [l] daughters which are in the field* shall be slain by the sword; and they shall know that I am the LORD.

7 ¶ For thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, I will bring upon Tyrus Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon, a king of kings, from the north, [m] with horses, and with chariots, and with horsemen, and companies, and much people.

8 He shall slay with the sword thy daughters in the field: and he shall make a fort against thee, and † cast a mount against thee, and lift up the buckler‡ against thee.

9 And he shall set engines of war against thy walls, and with his axes§ he shall break down thy towers.

10 By reason of the abundance of his horses their dust shall cover thee: thy walls shall shake at the noise of the horsemen, and of the wheels, and of the chariots, when he shall enter into thy gates, ‖ as men enter into a city wherein is made a breach.

11 With the hoofs of his horses shall he tread down all thy streets,* he shall slay thy people by the sword, and thy strong garrisons shall go down to the ground.

12 And they shall make a spoil of thy riches, and make a prey of thy merchandise: and they shall break down thy walls, and destroy † thy pleasant houses: and they shall lay thy stones, and thy timber, and thy dust, in the midst of the water.‡

13 And I will cause the noise of thy songs to cease; and the sound of thy harps shall be no more heard.

14 And I will make thee like the top of a rock: thou shalt be a place to spread nets upon; [n] thou shalt be built no more:* for I the LORD have spoken it, saith the Lord GOD.

15 ¶ Thus saith the Lord GOD to Tyrus, Shall not the isles [o] shake at the sound of thy fall, when the wounded cry, when the slaughter is made in the midst of thee?

16 Then all the [p] princes of the sea shall come down from their thrones, and lay away their robes, and put off their broidered garments: they shall clothe themselves with [q] trembling; they shall sit upon the ground, and shall tremble at every moment, and be astonished at thee.

17 And they shall take up a [r] lamentation for thee, and say to thee, How art thou destroyed, that wast inhabited † of sea-faring men, [s] the renowned city, which wast strong in the sea, she and her inhabitants, which cause their terror to be on all that haunt it!

18 Now shall the isles tremble in the day of thy fall; yea, the isles that are in the sea shall be troubled at thy [t] departure.

19 For thus saith the Lord GOD, When I shall make thee a desolate city, like the cities that are not inhabited; when I shall bring up [u] the deep upon thee, and great waters shall cover thee;‡

20 When I shall bring thee down with them that descend into the pit, with the people of old time, and shall set thee in the low parts of the earth, in places desolate of old, with them that go down to the pit, that thou be not inhabited; and I shall [x] set glory in the land of the living;§

but his promise, power, and providence, shall quickly be ashamed of their glorying. He who detests revenge, despite, and hatred of neighbours, shall terribly punish the guilty; and perhaps by the hand of those whom they had injured.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVI.—God highly resents our taking pleasure in the death or decay of others for the sake of our own carnal advantage. And there is little reason to boast of, or trust in, created enjoyments, when the most wealthy and powerful cities may quickly be so ruined, as that the place where they stood shall not be known. So weak is human strength, so fading human greatness, and so tottering the rocky foundations of cities! Alas, the dreadful

THE word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, say unto the [*]prince of Tyrus, Thus saith the Lord GOD, [a]Because thine heart is lifted up, and thou hast said, [b]I am a god,[†] I sit in the seat of God, in the [‡]midst of the seas; [c]yet thou art a man, and not God, though thou set thine heart[‡] as the heart of God:

3 Behold, thou art [d]wiser than Daniel;[‖] there is no secret that they can hide from thee:

4 [e]With thy wisdom and with thine understanding thou hast gotten thee riches, and hast gotten gold and silver into thy treasures:

5 [f]By thy great wisdom, and by thy traffick, hast thou increased thy riches, and [f]thine heart is lifted up because of thy riches:

6 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Because thou hast [g]set thine heart as the heart of GOD;

7 Behold, therefore I will bring [h]strangers upon thee, the terrible of the nations: and they shall draw their swords against the beauty of thy wisdom, and they shall defile thy [§]brightness.

8 [k]They shall bring thee down to the pit, and thou shalt die the deaths of them that are slain in the midst of the seas.

9 Wilt thou yet say before him that slayeth thee, I am God?[†] but thou shalt be a man, and no god, in the hand of him that [‡]slayeth thee.

10 Thou shalt die the deaths of the uncircumcised by the hand of strangers: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord GOD.

11 ¶ Moreover, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

12 Son of man, [l]take up a lamentation upon the king of Tyrus, and say unto him, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Thou [m]sealest up[*] the sum, full of wisdom, and perfect in beauty.

13 Thou hast been in Eden,[†] the garden of God; every precious stone was thy covering, the [‡]sardius, topaz, and the diamond, the [§]beryl, the onyx, and the jasper, the sapphire, the [‖]emerald, and the carbuncle, and gold: the workmanship of thy tabrets and of thy pipes was prepared in thee in the day that thou wast created.

14 Thou art the anointed cherub[*] that covereth; and I have set thee so: thou wast [n]upon the holy mountain of God; thou hast walked up and down in the midst of the stones of fire.[†]

15 Thou wast perfect[‡] in thy ways from the day that thou wast created, till iniquity was found in thee.

16 By the [o]multitude of thy merchandise they have filled the midst of thee with violence, and thou hast sinned: therefore I will cast thee as profane out of the mountain of God; and I will destroy thee, O covering cherub, from the midst of the stones of fire.

17 Thine heart was [p]lifted up because of thy beauty; thou hast corrupted thy wisdom by reason of thy brightness:[§] I will cast thee to the ground, I will lay thee before kings, that they may behold thee.

18 Thou hast defiled thy [‖]sanctuaries by the multitude of thine iniquities, by the iniquity of thy traffick; therefore will I bring forth a fire from the midst of thee, it shall devour thee; and I will bring thee to ashes upon the earth in the sight of all them that behold thee.

19 All they that know thee among the people shall be astonished at thee: thou shalt be [*]a terror, and never shalt thou be any more.

20 ¶ Again the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

21 Son of man, set thy face against Zidon, and prophesy against it.

22 And say, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, [q]I am against thee, O Zidon; and I will be glorified in the midst of thee: and they shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall have executed judgments in her, and shall be sanctified in her.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVII.—Great power and wealth rarely fail to have great pride for their companion. How strangely God by trade connects the different nations of the world! And yet, the more extensive trade is, the necessities and dependence of the traders are but the more manifested. Many articles in trade might be easily dispensed with: and yet God's wisdom remarkably appears, in rendering that, which is but trifling in itself, the means of subsistence to multitudes. But the most pompous and powerful nations and cities are certainly and awfully brought down at last. And convenient situations, advantageous harbours, magnificent and elegant structures, numerous and well-manned fleets, choice troops and armour, universal traffic, and wide-spread fame, do but concur to aggravate their misery. But when even their own governors are guiding them to ruin, most sure and wretched is the downfal. And it is very hard for those, who have been wallowing in pleasure, and sleeping in carnal security, to endure remarkable losses, disappointments, and trouble.

CHAP. XXVIII.—Ver. 1—19. You think yourself every way accomplished in body and mind, in dignity and wealth—as happy as ever Adam was in Paradise; having your crown studded, and your garments glittering with precious stones; and regaled, chiefly on your coronation day, with the finest music of instruments, contrived with exquisite art.—You think yourself a very angel, endowed with power to protect your people. You walk up and down as a god, or as the Jewish high priest, all surrounded with precious stones, glittering like fire. And till you discovered your violence, pride, fraud, and joy at the miseries of the Jews, you appeared endowed with all excellencies and prerogatives.—But now, for these thine iniquities, I will overturn thy dignity, eject thee from thy throne and grandeur, render thee a public example of my wrath, and an object of derision to the princes around: and a fire, kindled by thine own imprudence and injustice, shall occasion thy terrible ruin. 22—25. REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXVIII.—It is necessary, and yet very hard, to make proud men know themselves to be but men—but poor, dependent, dying worms. And very rarely they, who are intelligent, wealthy, and dignified, are remarkably humble. Yea, seldom do men carry on very extensive trades without oppressing and injuring their neighbours. But they, who pretend to be God's rivals, are at last forced to quit their claims, and find themselves but men, weak and sinful. God can easily cast the most sinful out of their dignified stations, and devour them with a fire kindled by their own iniquity. Let Britain think and tremble!—How the cup of his vengeance goes round from one nation to another! But the ruin of his people's enemies remarkably makes way for their restoration and happiness. Even when he corrects them, he takes the greatest care that they may not seem vile to those around; and is highly provoked with those that despise them, and help forward their affliction.

CHAP. XXIX.—Ver. 4—7. By my providence thou shalt march out of thy country against the Cyrenians, on the west of Egypt, and lead along with thee multitudes of thy subjects. But the terrible ruin of this thine army shall provoke the remainder to rebel, and never cease their war against thee till thou and thy party be utterly ruined. And the Egyptians shall see themselves punished for encouraging the Jews to rebel against the Chaldeans to their own hurt. 16.

CHAPTER XXX.

(1) The desolation of Egypt and her allies: 1—19. (2) The arm of Egypt broken; Babylon strengthened: 20—26.

THE word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, prophesy and say, Thus saith the Lord GOD, [a] Howl ye, Wo worth the day! [*]

3 For the day is near, even the day of the LORD is near, a cloudy day; [†] it shall be the time of the heathen.

4 And the sword shall come upon Egypt, and great [b] pain shall be in Ethiopia, when the slain shall fall in Egypt, and they shall take away her multitude, and her [c] foundations [‡] shall be broken down.

5 Ethiopia, and [§] Libya, and Lydia, and all the mingled people, and Chub, and the [d] men of the land that is in league, shall fall with them by the sword.

6 Thus saith the LORD, They also that uphold Egypt shall fall; and the pride of her power shall come down: [e] from the tower of Syene shall they fall in it by the sword, saith the Lord GOD.

7 And they shall be desolate in the midst of the countries that are desolate, and her cities shall be in the midst of the cities that are wasted.

8 And [f] they shall know that I am the LORD, when I have set a fire in Egypt, and when all her helpers shall be [g] destroyed.

9 In that day shall messengers [‖] go forth from me [h] in ships to make the careless Ethiopians afraid, and great pain shall come upon them, as in the day of Egypt: for, lo, it cometh.

10 Thus saith the Lord GOD, [i] I will also make the multitude of Egypt to cease by the hand of Nebuchadrezzar king of Babylon.

The record and the prophecy alone abide God's witnesses to the solemn fact, that national sins will sooner or later bring on national judgment and destruction.—Ed.

They shall no more appear proper assistants to the Jews, nor tempt them to recommit their former wickedness, in distrusting God's promises and assistance, or in trusting to heathen helpers, and copying after their idolatries.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXIX.—It is a mercy to foresee the failure of created confidences, when we are most tempted to depend on them. But highly criminal is it for men, even the greatest, to pride themselves in their prosperity, as if they had not received all from God, and that only in loan. Quickly may they expect to lose that which they refuse to hold under him. Alas, how fluctuating are the affections of our most ardent lovers and greatest admirers! They may one day risk their life to assist our ambition, and the next pull us from our station and being on earth. And too often do subjects ruin themselves by foolish adherence to sovereigns, or by undutiful rebellions against them. Nothing is more provoking to God, and injurious to mankind, than to deceive those who put confidence in us. And it is a mercy for the world when he strips those of their power who exercised it in tyrannizing over, or deceiving, their neighbours. Yea, happy is it to have those created comforts and confidences removed from us which estranged us from God. But how alarming is it to behold Egypt, the most ancient enslaver of God's people for about a hundred years, already more than two thousand years in the basest servitude, to Chaldeans, Persians, Greeks, Romans, Saracens, and at last to Mameluke and Turkish slaves!—At the most terrible expense and pains are men bent to destroy one another. And yet, while they are pursuing their covetous and ambitious views, they are but the tools of a sovereign, a wise, a just, an angry God. And often God rewards their services with wealth or honour in this world, and yet with damnation in the next. It is well if he, in wrath, remember mercy; and it is a happy presage when his faithful ministers are divinely countenanced and encouraged in their work.

king of Babylon, and [m]put my sword in his hand: but I will break Pharaoh's arms, and he [n]shall groan before him with the groanings of a deadly-wounded man.

25 But I will strengthen the arms of the king of Babylon, and the arms of Pharaoh shall fall down; and [o]they shall know that I am the LORD, when I shall put my sword into the hand of the king of Babylon, and [p]he shall stretch it out upon the land of Egypt.

26 And [q]I will scatter the Egyptians among the nations, and disperse them among the countries; and they [r]shall know that I am the LORD.

CHAPTER XXXI.

Pharaoh warned by the fall of Assyria.

AND it came to pass in the [a]eleventh[*] year, in the third month, in the first day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, [b]speak unto Pharaoh king of Egypt, and to his multitude, [c]Whom art thou like in thy greatness?

3 Behold, the [d]Assyrian[†] was [e]a cedar in Lebanon [‡]with fair branches, and with a [f]shadowing shroud, and of an high stature; and his top was among the thick boughs.

4 The [§]waters[§] [‖]made him great, the deep [*]set him up on high with her rivers running round about his plants, and sent out her [†]little rivers [h]unto all the trees of the field.

5 Therefore [i]his height was exalted above all the trees of the field, and his [k]boughs were multiplied, and his branches became long, because of the multitude of waters, [‡]when he shot forth.

6 All the [l]fowls of heaven made their nests in his boughs, and under his branches did all the beasts of the field bring forth their young, and under his shadow dwelt all great nations.

7 [m]Thus was he fair in his greatness, in the length of his branches: for his root was by great waters.

8 The [n]cedars in the garden of God could not hide him: the fir-trees were not like his boughs, and the chesnut-trees were not like his branches; nor any tree in the garden of God was like unto him in his beauty.

9 I have made him fair by the multitude of his branches; so that all the trees of Eden, that were in the garden of God, [o]envied him.

10 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, [p]Because thou hast lifted up thyself in height, and he hath shot up his top among the thick boughs, and his heart is lifted up in his height;

11 I have therefore delivered him into the hand of the [q]mighty one of the heathen; [r]he shall surely deal with him: I have driven him out for his wickedness.

12 And [s]strangers, the terrible of the nations, have cut him off, and have left him: [t]upon the mountains and in all the valleys his branches are fallen, and his boughs are broken by all the rivers of the land; and all the people of the earth [u]are gone down from his shadow, and have left him.

13 [x]Upon his ruin shall all the fowls of the heaven remain, and all the beasts of the field shall be upon his branches:

14 [y]To the end that none of all the trees by the waters exalt themselves for their height, neither shoot up their top among the thick boughs, neither their trees [*]stand up in their height, all that drink water: for they are all [z]delivered unto death, to the nether parts of the earth, in the midst of the children of men, with them that go down to the pit.

15 Thus saith the Lord GOD, In the day when he [a]went down to the grave [b]I caused a mourning: I covered the deep for him, and I restrained the floods thereof, and the great waters were stayed; and I caused [c]Lebanon [†]to mourn for him, and all the trees of the field fainted for him.

16 I made the nations to [d]shake at the sound of his fall, when [e]I cast him down to hell with them that descend into the pit: and [f]all the trees of Eden, the choice and best of Lebanon, all that drink water, shall be comforted in the nether parts of the earth.[‡]

17 [g]They also went down into hell with him unto them that be slain with the sword; and they that were his [h]arm, that [i]dwelt under his shadow in the midst of the heathen.

18 ¶ [k]To whom art thou thus like in glory and in greatness among the trees of Eden? yet shalt thou be brought down with the trees of Eden unto the nether parts of the earth: thou shalt lie [l]in the midst of the uncircumcised with them that be slain by the sword. This [m]is Pharaoh and all his multitude, saith the Lord GOD.

‡ The fall of a great man, or of a great empire, must always shake many dependents, and produce a moral impression that cannot entirely be resisted. In the rise of individuals or empires, men are prone to regard merely second causes; such as the talents, the application or the courage of the man; the constitution, the population, the agriculture, the commercial enterprise, or military power of the empire. It is in the fall of either, that God's being and providence are chiefly seen, as by the destruction of an idol the folly of its worship is best demonstrated. See chap. 32. 9, 10.—Ed.

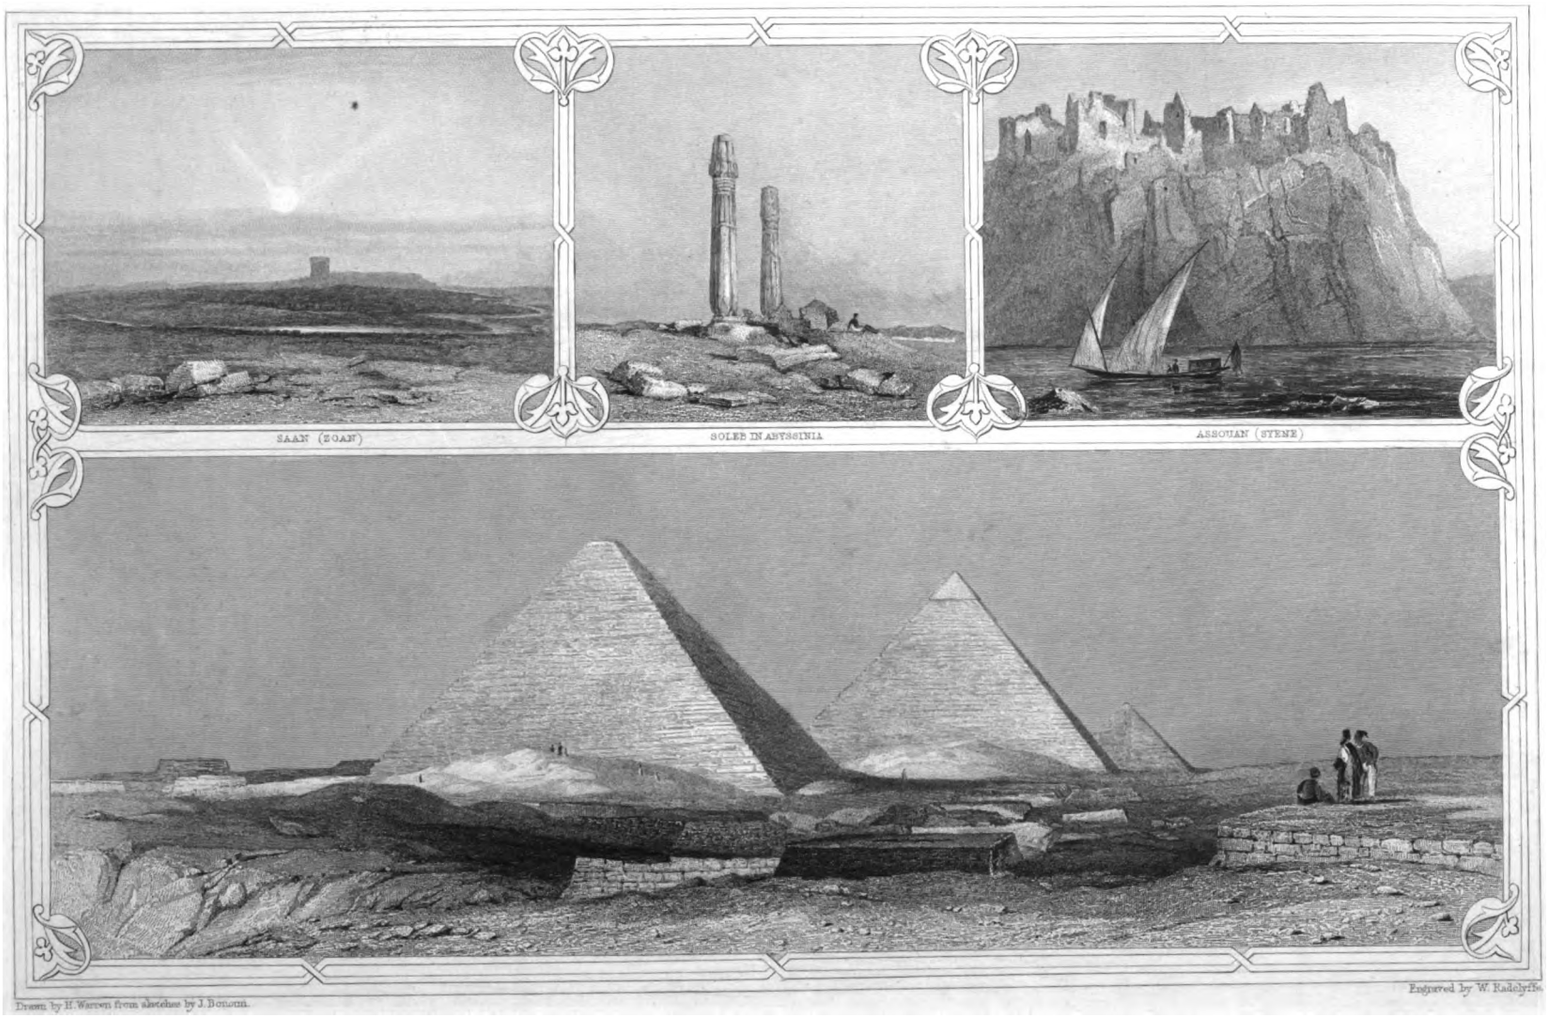
REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXX.—The day of God's just vengeance, however slow, comes certainly at last. And they who will help his enemies must take their destruction along with them. God ordinarily makes one wicked person or nation his scourge to another; easily he can alarm the most distant or secure. And the fall of sinners ought to alarm their survivors. If we refuse to glorify him by obedience, he will take care to glorify himself in our destruction. And if lesser judgments will not humble and reform us, he will bring on more severe ones. He keeps nations in perpetual variation. Nothing is unchangeable but himself. But they who are most elevated in their prosperity are often most dispirited in their adversity. And no conquerors, no armies, have any power at all but what is given them from above.



CHAP. XXXI.—Ver. 3—6. The kingdom of Assyria arrived at an astonishing extent of dignity and power, ruling over and protecting many nations; and their king was exceedingly exalted. Their fruitful soil, enriching commodities, prudent administrations, and traffic with, or conquest of nations, rendered it more powerful and extensive than any kingdom on earth. All the nations about were either under its dominion, or courted its friendship. 13—17. Upon the fall of the Assyrian monarchy the conquering nations made a prey of it, and glutted themselves with the spoils thereof. Let therefore no princes nor kingdoms be puffed up with a conceit of themselves because of present prosperity, as they must all, in their turn, be reduced and ruined. When the Assyrian monarchy was destroyed, it struck a general terror into all its friends, dependents, and neighbours, and put a stop to all trade;—and while the Assyrians and their neighbours bewailed the disaster, the great kings and kingdoms, which had been before reduced, rejoiced to see Assyria in like manner ruined, and to see its armies and dependents brought to destruction.

(1) A lamentation for Egypt: 1—10. (2) Its destruction by Babylon: 11—16. (3) Its communion in ruin with other idolatrous nations: 17—32.

A. M. cir. 3417. B. C. cir. 587.

AND it came to pass in [a] the twelfth year,* in the twelfth month, in the first day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, take up a lamentation for Pharaoh king of Egypt, and say unto him, Thou art like a young lion of the nations, and thou art as a [b] whale in the seas;† and thou camest forth with thy rivers, and troubledst the waters with thy feet, and fouledst their rivers.

3 Thus saith the Lord GOD, I will therefore [c] spread out my net over thee with a company of many people; and they shall bring thee up in my net.

4 Then will I leave thee upon the land, I will cast thee forth upon the open field, and will cause all the fowls of the heaven to remain upon thee, and I will fill the beasts of the whole earth with thee.

5 And I will lay thy flesh upon the mountains, and fill the valleys with thy height.

6 I will also water with thy blood ‡ the land wherein thou swimmest,§ even to the mountains; and the rivers shall be full of thee.

7 And when I shall [d] put thee out, [e] I will cover the heaven,‖ and make the stars thereof dark; I will cover the sun with a cloud, and the moon shall not give her light.

8 All the * bright lights of heaven will I make † dark over thee, and set darkness upon thy land, saith the Lord GOD.

9 I will also [f] vex the hearts of many people, when I shall [g] bring thy destruction among the nations, into the countries which thou hast not known.

10 Yea, [h] I will make many people amazed at thee, and their kings shall be horribly afraid for thee, when I shall brandish my sword before them; and they shall tremble at every moment, every man for his own life, in the day of thy fall.

11 ¶ For thus saith the Lord GOD, [i] The sword of the king of Babylon shall come upon thee.

12 By the swords of the mighty will I cause thy multitude to fall, the terrible of the nations, all of them; and they shall spoil the pomp of Egypt, and all the multitude‡ thereof shall be destroyed.

13 [k] I will destroy also all the beasts from beside the great waters; neither shall the foot of man [l] trouble them any more, nor the hoofs of beasts trouble them.

14 Then [m] will I make their waters deep, cause the rivers to run like oil,* saith the GOD.

15 When I shall make the land of Egypt desolate, and the country shall be [n] desolate that whereof it was full, when I shall smite them that dwell therein, [o] then shall they know that I am the LORD.

16 [p] This is the lamentation wherewith they shall lament her: the daughters of the nations shall lament her: they shall lament for her, even for Egypt, and for all her multitude, saith the Lord GOD.

17 ¶ It came to pass also in [q] the twelfth year,† in the fifteenth day of the month, that the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

18 Son of man, [r] wail for the multitude of Egypt, and [s] cast them down, even her, and the daughters of the famous nations, unto [t] the nether parts of the earth, with them that go down to the pit.

19 [u] Whom dost thou pass in beauty? go down, and be thou laid with [x] the uncircumcised.

20 [y] They shall fall in the midst of them that are slain by the sword: ‡ she is delivered to the sword: draw her and all her multitudes.

21 The strong among the mighty shall speak to him out of the midst of hell§ with them that help him: [z] they are gone down, they lie uncircumcised, slain by the sword.

22 [a] Ashur is there and all her company: his graves are about him; all of them slain, fallen by the sword:

23 Whose graves are set in the sides of the pit, and [b] her company is round about her grave: all of them slain, fallen by the sword, which caused [c] terror in the land of the living.

24 There is Elam and all her multitude round about her grave; all of them slain, fallen by the sword, which are gone down uncircumcised into [d] the nether parts of the earth, which caused their terror in the land of the living; yet have they borne their shame with them that go down to the pit.

25 They have set her a [e] bed in the midst of the slain with all her multitude: her graves are round about him; all of them uncircumcised, slain by the sword: though their terror was for a time in great pomp and grandeur, and yet must certainly fall at last. And the greater men's height, the more ruinous is their fall. But how unhappy it is that men cannot excel in earthly things without creating envy to themselves! It is highly necessary that they, who have power and wealth, should use it for the protection and comfort of others around; and that God's hand should be carefully observed in the advancement of the great men of the earth. He, as Judge, pulls down one king and kingdom, and sets up another. And often their ruin comes upon them just after they seemed most fixed and flourishing. The more proud and imperious they are, the greater is like to be their disgrace and contempt. They who were courted in their prosperity will be deserted and spoiled in the day of adversity; and their fall will probably involve multitudes in terror. And let us always remember, that God intends every providential stroke as a warning to others; that when proud presumptuous sinners are cast down, we may mortify their lusts, and be clothed with humility.

‡ The fundamental error in the Jewish theology at this period, lay in these words—"The way of the Lord is not equal" (see ver. 17, 20); that is, say they, God deals neither with individuals nor with nations according to their works; therefore, there is no use of self-examination or of repentance. The judgment is heavy on us, (for the fact of the divine judgment upon the nation, no Jew that respects the Scriptures can deny) "we pine away in our sins," as one in a lingering disease; and since it is thus the fatal and not any equitable and judicial will of God, we have no remedy—"how should we then live?" This language presents a sad mixture of unintelligent fatalism, infidelity, recklessness, and despair.—ED.

3 If, when [d]he seeth the sword come upon the land, he [e]blow the trumpet, and warn the people;

4 Then [*]whosoever [f]heareth the sound of the trumpet, and taketh not warning; if the sword come and take him away, [g]his blood shall be upon his own head.

5 He heard the sound of the trumpet, and took not warning; his blood shall be upon him: but [h]he that taketh warning shall deliver his soul.

6 But if the watchman see the sword come, [i]and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned; if the sword come, and take any person from among them, [k]he is taken away in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand.

7 ¶ [l]So thou, O son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel: [m]therefore thou shalt hear the word at my mouth, and warn them from me.

8 When I say unto the wicked, [n]O wicked man, thou shalt surely die; [o]if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand.[†]

9 Nevertheless, [p]if thou warn the wicked of his way, to turn from it; [q]if he do not turn from his way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul.

10 ¶ Therefore, O thou son of man, [r]speak unto the house of Israel, Thus ye speak, saying, [s]If our transgressions and our sins be upon us, and we pine away in them, [t]how should we then live?[‡]

11 Say unto them, As I live, saith the Lord GOD, [u]I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live: [x]turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for why will ye die, O house of Israel?

12 Therefore, thou son of man, say unto the children of thy people, [y]The righteousness of the righteous shall not deliver him in the day of his transgression: as for the wickedness of the wicked, he shall not fall thereby in the day that he turneth from his wickedness; neither shall the righteous be able to live for his righteousness in the day that he sinneth.

13 [z]When I shall say to the righteous, that he shall surely live; [a]if he trust to his own righteousness, and commit iniquity, all his righteous-confusion: all ranks, king, queen, nobles, magistrates and commons, nay, the most understanding persons of the nation, shall be disgraced, confounded, and ruined, to the terror of the countries around.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXII.—Ministers must weep and tremble at the words of God, that they may affect others therewith. Alas, how the restless ambition and implacable resentment of proud princes disturb the world! But the brandished sword of God's judgments shall at last overwhelm them with consternation, terror, and ruin. Hardened sinners often fret and murmur under God's tremendous threatenings, instead of humbling themselves. And they, who with complacency admired the pomp of this world, with terrible astonishment behold its ruin. The mighty nations, who delighted in war, shall find enough of it at last. And no multitudes, wealth, or power, can avail, either to withstand the wrath, or to move the pity of God. After all the noise and pomp of men, he can bring them down to the most mean and abject appearances. Alas, what dreadful devourers are sin and death! Yea, the terrors of God shall prevail when those of men are for ever subdued. Awful indeed will be that assembly, when the dead, small and great, shall stand before him!

CHAP. XXXIII.—Ver. 10, 11. They cavil, and say, if we are thus miserable, and long punished for our iniquities, how can we be ever delivered and restored to prosperity? But know assuredly that I take no pleasure in punishing you, wicked as you are; but had rather you should repent of your wickedness, that I might accomplish my promises of mercy to you. Why then do ye not, without a moment's delay, heartily repent and return? Why do ye continue to ruin yournesses shall not be remembered; but for his iniquity that he hath committed, [b] he shall die for it.[*]

14 Again, when I say unto the wicked, [c]Thou shalt surely die; [d]if he turn from his sin, and do [e]that which is lawful and right;

15 [f]If the wicked restore the pledge, give again that he had robbed, walk in [g]the statutes of life, without committing iniquity; [h] he shall surely live, he shall not die.

16 [i]None of his sins that he hath committed shall be mentioned unto him: he hath done that which is lawful and right; he shall surely live.

17 ¶ Yet the children of thy people say, [k]The way of the LORD is not equal: but as for them, their way is not equal.

18 [l]When the righteous turneth from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, he shall even die thereby.

19 [m]But if the wicked turn from his wickedness, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall live thereby.

20 Yet ye say, [n]The way of the LORD is not equal. O ye house of Israel, [o]I will judge you every one after his ways.

21 ¶ And it came to pass in the [p]twelfth year of our captivity, in the tenth month, in the fifth day of the month, that [q]one that had escaped out of Jerusalem came unto me, saying, [r]The city is smitten.

22 Now [s]the hand of the LORD was upon me in the evening, afore he that was escaped came, and had opened my mouth, until he came to me in the morning; and [t]my mouth was opened, and I was no more dumb.

23 Then the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

24 Son of man, they that inhabit those wastes of the land of Israel speak, saying, Abraham was one, and he inherited the land: but we are many; [u]the land is given us for inheritance.

25 Wherefore say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Ye eat with the blood,[†] and lift up your eyes toward your idols, and shed blood: and shall ye possess the land?

b Ch. 18. 4. John 8. 21.

* He shall die for it.—This does not mean that a truly righteous man, one endowed with the only righteousness, "the righteousness which is of God by faith" (Phil. 3. 9.) may perish eternally, (for this cannot be. John 10. 27, 28.) but that sickness and death will become, at once, the corrigent and the punishment of his faults. (See 1 Cor. 11. 30—32. Heb. 12. 5—11.) Some understand the passage as a supposed case, not a real or possible, put to the Jews as a statement of divine procedure, which, if acted upon, they could not deny to be equitable; an argument to their consciences, of their utter unfitness to be judged by such a rule, and consequently of the necessity of fleeing to "the LORD their righteousness." (See 2 Cor. 5. 19.) There is no inconsistency in supposing that both these views may have been, at the same time, in the mind of the prophet. —Ed.

selves, and to provoke me to destroy you? N. B. The death and life here, as well as in chap. iii. and xviii. primarily denote the temporal misery or happiness of the Jews: the first of which might have been prevented, and the latter might have been obtained, by repentance and righteousness, though not properly evangelical or infallibly persevering. 24. They whom the Chaldeans have left in the desolated country of Judea, far from lamenting their sins and desolations, and the captivity or death of their brethren, boast that, being Abraham's seed, and especially considering their number, they shall be able to keep possession of the country.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIII.—One faithful minister or magistrate may be of great service to a country or nation. Yet much care and faithfulness is necessary in the work of either. And it is a great mercy, that, when they cannot be so useful to others as they wished, they may save themselves. They, who have hardened themselves in presumption, generally at last sink into, and harden themselves in despair. Yet certain and delightful is it that God hath no pleasure in the ruin of sinners; and that he is infinitely sincere and earnest in his calls to repentance. But sinners must repent or be damned. Holiness and happiness, obstinate sinning and misery, are inseparably connected in God's purposes, oracles, and providences; nor does the escaping one stroke secure the hardened transgressor from imminent ruin.—To what a fearful pitch of profaneness are they arrived, who can make common calamities the matter of their joy, or important discourses the object of their derision! And yet faithful ministers are a common object of contempt and hatred, and a common subject of discourse in the places where they live. And, alas, many pretend great fondness for God's ministers and ordinances, who have no real love to them! Often hearers have their fancies pleased, who never get their consciences touched, their hearts renewed, or lives sanctified, by what they hear. And nothing more effectually prevents the efficacy of the gospel than a covetous heart. But neither scoffers nor hypocrites shall be able to defeat the threatenings of God: and they, who would not improve his mercies, shall know their value by wanting them.

CHAP. XXXIV.—Ver. 2—5. These rulers regard only their own interest, and not the welfare of the people. By oppression and murder they seize upon the estates of the rich: they have not supported, relieved, or comforted such as were fallen into decay or distress; they have not relieved or redressed the wrongs of the oppressed; they have not restored to their right such as, by the violence of others, had been forced to quit their lands; nor have they attempted to reform the themselves! should not the shepherds [b] feed the flocks?

3 [c] Ye eat the fat,* and ye clothe you with the wool, ye kill them that are fed:† but ye feed not the flock.

4 [d] The diseased have ye not strengthened, neither have ye healed that which was sick, neither have ye bound up that which was broken, neither have ye brought again that which was driven away, neither have ye sought that which was lost; but with [e] force and with cruelty have ye ruled them.

5 And they were scattered, [f] because there is no shepherd:‡ and they became meat to all the beasts of the field, when they were scattered.

6 [g] My sheep wandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill; yea, my flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and [h] none did search or seek after them.

7 ¶ Therefore, ye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD;

8 As I live, saith the Lord GOD, [i] surely because [k] my flock became a prey, and my flock became meat to every beast of the field, because there was no shepherd; neither did my shepherds§ search for my flock; but the shepherds fed themselves, and fed not my flock:

9 Therefore, O ye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD;

10 Thus saith the Lord GOD, [l] Behold, I am against the shepherds; and I will [m] require my flock at their hand, and [n] cause them to cease from feeding the flock; neither shall the shepherds feed themselves any more: for [o] I will deliver my flock from their mouth, that they may not be meat for them.

11 ¶ For thus saith the Lord GOD, [p] Behold, I, even I, will both search my sheep, and seek them out.

12 [q] As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered; so will I seek out my sheep, and will [r] deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered in [s] the cloudy and dark day.

13 And [t] I will bring them out from the people, and gather them from the countries, and will bring them to their own land, and feed them upon the [u] mountains of Israel by the rivers, and in all the inhabited places of the country.

14 I will feed them in a [x] good pasture, and [y] upon the high mountains of Israel shall their fold be: there shall they lie in a good fold, and in a fat pasture shall they feed upon the mountains of Israel.

15 I will feed my flock, and I will cause them to lie down, saith the Lord GOD.

16 I will seek that which was lost,* and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick: but [z] I will destroy the fat and the strong; I will feed them with judgment.

17 And as for you, O my flock, thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, I judge between †cattle‡ and cattle, between the rams and the §he-goats.

18 Seemeth it a small thing unto you to have eaten up the good pasture, but ye must [a] tread down with your feet the residue of your pastures? and to have drunk of the deep waters, but ye must foul the residue with your feet?

19 And as for my flock, they eat that which ye have trodden with your feet, and they drink that which ye have fouled with your feet.

20 ¶ Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD unto them, [b] Behold, I, even I, will judge between the fat cattle and between the lean cattle.

21 Because ye have thrust with side and with shoulder, and pushed all the diseased with your horns, till ye have scattered them abroad;

22 [c] Therefore will I save my flock, and they shall no more be a prey; and I will judge between cattle and cattle.

23 And I will set up one Shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even [d] my servant David; [i] he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd.

24 And I the LORD will be their God, and my servant David [e] a prince among them: I the LORD have spoken it.

25 [f] And I will make with them a covenant‖ of peace, and will cause the evil beasts to cease out of the land; and [g] they shall dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods.

26 [h] And I will make them, and the places round about my hill, a blessing; [i] and I will cause the shower to come down in his season: there shall be showers of blessing.

27 [k] And the tree of the field shall yield her fruit, and the earth shall yield her increase, and they shall be safe in their land, and shall know that I am the LORD, when [l] I have broken the bands of their yoke, and delivered them out of the hand of those that served themselves of them.

g It is of great importance for the Christian to observe that God, by the prophets, constantly promised a new covenant to the Jews; thereby intimating the departure of the Mosaic, to make room for the gospel dispensation, (see Heb. 8. 8—13.) This prophecy began to be typically fulfilled in Zerubbabel and his coadjutors, but really in the "covenant of peace," established in the blood of the cross, (Eph. 2. 14—18. Col. 1. 20). Since which time, though the Lord appear "slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness," and the prospect of the conversion and restoration of Israel appear, to the eye of sense, utterly hopeless—yet faith beholds the progress, and rests in the certainty of the event, with a confidence as implicit, because God has promised it, as if the event were already realized. While I redress the manifold grievances of the poor and oppressed, I will, by fearful judgments, destroy their wealthy and powerful oppressors: I will, in righteousness, make an effectual difference between the weaker and stronger part of my people; cherishing the former, and restraining the violence and fury of the latter. 18, 19, 21. A prophecy against Seir or Edom for their implacable animosity against Israel.

MOREOVER, the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

2 Son of man, set thy face against [a] mount *Seir, and prophesy against it,

3 And say unto it, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, O mount Seir, I am against thee, and I will stretch out mine hand against thee, and I will make thee [b] most desolate.

4 I will lay thy cities waste, and thou shalt be desolate; and thou shalt know that I am the LORD.

5 Because thou hast had a [†] perpetual hatred, and hast [‡] shed the blood of the children of Israel by the [§] force of the sword in the time of their calamity, in the time that their iniquity had an end:

6 Therefore, as I live, saith the Lord GOD, I will prepare thee unto blood, and blood shall pursue thee: sith thou hast not hated blood, even blood shall pursue thee.

7 Thus will I make mount Seir most desolate, and cut off from it him that passeth out, and him that returneth.

8 And I will fill his mountains with his slain men: in thy hills, and in thy valleys, and in all thy rivers, shall they fall that are slain with the sword.

9 I will make thee perpetual desolations, [‖] and thy cities shall not return; and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

‖ There is great reason to conclude, that Idom was the original seat of learning and civilisation, the instructress of Egypt, Chaldea, and consequently of Greece, and of the world. See Wylie's Modern Judea, p. 448, &c. The remnants of her ancient grandeur in the ruins of Petra (see as above, and Keith's Fulfilment of Prophecy) are justly ranked among the wonders of the world. At the time Ezekiel wrote she exhibited no symptoms of internal decay; and, for ages, after his time, continued to advance to a degree of riches, and power that promised to bid defiance to change. But, in face of all this, the prophet not merely foretells her decay, but her "perpetual desolations." And "here," says Dr Shaw, "is no place of figs, or of vines, or of pomegranates; the whole is an evil place, a lonesome, desolate wilderness." Travels, p. 438. See also Stephens, vol. 2. pp. 41, 51. Evidences these things are of the divine inspiration of the prophets, which it is hard to discover how scepticism can doubt, or infidelity deny.—Ed.

ALSO, thou son of man, prophesy unto the [a] mountains of Israel, and say, Ye mountains of Israel, hear the [b] word of the LORD:

2 Thus saith the Lord GOD, [c] Because the enemy hath said against you, Aha, even [d] the ancient high places* are [e] ours in possession;

3 Therefore prophesy and say, Thus saith the Lord GOD, [f] Because they have made you desolate, and swallowed you up on every side, that ye might be a possession unto the residue of the heathen, [†] and [g] ye are taken up in the lips of talkers, and are an infamy of the people:

4 Therefore, ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord GOD; Thus saith the Lord GOD to [h] the mountains, and to the hills, to the [‡] rivers, and to the valleys, to the desolate wastes, and to the cities that are forsaken, which became a prey and derision to the residue of the heathen that are round about; men, who oppress and devour others, shall either be converted or destroyed to such a degree, that, in the most barbarous and dangerous places, there shall be nothing but safety and comfort.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIV.—If the dignity and power of men do not restrain them from sin, it will not exempt them from reproof, excuse their impenitence, or avert God's judgments. Alas! miserable is the case of nations and churches when magistrates and ministers mind only their own temporal interests, neglect their duty, plague, oppress, and mislead their people. And most dreadful will be their account and condemnation at last. Soon will God deprive them of that power which they have abused. And if they will neglect their part, God will, at their expense, and for the welfare of his people, perform his, and neither slumber nor sleep. If they harden the wicked, and discourage the righteous, he will comfort the distressed, and ruin the presumptuous. And they who would engross everything to themselves, and who grudge that any can live beside them, shall be awfully reckoned with at last. But every loss, every trouble, is completely balanced to them who have Jesus Christ, and God in him, for their ALL and IN ALL. Glorious and renowned is his person, office, and work; rich and stable the new covenant made with him, and with us in him; and complete the safety, and unbounded and innumerable the blessings, of his kingdom!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXV.—God's ministers must declare nothing but evil against the implacable enemies of Christ and his people. The quarrels of parents often descend to their children: and national antipathies are deeply rooted. Therefore parents should carefully avoid giving a bad example to their children, as it may insnare and ruin them, though themselves should repent. Nothing is more cruel than to insult and oppress the distressed. Even they, who suffer for their sin here, ought not to be trampled on, but pitied. And it shows great baseness, if our own advantage thereby render us glad at the losses and troubles of others. When God's church is in trouble, the constancy and fidelity of her friends, and the malice and pride of her enemies, are singularly manifested. God is highly provoked when his enemies lay claim to the peculiar property of his offending favourites. And they, who jest at or help forward their misery, may expect similar calamities. Neither men's words nor their deeds are forgotten by God in measuring out his judgments. And implacable malice must be punished with irreparable ruin.

CHAP. XXXVI.—Ver. 2, 3, 6. When the Chaldeans, and afterwards the Romans, desolated Judea, the Edomites, and other neighbouring heathens that survived the common calamities, made a scorn and by-word of the Jews, and assisted 5 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, Surely [i]in the fire of my jealousy have I spoken [k]against the residue of the heathen, and against all Idumea, which have appointed [l]my land into their possession* [m]with the joy of all their heart, with despiteful minds, to cast it out for a prey.

6 Prophesy therefore concerning the land of Israel, and say unto the mountains, and to the hills, to the rivers, and to the valleys, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, I have spoken in my jealousy and in my fury, because [n]ye have borne the shame of the heathen:

7 Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD, [o]I have lifted up mine hand, [p]Surely the heathen that are about you, they shall bear their shame.

8 But ye, O mountains of Israel, [q]ye shall shoot forth your branches, and yield your fruit to my people of Israel; for they are [r]at hand to come.†

9 For, behold, I am for you, [s]and I will turn unto you, and ye shall be tilled and sown:

10 And [t]I will multiply men upon you, all the house of Israel, even all of it; and the cities shall be inhabited, and the wastes shall be builded:

12 Yea, I will cause men to walk upon you, even my people Israel; and they shall possess thee, and thou shalt be their inheritance, and thou [z]shalt no more henceforth bereave them of men.

13 Thus saith the Lord GOD, Because they say unto you, Thou land [a]devourest up men, and hast bereaved thy [b]nations;

14 Therefore thou shalt devour men [c]no more, neither [d]bereave thy nations any more, saith the Lord GOD.

15 Neither will I cause men [e]to hear in thee the shame of the heathen any more, neither shalt thou bear the reproach of the people any more, neither shalt thou cause thy nations to fall§ any more, saith the Lord GOD.

16 ¶ Moreover, [f]the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

Some think the Jews will be restored to their own land while still rejecting Jesus as Messiah, and will there be nationally converted to faith in him. Others think they will first be converted and then restored. But may it not be inferred from Ezek. 20. 34—43, that they will be gathered from the heathen while still in unbelief, dealt with in a transition state, as were their fathers in the wilderness, by mercies and judgments, till "the rebels be purged" from among them; and that "they (the unbelievers) shall not enter into the land of Israel," but they being purged out, "all the (remaining) house of Israel shall serve" the LORD, and he "will accept them." 4 Again he said unto me, [g]Prophesy upon these bones, and say unto them, O [h]ye dry bones, hear the word of the LORD.

5 Thus saith the Lord GOD unto these bones, Behold, [i]I will cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live:

6 And I will lay sinews upon you, and will bring up flesh upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live; and [k]ye shall know that I am the LORD.

7 [l]So I prophesied as I was commanded: † and as I prophesied, [m]there was a noise, and behold a shaking, and the bones came together, bone to his bone.

8 And when I beheld, lo, the sinews and the flesh came up upon them, and the skin covered them above: but there was no [n]breath in them.

9 Then said he unto me, Prophesy unto the [o]wind, prophesy, son of man, and say to the wind, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Come from the [p]four winds, [‡]O breath, and [q]breathe upon these slain, that they may live.

* The breath came into them, and they lived.—Though it is not necessary, nor, perhaps, right, to assert with Hutchinson, that the Scriptures contain a system of philosophy; yet, most certain it is, that they are found not merely free from anything contrary to philosophical discovery, but the germ of natural truth is often found in them completely developed, though unobserved for ages by the eyes of theorizing philosophers. Examples of this fact may be found in the vitality and circulation of the blood, which, when adduced as modern discoveries, were clearly seen to have already existed in the writings of Moses and Solomon. And when the intimate connexion between breath and life (Gen. 2. 7.) is considered, it may not be presumptuous to conclude, without vainly speculating on the nature of life itself, that its sustaining energy is derived from the air, and carried on by the action of breathing, and that philosophy will yet discover what Scripture has already revealed. The Christian, however, is mainly concerned with considering the breath as an emblem of the Holy Spirit, and his indwelling as necessary to the life of the soul, as the breathing of the air is to the life of the body.—ED.

† This cannot be understood of a literal resurrection; for then must the other emblems of the vision be likewise understood literally. In modern language, the West Indies have often been called "the grave of Europeans;" and so, the inhospitable climates and countries into which Israel were carried are called their "graves," from which God promises to bring his people up.—ED.

‡ This emblematic order alludes to Num. 17. 2, where Moses wrote upon twelve rods. The laws of Solon were preserved in Athens upon pieces of wood called axones. Poetry was written upon wood planed square or triangularly, each piece moveable round in a frame for convenience of reading. Whence, it appears, is derived the word stave, applied to poetry and music. There are still two specimens of this mode of writing remaining in England—the Rieve Pole, in the island of Portland, by which the rents still continue to be collected—and the tallies, or billets of wood, by which the accounts of the exchequer are noted, and by burning which, the two houses of parliament were lately destroyed in London.—ED.

10 So I prophesied as he commanded me, [r]and the breath came into them, and they lived,* and stood up upon their feet, an exceeding great army.

11 Then he said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel: behold, they say, Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost; we are cut off for our parts.

12 Therefore prophesy and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves,† and bring you into the land of Israel:

13 And ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves, 14 And shall put my Spirit in you, and ye shall live, and I shall place you in your own land: then shall ye know that I the LORD have spoken it, and performed it, saith the LORD.

15 ¶ The word of the LORD came again unto me, saying,

16 Moreover, thou son of man, take thee one stick, and write‡ upon it, For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions: then take another stick, and write upon it, For [s]Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions:

17 And [t]join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thine hand.

18 And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, Wilt thou not show us what thou meanest by these?

19 Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand.

20 And the sticks whereon thou writest shall be in thine hand before their eyes.

21 ¶ And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD, Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land:

22 And I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel, and one King shall be king to them all: and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all:

23 [u]Neither shall they defile themselves any more with their idols, nor with their detestable

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXVI.—God takes the most compassionate notice of the deplorable condition of his people; and severe are his resentments of the insults and injuries done to them. But numerous, and infallible in accomplishment, are his promises of grace towards them. What an honour for our earth to be made serviceable to the people of God, and to be improved by them to the ends of his glory! The kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ is a growing kingdom. Though for a time it be diminished, it quickly recovers, and is replenished. When God returns in mercy to his people, and makes them return in duty to him, their grievances are effectually redressed, and their honour retrieved! marvellously does grace much more abound where sin had abounded; and, even from the wickedness and misery of men, his perfections are more abundantly glorified. What multitudes of rich blessings are, in excellent order, connected together in the new covenant! And the infinite freedom and riches of God's favours powerfully lead men to repentance, holiness, earnest prayer, and abundant devotion.

24 And [z] David my servant [*] shall be king over them; and they all shall have one shepherd: [a] they shall also walk in my judgments, and observe my statutes, and do them.

25 [b] And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt; and they shall dwell therein; even they, and their children, and their children's children, for ever: and my servant David shall be their prince for ever.

26 Moreover, [c] I will make a covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them: and I will place them, and [d] multiply them, and [e] will set my sanctuary in the midst of them for evermore.

27 My tabernacle also shall be with them: yea, [f] I will be their God, and they shall be my people.

7 [h] Be thou prepared, and prepare for thyself, thou, and all thy company that are assembled unto thee, [*] and be thou a guard unto them.

8 ¶ [i] After many days thou shalt be [k] visited: in the latter years thou [l] shalt come into [m] the land that is brought back from the sword, and is gathered out of many people, against the mountains of Israel, which have been always waste; [†] but it is brought forth out of the nations, and they shall dwell safely all of them.

9 [n] Thou shalt ascend and come like a storm; thou shalt be like a cloud to cover the land, thou, and all thy bands, and many people with thee.

10 Thus saith the Lord GOD, It shall also come to pass, that at the same time shall [o] things come into thy mind, and thou shalt [p] think an evil thought:

11 And thou shalt say, [q] I will go up to the land of unwalled villages; I will go to them that [r] are at rest, that dwell [s] safely, all of them dwelling without walls, and having neither bars nor gates,

12 [t] To take a spoil, and to take a prey; [u] to turn thine hand upon the desolate places that are now inhabited, and upon the people that are gathered out of the nations, which have gotten cattle and goods, that dwell in the [x] midst of the land.

13 [y] Sheba, and Dedan, and the merchants of Tarshish, with all the [z] young lions thereof, shall say unto thee, Art thou come to take a spoil? hast thou gathered thy company to take a prey? to carry away silver and gold, to take away cattle and goods, to take a great spoil?

14 ¶ Therefore, son of man, prophesy and say unto Gog, Thus saith the Lord GOD, In that day when my people of Israel [a] dwelleth safely, shalt [b] thou not know it?

15 [c] And thou shalt come from thy place out of the north parts, [‡] thou, and many people with thee, all of them riding upon horses, a great company, and a mighty army:

16 And thou shalt come up against my people of Israel, [d] as a cloud to cover the land; it shall be in the latter days, and I will bring thee [§] against my land, [*] that the heathen may know me, when I shall be sanctified in thee, O Gog, before their eyes.

17 Thus saith the Lord GOD, Art thou he of whom [f] I have spoken in old time by [||] my servants the prophets of Israel, which prophesied in those days many years, that I would bring thee against them?

NOTE.—Ver. 2. "Gog, the land of Magog, the prince of Rosh, Meshech, and Tubal." Sept.—Magog was the son of Japheth, (Gen. 10. 2). But who is Gog? Cambyses of Persia, according to Calmet.—The original Americans. Mede.—The Scythians, including the Russians. Houbigant.—Antiochus Epiphanes. Martin and Clarke.—The Roman Antichrist. Cocceius.—The Turk, the Eastern Antichrist. Gill.—The Turks and northern nations. Piringa.—The Turks and Tartars. Sutcliffe.—Now, of these some will be totally set aside by the internal evidence of the prophecy. Gog cannot be any one that has been; for his time is not yet, (see ver. 10, 14, and chap. 39. 25, 26). Then borrowing for one prophecy the light derived from another, it appears from Rev. 20. 8, that "Gog and Magog" represent the deceived "nations which are in the four quarters of the earth," and who, according to ver. 16, and chap. 39. 7, 21, 23, 28, are "the heathen," "the enemies" (chap. 39. 27), of the Jews restored to their high estate, and enjoying all the blessings of religious institutions, with agricultural and commercial prosperity and peace, (28. 11, 12, 13). "Gog and Magog," both signifying "covered, concealed," which read in the light of 2 Thes. 2. 3, 6, 8, where "that man of sin," "that wicked," is described as yet to be "revealed"—to be uncovered, as it were, and deprived for ever of that mask of hypocrisy, that assumption of Christianity, behind which he concealed his idolatry—his heatheuism—warrants the conclusion, that Gog will be some great personal leader yet to arise, that will head the antichristian system that has been working under cover of Christianity since the days of the apostles, (2 Thes. 2. 7. 1 John 2. 18, 22, 23), and who will contrive politically to unite under him the professed heathenism of the nations, against the great centre of missionary (apostolical) Christianity which the Jews will then constitute, (Is. 66. 19). Nor is it at all improbable that as our Lord's denunciations of the hypocrisy and covetousness of the Scribes and Pharisees were the immediate incentives to his crucifixion; a similar zeal, in the converted Jews, against the hypocrisy and covetousness of professing Christians will be equally the cause of the wrath of the antichristian Gog—that their zeal against open idolatry will prepare the heathen to combine with spurious Christianity as against a common enemy, while their riches, and apparently defenceless situation, (ver. 11), will present an irresistible bait to the ravenous cupidity of both.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXVII.—In what a forlorn and apparently hopeless state are the vessels of mercy by nature, and sometimes the visible church of Christ! Dead, withered, and buried in graves of misery and wickedness! But God himself knows how to revive and quicken them by his word, Spirit, and providence, though none beside can effect it. Nor can any obstructions in the way withstand his infinite power and grace. Happy is the church when cordially united under Christ, effectually reformed from heathen and popish idolatry, and every temptation thereto, when fixed in the new covenant, and enjoying therein the most blessed peace, safety, familiarity, and fellowship with God and his saints. In the worst of cases let me supplicate his Spirit, and depend on his promises, in hopes of that everlasting blessedness, in which there shall be no death, no discord, no wars, no want, no distance from God.

* This is confessedly one of the most obscure and difficult portions of the prophetical writings. The Jews forbade it to be read by any one under thirty years of age; and believe that many parts of it cannot be understood till Elias (whom they expect) comes to explain them, and the Messiah (for whom after Elias they look) shall come to carry the various regulations of the prophet into effect. Many Christian expositors have altogether refrained from comment. But as "all Scripture is profitable," it is right, in the spirit of humility and prayer, to attempt its elucidation. The chief sources of elucidation are two. (1) Particular internal statements affording a key to the rest. (2) Comparison with New Testament prophecies. Of the first kind is the appearance of "the man," (chap. 43. 6, 7), who is evidently the same as in chap. 40. 3, 4, and who declares the house to be "the place of his throne," "where he would dwell in the midst of the children of Israel for ever," and to refer to a period when "his holy name the house of Israel should no more defile." This inthroned man, (compare chap. 1. 26. & 2. 4.) this immortal king, can be no other than Messiah himself, and this house an architectural emblem of his church, which is "God's building," who, as "lively stones," are reared into "a spiritual house," "built upon the foundation of apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone, in whom all the building fitly framed together, groweth up an holy temple to the Lord." (Ezek. 48. 35. 1 Cor. 3. 9. Eph. 2. 21. 1 Pet. 2. 5.) The second source of elucidation leads to the comparison of chap. 43. 7. & 47. 1, 7, 12. with Rev. 22. 1—3; also chap. 43. 2, 4. with Rev. 21. 23. & chap. 48. 31—35. with Rev. 21. 12; which, though but a part of the evident points of comparison, seem to identify the two visions beyond question. See Is. 2. 2. Zech. 6. 12, 13. Heb. 12. 22. Rev. 3. 12.—ED.

† The entrance to the outward court (ver. 17), seems to have been through a porch extending inward, (ver. 9), with doors at each end; and on the right and left hand of this porch or passage, were three lodges of a reed square each, for the use of the porters or guards, with a space of five cubits between them.—ED.

IN the five and twentieth year of our captivity, in the beginning of the year, in the tenth day of the month, in the fourteenth year after that the city was smitten, in the self-same day the hand of the LORD was upon me, and brought me thither.

2 In the visions* of God brought he me into the land of Israel, and set me upon a very high mountain, by which was as the frame of a city on the south.

3 And he brought me thither, and, behold, there was a man, whose appearance was like the appearance of brass, with a line of flax in his hand, and a measuring-reed; and he stood in the gate.

4 And the man said unto me, Son of man, behold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears, and set thine heart upon all that I shall show thee; for to the intent that I might show them unto thee art thou brought hither: declare all that thou seest to the house of Israel.

5 And behold a wall on the outside of the house round about, and in the man's hand a measuring-reed of six cubits long, by the cubit and an hand-breadth: so he measured the breadth of the building, one reed; and the height, one reed.

6 ¶ Then came he unto the gate which looketh toward the east, and went up the stairs thereof, and measured the threshold of the gate, which was one reed broad; and the other threshold of the gate, which was one reed broad.

7 And every little chamber was one reed long, and one reed broad; and between the little chambers were five cubits; and the threshold of the gate, by the porch of the gate within, was one reed.

8 He measured also the porch of the gate within, one reed.

9 Then measured he the porch of the gate, eight cubits; and the posts thereof, two cubits: and the porch of the gate was inward.

10 And the little chambers of the gate eastward were three on this side, and three on that side; † they three were of one measure: and the

the whole system of his perfections in the deliverance. They who have been a terror to others shall be made a terror to themselves: and his enemies shall at last become their own executioners.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XXXIX.—No weapon formed against Zion can prosper. The most mighty armies are easily crushed by an angry God, and must be ruined, rather than his word should fail. They who expect wealth with the wicked must take their punishment with them; and they who invade other men's rights justly lose their own. They who know God's name will never dare to profane it. And his enemies must know at last what a great God and Saviour he is to his people, and what an awful destroyer to his enemies. No injury done to us should hinder our humanity, even to the dead. And vile corpses ought to render sin, the cause of death, abominable. General mercies should animate to general reformation: and every one ought to be hearty and persevering in them. After all our conquests on earth, there is always great need of purification: and to advance God's glory is Israel's great renown. How humbling is it to nature when the vengeance of God makes human carcasses a feast to ravenous beasts! But wise are all his dispensations: his judgments on his enemies are a sacrifice to his justice, and an encouragement to the faith and hope of his people. True penitents are willing to bear their shame, and wonder at the mercy mingled with their sufferings. And when we return to God, he will return to us, and lift upon us the light of his countenance. But it is truly delightful when his kindness towards his people silences all the reflections of their enemies against him; and when he eminently bestows upon them his presence and Spirit, and assures them of their everlasting relation to, and enjoyment of, himself.

CHAP. XL.—Ver. 2, 3. The high mountain may denote the conspicuous firmness and heavenly nature of the gospel church. The man appearing as brass denotes Jesus Christ in his strength, stability, duration, debasement, and glory. His line and reed represent the scriptures, by which everything in the doctrine, worship, or discipline of his church ought to be measured. His standing in the gate may represent him as the only door and way of our access to God, and to his church above or below. 4. This, and ch. xliv. 5. compared with xliii. 10—14. containing most solemn charges for both ministers and people to remark and regard everything in the form of the gospel church, directs an awful rebuke to those who, affecting to put asunder what God hath joined, contemn and decry the forms of worship and the government and discipline of the gospel church, as not appointed in the scriptures, and not much worthy of a Christian's regard.

* The arches thereof were before them. —The word translated "arches" is also rendered "porches or galleries;" but, it is most probable that "arches" is the proper translation. The existence of the arch at this period has been doubted or denied; but Wilkinson, author of Topography of Thebes, has shown the existence of the arch more than 400 years anterior to the building of Solomon's temple. Instead of "before them," Greenfield reads, "suitable to them" — corresponded with them. And if these stairs were constructed, not with the narrow steps adopted in a British building, but with the broad slanting steps of an Italian palace, these arches, instead of having the steps within their span, may have formed a kind of splendid balustrade on the right and left of the ascent. † For "five cubits" some are disposed to adopt twenty-five, concluding, on authority of the parallel passages, that a word has been lost out of the text. But if verses 21, 25, 29, 33, 36, are to regulate this verse, then "twenty-five" must also be changed to fifty, to bring them to correspondence. In a passage, the whole of which is confessedly obscure, is it not better to acknowledge ignorance as to why the record is so, than, without any authority beyond conjecture, to subject the record to arbitrary alteration? —Ed.

and millennial state. The measuring of everything by Christ with a line and reed, denotes that everything in it is appointed by Christ in his word; and nothing ought to be admitted but what is answerable to, and founded on, that word. The wall denotes her divine protection and surrounding discipline and government. The courts, at least the outward, may denote her visible state; and the inner court, and especially the sanctuary, may allude to her invisible state of eminent fellowship with God in Christ. The separate building at the west end may represent the state of glory. The large gates, doors, and porches, may signify Jesus Christ as the means of our abundant access to God; but the porch of the sanctuary may denote him as a supporter, hiding-place, and house of prayer, for his people. The stairs at the different thresholds may mark out our deliberate and gradual entrance into the visible and invisible church, and to fellowship with God; and our gradual increase in gifts and grace. The foundations and pavements represent Jesus Christ and his inspired oracles as the foundation of the church, of every true member, of all saving grace, and of every good work in it. The posts and pillars denote fundamental truths, gospel promises, faithful ministers, and zealous saints. Palm-trees alternately mingled with cherubims in the engravings, denote saints attended and assisted by angels and ministers. Windows represent ministers and ordinances, by which we obtain the light and air of life. The altar of burnt-offering and sacrifices are to be referred to Christ in his person and righteousness. The altar of incense represents him in his all-procuring intercession. The chamber for washing the sacrifices may denote baptism; in which saints, those spiritual oblations, are washed in the blood and Spirit of the Lamb. The eight tables of hewn stone, with the knives on them, may signify the divinely-appointed, permanent, and frequently dispensed ordinance of the Lord's supper; in which Christ crucified, and our sins as the cause of his death, are affectingly presented to our view. The chambers, built on the inside of the wall of the court and outside of the wall of the temple, may denote particular churches, worshipping assemblies, and instituted ordinances, or evangelical offices, in which Christ's people are lodged, protected, taught, and comforted by him. The enlarging of some of these chambers, according to the height of their stories, by their jutting into the principal wall, imports that the more holy, heavenly, and dependent on God churches and Christians are, the more extensive is their gospel liberty. But the narrowing the priests' chambers in the outward court towards the north as they ascended, may denote, that the more eminent ministers are, they are the more exposed to persecution. The void places between and before the chambers may represent the abundant access there is to Christian churches and ordinances; and the light, liberty, and wholesome air of spiritual influence, there enjoyed; and that our whole life ought to be an improvement of ordinances past, and preparation for what are in view. The equal size of the chambers, and the 34 And the arches thereof were toward the outward court; and palm-trees [a] were upon the posts thereof, on this side, and on that side: and the going up to it had [b] eight steps.

35 ¶ [i] And he brought me to the north gate, and measured it according to these measures:

36 The little chambers thereof, the posts thereof, and the arches thereof, and the windows to it round about: the length was fifty cubits, and the breadth five and twenty cubits.

37 And the posts thereof were toward the outer court; and palm-trees were upon the posts thereof, on this side, and on that side: and the going up to it had eight steps.

38 And the chambers, and the entries thereof, were by the posts of the gates, where [k] they washed the burnt-offering.†

39 ¶ And in the porch of the gate were two [l] tables on this side, and two tables on that side, to slay thereon the [m] burnt-offering, and the sin-offering, and the trespass-offering.

40 And at the side without, ‡ as one goeth up to the entry of the north gate, were two tables; and on the other side, which was at the porch of the gate, were two tables.

41 Four tables were on this side, and four tables on that side, by the side of the gate; eight tables, whereupon they slew their sacrifices.

42 And the four tables were of hewn stone for the burnt-offering, of a cubit and an half long, and a cubit and an half broad, and one cubit high: whereupon also they laid the [n] instruments wherewith they slew the burnt-offering and the sacrifice.

43 And within were § hooks,‖ an hand broad, fastened round about: and [o] upon the tables was the flesh of the offering.

44 ¶ And without the inner gate were the [p] chambers of the [q] singers in the inner court, which was at the side of the north gate; and their prospect was toward the south: one at the side of the east gate having the prospect toward the north.

45 And he said unto me, This chamber,* whose prospect is toward the south, is for [r] the priests, the keepers of the [s] charge of the house.

46 And the chamber whose prospect is toward the north is for the priests, the [t] keepers of the charge of the altar: these are the sons of [u] Zadok among the sons of Levi, [x] which come near to the LORD to minister unto him.

47 So [y] he measured the court, an hundred cubits long, and an hundred cubits broad, foursquare; and the altar that was before the house.

48 ¶ And he brought me to the [z] porch* of the house, and measured each post of the porch, five cubits on this side, and five cubits on that side: and the breadth of the gate was three cubits on this side, and three cubits on that side.

49 [a] The length of the porch was twenty cubits, and the breadth eleven cubits: and he brought me by the [b] steps whereby they went up to it; and there were pillars† by the [c] posts, one on this side, and another on that side.

CHAPTER XLI.

The measures, posts, chambers, and ornaments of the temple.

equality of the things and measures on different sides, gates, &c., may represent the equal privileges, power, and authority of churches and ministers, the identity of Christ, his word, and ordinances, and the similarity of his people in every part of the world. The five hundred reeds of measure, for a vacant space on every side of the court, may denote the extent of the gospel church, and the remarkable distinction which ought to be kept up between her and the world. The whole limit thereof round about being most holy, imports that all her ordinances are holy and spiritual, not ceremonial and carnal; and that holiness ought to be the shining quality of every officer and member. The people's never returning by the gate at which they entered the court, but going out by that directly opposite, and with the prince in the midst of them, (ch. xlvi. 9, 10.) denotes, that in fellowship with Christ we must go forward, from strength to strength, in all our attendance on ordinances, and never turn our back on God or his institutions. The appropriation of the east gate to the prince, (ch. xliv. 1—3. & xlvi. 1—3, 8.) may denote that Jesus alone approached to God directly, and in the way of merit; and that it is only through him that we have access with boldness unto God. The singers and Levites may represent Christians as praising God, and labouring in his service; and priests may denote ministers who present Christ, the atoning sacrifice, to men, and attend on God's service; and saints, who by faith present him, themselves, and their services in him, to God.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XL.—Ministers have constant need to be taught by Christ, and carefully to attend to, believe, and practise themselves what they declare to others. Everything which they speak or act should be carefully compared with the measuring line and reed of God's word: and scripture should be compared with scripture, in order to understand it. Yea, and much earnest prayer and humility is requisite in searching and explaining the oracles of God.

breadth of the house was still upward, and so [s]increased [*] from the lowest chamber to the highest by the midst.

20 [o] From the ground unto above the door were cherubims and palm-trees made, and on the wall of the temple.

21 The [p] posts of the temple were squared, and the face of the sanctuary; the appearance of the one as the appearance of the other.

22 [q] The altar of wood [*] was three cubits high, and the length thereof two cubits; and the corners thereof, and the length thereof, and the walls thereof, were of wood: and he said unto me, This is [r] the table that is before the LORD.

25 [t] And there were made on them, on the [u] doors of the temple, cherubims and palm-trees, like as were made upon the walls; and there were thick planks upon the face of the porch without.

[*] Chamber—not a single chamber, but a range of chambers of three stories, situated in the court outer from the temple, but not outer next the city.—Ed.

[†] Does this mean, as Greenfield supposes, that there were two ranges of chambers, with a passage of 10 cubits between them? or does it mean that there was a walk of 10 cubits railed off from the court, with a rising step of 1 cubit breadth running along the whole front? It is certain there could not be two opposite ranges of chambers, opening into a common passage, as all their doors were toward the north.—Ed.

[‡] According to Greenfield, the upper chambers had balconies or galleries in front, which were not supported by pillars, but rested on the wall, which was contracted at the second story, and again at the third, and so narrowed the upper chambers. But if this be the meaning, the chambers must have been arched or covered with such great stones as are often seen in ancient Eastern buildings; for upon no other principle of safety could the wall have been contracted inward, so as to leave a rest for the gallery on the outside, unless the wall was contracted equally from both sides, and each separate chamber formed a section of a cone.—Ed.

But how similar in substance is all the true worship of God in the world; in the most mysterious ceremonies of his institution, if properly considered, we behold the glory of the Redeemer, the method of his salvation, the graces of his Spirit, and the eternal blessings of his kingdom.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLI.—If I diligently improve the instructions given me in the Lord's courts on earth, I shall quickly be admitted into the temple eternal in the heavens. If I diligently attend to, and profit by, the plain parts of religion, I shall quickly be brought into further acquaintance with the mysteries of the kingdom. And the higher I build for glory, the more shall my heart be enlarged in faith, love, and heavenly-mindedness. Let my stature then, under all my pressures, be as the palm-tree, ever fat and flourishing. And since I serve with, and am ministered to by, angels and ministers, let my conversation be as becometh the gospel of Christ.

8 For the length of the chambers that were in the outer court was fifty cubits: and, lo, before the temple were an hundred cubits.

9 And [*] from under these chambers was [†] the entry on the east side, [‡] as one goeth into them from the outer court.

11 And the way before them was like the appearance of the chambers which were toward the north, as long as they, and as broad as they; and all their goings out were both according to their fashions, and according to their doors.

12 And according to the doors of the chambers that were toward the south was a door in the head of the way, even the way directly before the wall toward the east, as one entereth into them.

13 ¶ Then said he unto me, The north chambers and the south chambers, which are before the separate place, they be holy chambers, where the priests that [a] approach unto the LORD shall [b] eat the most holy things: there shall they [c] lay the most holy things, and the meat-offering, and the sin-offering, and the trespass-offering; for the place is holy.

14 When the priests enter therein, then [d] shall they not go out of the holy place into the outer court, but there they shall lay their garments wherein they minister, for they are holy; and shall put on [e] other garments, and shall approach to those things which are for the people.

15 ¶ Now, when he had made an end of [f] measuring the inner house, he brought me forth toward the gate whose prospect is toward the east, and measured it round about.

16 He measured the east [‖] side with the [g] measuring-reed, [h] five hundred reeds, [•] with the measuring-reed round about.

17 He measured the north side, five hundred reeds, with the measuring-reed round about.

18 He measured the south side, five hundred reeds, with the measuring-reed.

19 He turned about to the west side, and measured five hundred reeds with the measuring-reed.

20 He measured it by the four sides: it had [i] a wall round about, five hundred reeds long, and five hundred broad, to make a [k] separation between the sanctuary and the profane place.

Great is the privilege of converse with fellow Christians, and of opportunity to attend on the Lord without distraction. A great difference ought to be put between common and sacred things. And, alas! an impassable wall of separation excludes impenitent sinners from the blessings and benefits of Christ's church and kingdom, and will exclude them for ever from his presence in glory.

* No man — no common man—it is reserved for the prince. It appears from 1 Chr. 9. 18, that a particular gate was appropriated to the use of the king. The emblem of that "gate of righteousness," by which Messiah the king was to enter, (Ps. 118. 19, 20), and of that authority and power by which he "opens and no man shuts; he shuts and no man opens," (Rev. 3. 7). In accordance with the Hebrew custom, and, not improbably, as a derivative from it, there are gates in some Eastern cities which have been walled up on account of the entrance or departure of a king, so as to make certain that no inferior should ever use it.—Kp.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLIII.—The different visits which God makes to his people are much alike, and serve to confirm one another; and it is but for a small moment he withdraws, when he returns in kindness. His glory manifested in his church is her principal ornament, furniture, and source of felicity. But it is through Jesus Christ, as with us, that we can have communion with him, or hear his voice with comfort. And if his goodness lead us not to repentance, nothing will. Yea, his pardon of sins renders them peculiarly loathsome and detestable. But, alas, how often the greatest abominations are found placed by men in God's own temple, his church, his worship, and their heart! No wonder that he is highly provoked herewith. But such as improve his goodness, received to his glory, and to their own self-loathing and debasement, shall experience it more and more.—The whole of our salvation is of God. And no society is a church of his, but so far as true holiness prevails in it. None of our performances can be accepted, unless our persons be accepted, and sins pardoned through Jesus' blood. Nor can any performance be religious, unless it spring from, and be seasoned with, real grace. There is great need for ministers to be signally prepared for their important work. And dreadful is the profaneness of those who rush at random into the sacred function. Blessed be God that Jesus Christ, by offering 9 ¶ Thus saith the Lord GOD, [r]No stranger, uncircumcised in heart,[*] nor uncircumcised in flesh, shall enter into my sanctuary, of any stranger that is among the children of Israel.

10 And [s]the Levites that are gone away far from me, when Israel went astray, which went astray away from me after their idols, they shall even [t] bear their iniquity.

11 [u] Yet they shall be ministers in my sanctuary, having charge at the gates of the house, and ministering to the house: they shall slay the burnt-offering and the sacrifice for the people, and they shall stand before them to minister unto them.

12 [x] Because they ministered unto them before their idols, and [†] caused the house of Israel to fall into iniquity; therefore have I lifted [y] up mine hand against them, saith the Lord GOD, and they shall [z] bear their iniquity.

13 [a] And they shall not come near unto me, to do the office of a priest unto me, nor to come near to any of my [‡]holy things in the most holy place: but they shall [b] bear their shame, and their abominations which they have committed.

14 [c] But I will make them keepers of the charge of the house, for all the service thereof, and for all that shall be done therein.

15 [d] ¶ But the priests the Levites, the [e] sons of Zadok, that kept the charge of my sanctuary when the children of Israel went astray from me, they shall come near to me to minister unto me, and they shall stand before me to offer unto me the fat and the blood, saith the Lord GOD:

16 They shall enter into my sanctuary, and they shall come near to my [f]table,[§] to minister unto me, and they shall keep my charge.

17 ¶ And it shall come to pass, that when they enter in at the gates of the inner court, they shall be clothed with linen garments;[‖] and [g]no wool shall come upon them whiles they minister in the gates of the inner court, and within.

18 They shall have linen bonnets upon their heads, and shall have linen breeches upon their loins, they shall not gird themselves [*h] with any thing that causeth sweat.[†]

19 And when they go forth into the outer court, even into the outer court to the people, [i] they shall put off their garments wherein they ministered, and lay them in the holy chambers, and they shall put on other garments; and they [k]shall not sanctify the people with their garments.

20 [l]Neither shall they shave their heads, nor suffer their locks to grow long; they shall only poll their heads.

21 Neither [m] shall any priest drink wine when they enter into the inner court.

22 Neither shall they take for their wives a [n]widow, nor her that is [*]put away; but they shall take maidens of the seed of the house of Israel, or a widow [†] that had a priest before.

23 And [o]they shall teach my people the difference between the holy and profane, and cause them to discern between the unclean and the clean.

24 [p] And in controversy[‡] they shall stand in judgment; and they shall judge it according to my judgments: and they shall [q]keep my laws and my statutes in all mine assemblies; and they shall hallow my sabbaths.

25 And they shall come at no [r]dead person to defile themselves: but for father, or for mother, or for son, or for daughter, for brother, or for sister that hath had no husband, they may defile themselves.

26 And after he is [s]cleansed, they shall reckon unto him seven days.

27 [t] And in the day that he goeth into the sanctuary, unto the inner court, to minister in the sanctuary, he shall offer his sin-offering, saith the Lord GOD.

28 And it shall be unto them for an inheritance; I [u] am their inheritance: and ye shall give them no possession[§] in Israel; I am their possession.

29 [x] They shall eat the meat-offering, and the sin-offering, and the trespass-offering; and every [‖] dedicated thing in Israel shall be theirs.

30 And the [*y] first of all the first-fruits of all things, and every oblation of all, of every sort of your oblations, shall be the priest's: ye shall also give unto the priest the first of your dough, that he may cause the blessing to rest in thine house.

* The verse implies the admission of the Gentiles, not merely to the outer court, but, on the principle of a renewed heart, even to the service of the sanctuary; and it is evident that this "ordinance of the house" refers to a spiritual state that never yet has been in the church, but which he that "searcheth the reins and hearts," (Rev. 2. 23), has at all times a right to require and enjoin; and which the fuller outpouring of his Spirit will undoubtedly yet effect.—ED.

his own blood, has consecrated himself as our great High Priest, and as our Altar, upon which we are ordained to offer spiritual sacrifices, well-pleasing to God.

CHAP. XLIV.—Ver. 10—31. with chap. xliii. 19, 26, 27; xlvi. 20; xl. 46; xlii. 1—14; xlv. 4, 5, 19; and xlviii. 10—12. By these priests are represented gospel ministers. Their being the sons of Zadok, the RIGHTEOUS ONE, not Levites that went astray, implies their being true and blameless children of Jesus Christ, and faithful preachers of his atonement as the substance of the gospel. Their eight days' consecration along with the altar imports their entrance on their work with great deliberation, much solemn prayer, noted application of Jesus' blood, and vigorous study of gospel holiness. Their being clothed with linen, not with wool, or anything that causeth sweat, imports their being arrayed with Jesus' imputed righteousness, his implanted grace, and a holy conversation; not with their own fatiguing, defiled, and defiling works; and their maintaining purity of doctrine, esteeming their work their pleasure, not their burden, and in neither being erroneous nor unsavoury. Their linen bonnets and breeches denote their gravity, modesty, chastity, and freedom from Antichristian whoredoms. Their laying aside their fine robes, and wearing other garments, when among the people, may denote that, though they must only appear before God in the righteousness of his Son, yet, by a gospel conversation, they must recommend holiness to their hearers. Their not sanctifying the people with their garments, may denote that they must indulge no vain glory of superiority to others in goodness, nor pretend to convey any holiness, merit, or safety to them. Their neither shaving their hair, nor suffering it to grow long, imports their abstinence from popish superstition, pride, and wantonness. Their not drinking wine, &c., imports that they must never indulge drunkenness, luxury, or carnal care; that they must marry only such women as are of good report, and never connect themselves with apostate and disorderly churches; that they must, by doctrine and example, faithfully teach their hearers; and compose differences among them; and must avoid immoderate sorrow for the loss of created enjoyments. The food, fields, &c., allotted them for a maintenance, import their continual living on Christ crucified and his new covenant provision, and their being decently and commodiously supported by their hearers. Their having distinct chambers for themselves may denote their office circumscribed by the divine law; and that none ought to interfere with either

(1) The lot of the sanctuary: 1—5. (2) The city lot: 6. (3) The prince's lot: 7. (4) Civil and religious ordinances for the prince: 8—25.

MOREOVER, [a] when ye shall divide by lot the land for inheritance, ye shall offer an oblation unto the LORD, [†] an holy portion of the land; the length shall be the length of five and twenty thousand reeds,[‡] and the breadth shall be ten thousand. This shall be holy in all the borders thereof round about.

A. M. cir. 3430. B. C. cir. 574.

[†] Heb. holiness.

[‡] Taking the reed at 10½ feet, this oblation would constitute a square of nearly 50 miles on each side. From the north side was taken a lot of nearly 50 miles by 20 for the priests, in the midst of which was the site of the temple, about a mile square, (ver. 1, 2.) On the south lay the lot of the Levites, of the same extent as that of the priests, (ver. 5); and south of this lay the lot of the city, of the same length as those of the priests and Levites, but only half the width, (ver. 6). Now when it is recollected that Canaan was little more than 190 miles in length, by 80 in breadth, there can remain little doubt that the whole is an emblem of that glorious state when Zion shall "enlarge the place of her tents, lengthen her cords, strengthen her stakes, and break forth on the right hand and the left, and her seed shall inherit the Gentiles." (Is. 54. 2, 3.)—Note. The word "reeds" is not in the original; and several eminent expositors think "cubits" should have been supplied in its stead. But that "reeds," and not "cubits" is the proper word to be supplied, is evident from chap. 42. 16, which exactly corresponds with chap. 45. 2.—Ed.

2 Of this there shall be for the sanctuary five hundred in length, with five hundred in breadth, square round about; and fifty cubits round about for the suburbs thereof.

3 And of this measure shall thou measure the length of five and twenty thousand, and the breadth of ten thousand: and in it shall be the sanctuary and the most holy place.

4 The holy portion of the land shall be for the priests the ministers of the sanctuary, which shall come near to minister unto the LORD: and it shall be a place for their houses, and an holy place for the sanctuary.

5 And the five and twenty thousand of length, and the ten thousand of breadth, shall also the Levites, the ministers of the house, have for themselves, for a possession for twenty chambers.

6 ¶ And ye shall appoint the possession of the city five thousand broad, and five and twenty thousand long, over against the oblation of the holy portion: it shall be for the whole house of Israel.

7 ¶ And a portion shall be for the prince on the one side and on the other side of the oblation of the holy portion, and of the possession of the city, before the oblation of the holy portion, and before the possession of the city, from the west side westward, and from the east side eastward;[§] and the length shall be over against one of the portions, from the west border unto the east border.

§ The portion of the prince lay upon the east and the west of the oblation of the sanctuary, within which it was not lawful for him to encroach; but the breadth externally was not limited, but by that "judgment and justice," for the protection and enforcement of which, "the powers that be are ordained of God."—Ed.

8 In the land[‖] shall be his possession in Israel; and my princes shall no more oppress my people: and the rest of the land shall they give to the house of Israel according to their tribes.

‖ The revenues of the prince shall be personal estates—an arrangement which has often prevailed in European kingdoms; and which, though as often superseded by human wisdom, may yet—when the science of political economy shall be thoroughly understood, because thoroughly Christianized — be found best fitted to mark and preserve the just limits of superiority and subjection between prince and people, and most effectually to secure the prosperity and happiness of both.—Ed.

9 ¶ Thus saith the Lord GOD, Let it suffice you, O princes of Israel: remove violence and spoil, and execute judgment and justice, take away your exactions from my people, saith the Lord GOD.

Perhaps the simplest solution is this: let not your maneh be of an uncertain, fluctuating, or local value, but fixed either to 20. 25, or 15, shekels. This may be well illustrated by a reference to avoirdupois, troy, apothecaries, and other weights, several of which vary in different districts, not according to any specific name, but according to the article sold, and which often becomes the source of inconvenience, litigation, or fraud.—Note. Commercial plainness and integrity form essential characteristics of the Christian in his intercourse with the world, as humility and piety are indispensable in his communion with God.—Ed.

[§] It is impossible to understand "the prince" to mean "Messiah the prince;" for this prince offers not only for the people's sin, but for his own. Whereas, though Christ was made sin for us, he himself knew no sin, and so for himself needed no sin-offering.—Ed.

10 [a] Ye shall have just balances, and a just ephah, and a just bath.

11 [b] The ephah and the bath shall be of one measure, that the bath may contain the tenth part of an homer, and the ephah the tenth part of an homer; the measure thereof shall be after the homer.

12 And the [*] shekel shall be twenty gerahs: twenty shekels, five and twenty shekels, fifteen shekels, shall be your [*] maneh.[†]

13 This is the [d] oblation that ye shall offer; [‡] the sixth part of an ephah of an homer of wheat, and ye shall give the sixth part of an ephah of an homer of barley.

14 Concerning the ordinance of oil, the bath of oil, ye shall offer [§] the tenth part of a bath out of the cor, which is an homer of ten baths; for ten baths are an homer:

15 And one [‖] lamb out of the flock, out of two hundred, out of the [e] fat pastures of Israel, for a meat-offering, and for a burnt-offering, and for [f] peace-offerings, to [g] make reconciliation for them, saith the Lord GOD.

16 All the people of the land [*] shall give this oblation [h] for the prince[†] in Israel.

17 [i] And it shall be the prince's part to give burnt-offerings, and meat-offerings, and drink-offerings, in the feasts, and in the new-moons, and in the sabbaths, in all solemnities of the house of Israel: he shall [k] prepare the sin-offering, and the meat-offering, and the burnt-offering, and the [‡] peace-offerings, to make reconciliation for the house of Israel.

18 Thus saith the Lord GOD, [l] In the first month, in the first day of the month, thou shalt take [m] a young bullock without blemish, and [n] cleanse the sanctuary.

19 And the priest shall take of the blood of the sin-offering, and put it upon [o] the posts of the house, and upon the four corners of the settle of the altar, and upon the posts of the gate of the inner court.

20 And so thou shalt do the seventh day of the month for every one that erreth, and for him that is simple: so shall ye [p] reconcile the house.

21 In the first month, in the fourteenth day of the month, [q] ye shall have the passover, a feast of seven days; unleavened bread shall be eaten.

22 And [r] upon that day shall the prince prepare for himself, and for all the people of the land, a bullock for a sin-offering.[§] their work or benefice without commission from Christ. Their offering the sacrifices of the people may denote their preaching Christ crucified among them, and leading their exercises in their public dedications of themselves to God.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLIV.—It is highly reasonable, and infinitely delightful, that Jesus, our only Mediator, Prince, and High Priest, should in all things have the pre-eminence. And it is necessary that God's mercies should be always attended with the most cordial repentance, and thorough reformation. How provoking to God, ruinous to the church, and damning to souls, is it when persons, apparently graceless, are admitted to the seals of God's covenant, and to the office of rulers in the church of Christ! Nor must ministers, who have fallen into scandal, be hastily or easily restored to their office. It is in vain to expect a flourishing church where government and discipline are neglected, and where ministers are not extremely regular in all their conduct. But while ministers give up worldly cares for the sake of their hearers' salvation, it becomes their hearers, as they regard the blessing of God, and their own temporal or spiritual welfare, to provide for them a decent subsistence.

CHAP. XLV.—Ver. 1—8. with ch. xlvii. 13—23; and xlviii. Canaan, on the west of Jordan, about 180 miles from north to south, and 50 from east to west, is represented as thus divided. Beginning from the north, Dan, Asher, Naphtali, Manasseh, Ephraim, Reuben and Judah, had their portions, all of them extending from Jordan on the east to the Mediterranean Sea on the west. All along the south side of Judah's portion is represented a sacred portion of 25,000 reeds broad. Of this, in the middle of the country, a portion of 25,000 reeds from east to west, and 10,000 from north to south, is allotted for the priests, in the middle of which a square of 500 reeds is allotted for the temple and its appurte-

CHAPTER XLVI.

(1) Religious ordinances for prince and people: 1—15. (2) An order for the prince's inheritance: 16—18. (3) The courts for boiling and baking: 19—24.

THUS saith the Lord GOD, The gate of the inner court that looketh toward the east [a] shall be shut the [b] six working days; [*] but [c] on the sabbath it shall be opened, and in the day of the new-moon it shall be opened.

2 And the prince [†] shall enter by the way of the porch of that gate without, and shall [d] stand by the post of the gate, and the [e] priests shall prepare his burnt-offering, and his peace-offerings, and he shall [f] worship at the threshold of the gate: then he shall go forth; but the gate shall [g] not be shut until the evening.

3 [h] Likewise the people of the land shall worship at [i] the door of this gate before the LORD in the sabbaths and in the new-moons.

4 And the [k] burnt-offering, that the prince shall offer unto the LORD in the sabbath-day, shall be six lambs without blemish, and a ram without blemish.

5 And the meat-offering shall be an ephah for a ram, and the meat-offering for the lambs [l] as he shall be able [‡] to give, and an hin of oil to an ephah.

6 And in the day of the new-moon it shall be a young bullock without blemish, and six lambs, and a ram: they shall be without blemish.

7 And he shall prepare a meat-offering, an ephah for a bullock, and an ephah for a ram, and for the lambs according as his hand shall attain unto, and an hin of oil to an ephah.

8 And when the prince shall enter, [m] he shall go in by the way of the porch of that gate, and he shall go forth by the way thereof.

9 ¶ But when the people of the land [n] shall come before the LORD in the solemn feasts, he that entereth in by the way of the north gate to worship, shall go out by the way of the south gate; and he that entereth by the way of the south gate, shall go forth by the way of the north gate: he shall not return by the way of the gate whereby he came in, but shall go forth over against it.

10 [o] And the prince in the midst of them, when they go in, shall go in; and when they go forth, shall go forth.

11 [p] And in the feasts, and in the solemnities, the meat-offering shall be an ephah to a bullock, and an ephah to a ram, and to the lambs as he is able to give, and an hin of oil to an ephah.

12 Now when the prince shall prepare [q] a voluntary burnt-offering, or peace-offerings voluntarily unto the LORD, one [r] shall then open him the gate that looketh toward the east, and [s] he shall prepare his burnt-offering and his peace-offerings, as he did on the sabbath-day: then he shall go forth; and after his going forth one shall shut the gate.

13 Thou shalt daily [t] prepare a burnt-offering unto the LORD of a lamb [*] of the first year without blemish; thou shalt prepare it [u] every morning.

14 And thou shalt prepare a meat-offering for it every morning, the [x] sixth [†] part of an ephah, and the third part of an hin of oil, to temper with the fine flour; a meat-offering continually by a perpetual ordinance unto the LORD.

15 Thus shall they prepare the lamb, and the meat-offering, and the oil, [y] every morning, for a continual burnt-offering.

16 ¶ Thus saith the Lord GOD, If the prince [z] give a gift unto any of his sons, the inheritance thereof shall be his sons'; [‡] [a] it shall be their possession by inheritance.

17 But if he give a gift of his inheritance to one of his servants, then it shall be his [b] to the year of liberty; after it shall return to the prince: but his inheritance shall be his sons' for them.

18 Moreover, [c] the prince shall not take of the people's inheritance by oppression, [§] to thrust them out of their possession; [d] but he shall give his sons inheritance out of his own possession: that my people be not scattered every man from his possession.

19 ¶ After he brought me through the entry, [e] which was at the side of the gate, into the holy nances. On the south side of the priests' portion another of the same dimensions is allotted for the Levites. On the south of the Levites' portion, a portion equally long, but only half as broad as that of the priests or Levites, is assigned for the holy city; i. e. a square of 5000 reeds for the city to stand on, and a portion of 10,000 reeds in length and 5000 in breadth, on the east side, and another on the west side of the same extent, assigned to the office-bearers in the city. All of the country that remained on the east side and on the west side of this sacred square of 25,000 reeds, divided between the priests, Levites, and city, is allotted to the prince. And southward of that portion, in the middle of which the city stood, and of the land appointed for the prince at the east and west sides, the tribes of Benjamin, Simeon, Issachar, Zebulun, and Gad, had their portions, each extending from Jordan to the Mediterranean Sea. This division is entirely different from that made by Joshua, Jos. xiii—xxi.

† This ordinance presents the duty of kings, under the gospel, to give a reverential attendance on the public worship of God, (see ver. 10). The distinction (ver. 8, 9), between the entering and departure of prince and people, seems, most probably, a prophetic emblem of a specific difference between Christ and his people. He entered the temple for sacrifice by the gate of righteousness, by the same gate he returned. His people enter the temple of God by the gate of faith, pass onward, and retire by the gate of death.—ED.

Ver. 13—25. The oblations here mean Christ, as offered in sacrifice to God, and represented as a Saviour to sinners; and his people giving up themselves, and all that they have, to God through him. The sacred festivals may point out the seasons of Christ's incarnation, suffering, and pouring out of the Holy Ghost, and the solemn ordinances of gospel worship, in which Christ and his people hold solemn fellowship, to the honour of God.

chambers of the priests, which looked toward the north: and, behold, there was a place on the two sides westward.

20 Then said he unto me, [f]This is the place where the priests shall boil the trespass-offering and the sin-offering, where they shall [g]bake the meat-offering; that they bear them not out into the outer court, [h]to sanctify the people.

21 Then he brought me forth into the outer court, and caused me to pass by the four corners of the court; and, behold, [a]in every corner of the court there was a court.

22 In the four corners of the court there were courts [†]joined of forty cubits long, and thirty broad; these four [‡]corners were of one measure.

CHAPTER XLVII.

(1) The vision and power of the vivifying waters: 1—12. (2) The borders and divisions of the land: 13—23.

AFTERWARD he brought me again unto the [a]door of the house; and, behold, [b]waters issued out from under the threshold of the house eastward: for the forefront of the house stood toward the east, and the waters came down from under from the right side of the house, [c]at the south side of the altar.

2 Then brought he me out of the way of the gate northward, and led me about the way without unto the outer gate by the way that looketh eastward; and, behold, there ran out waters on the right side.

3 And when [d]the man that had the line in his hand went forth eastward, he [e]measured a thousand cubits, and he brought me through the waters; the [f]waters were to the ankles.

4 Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through the waters; [g]the waters were to the knees. Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through; the waters were [h]to the loins.

5 Afterward he measured a thousand; and it was a [i]river that I could not pass over: for the waters were risen, [*]waters to swim in, a river that could not be passed over.

6 ¶ And he said unto me, Son of man, [k]hast thou seen this? Then he brought me, and caused me to return to the brink of the river.

7 Now when I had returned, behold, at the [†]bank of the river were very many [i]trees on the one side and on the other.

8 Then said he unto me, These waters issue out toward the east country, and go down unto the [m]desert, and go into the sea; which being brought forth into the sea, [n]the waters shall be healed.

9 And it shall come to pass, that every thing that liveth, which moveth, whithersoever the [o]rivers shall come, [p]shall live; and there shall be [q]a very great multitude of fish, because these waters shall come thither: for they shall be healed; and every thing shall live whither the river cometh.

10 And it shall come to pass, that [r]the fishers shall stand upon it from En-gedi even unto En-eglaim; they shall be a place to spread forth nets: their fish shall be according to their kinds, as the fish of the [s]great sea, exceeding many.

11 But the miry places thereof, and the marishes[‡] thereof, [t]shall not be healed; they shall be [u]given to salt.

12 And by the river, upon the bank thereof, on this side, and on that side, [x]shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade, neither shall the fruit thereof be consumed: it shall bring forth [§]new fruit according to his months, because their waters they issued out of the sanctuary; and the fruit thereof shall be for meat, and the leaf thereof [y]for medicine.

true liberty and strict honesty will abound. Magistrates and people, as well as ministers, ought, in their places, to lay out all their influence in promoting true and practical religion: and none shall receive mercies from God without grateful returns, according to what they have received. Though our great sacrifice of atonement was offered but once for all, our spiritual sacrifices of thanksgiving to God through Christ ought to be daily continued, especially when he allows us the more solemn ordinances of his worship.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLVI.—All ranks of men should carefully concur in promoting the regular sanctification of the sabbath, and the whole worship of God. And it is the greatest glory of princes to be patterns of true piety to their people. But all our attendance on ordinances ought to be in close fellowship with Jesus our Prince, who is ALL to, does all for, and works all in us. And in our whole course of religion we must never go back; but, forgetting the things that are behind, reach forward unto the things that are before. It is very graceful to behold great men reverently attending the ordinances of the gospel with their servants, tenants, and poor around them: and it is an honour for princes to be generous, without oppressing their subjects; but infinitely more so for Jesus to give gifts to his servile professors, qualifying them for the help of his church in this life, and to give his genuine children an unbounded, irrevocable, and everlasting salvation. Nor must ministers by any means deliver to the people what themselves have not seriously preconsidered. And it is when their hearts and studies are made warm by the power of the truths which they are to preach, that their work is most useful and acceptable.

CHAP. XLVII.—Ver. 1—12. These waters, issuing forth from the temple at the south side of the altar, denote the purifying, refreshing, and fructifying oracles and ordinances of the gospel, and the Holy Ghost in his gifts and graces attending the same, issuing forth from Christ's person and through his righteousness. Their gradual increase denotes the gradual progress of gospel truths and influences till the whole earth be filled with the knowledge of the Lord: and that the further we search into divine truths, the more mysterious we shall find them; and also that, by continued accessions of light and love from Jesus Christ, the work of grace in every believer's heart, and the church in general, increases with the increase of God. Their running into the Dead Sea of Sodom, and quickening or producing multitudes of fish, represents gospel truths and influences as running into the Gentile world, even the worst places of it, which had long lain in wickedness and under the curse of God; and spiritually quickening multitudes, who had been dead in trespasses and sins. The fishers all over the Dead Sea denote multitudes of gospel preachers all over the world, labouring to gain sinners to Christ. The many fishes, like the fishes of the Mediterranean Sea, are multitudes of sinners, in a thousand diversified forms of misery and guilt, attending gospel ordinances, and by means thereof drawn unto Christ. The miry places and marshes are obstinate sinners, Jews, Antichristians, &c., abandoned of God to their own lusts and to everlasting damnation. The ever-flourishing, fruitful, and medicinal trees on the bank of this river, are Jesus the Tree of life, eternally glorious, and infinitely useful to his people, and his people themselves, as trees of righteousness, by the influence of his word and Spirit persevering in their profession and grace, honouring God, and being useful to their neighbours around.

13 Thus saith the Lord GOD, [s] This shall be the border whereby ye shall inherit the land according to the twelve tribes of Israel: [a] Joseph [*] shall have two portions.

14 And ye shall inherit it, [b] one as well as another; concerning the which I [†] [c] lifted up mine hand to give it unto your fathers: and this land shall [d] fall unto you for inheritance.

15 And this shall be the border of the land toward the north side, from the [e] great sea, the way of Hethlon, as men go to Zedad;

16 [f] Hamath, Berothah, Sibraim, which is between the border of Damascus and the border of Hamath; [‡] Hazar-hatticon, which is by the coast of Hauran.

17 And the border from the sea shall be Hazar-enan, the border of [g] Damascus, and the north northward, and the border of Hamath: and this is the north side.

18 And the east side ye shall measure [§] from Hauran, and from Damascus, and from Gilead, and from the land of Israel by Jordan, from the border unto the east sea: and this is the east side.

19 And the south side southward, from Tamar even to the waters of [h] strife in Kadesh, the [i] river to the great sea: and this is the south side [‖] southward.

20 The west side also shall be the great sea from the border, till a man come over against Hamath: this is the west side.

21 So shall ye divide this land unto you according to the tribes of Israel.

22 ¶ And it shall come to pass, that ye shall divide it [k] by lot for an inheritance unto you, and to the strangers [*] that sojourn among you, which shall beget children among you; and they shall be unto you as born in the country among the children of Israel: they shall have inheritance with you among the tribes of Israel.

* This division differs essentially from that of Joshua; and, as it did not take place on the return from Babylon, must point to a time still future. And though the whole prophecy seems emblematic of heavenly, rather than descriptive of earthly things, yet it is not improbable that it proceeds upon a principle of division, the simplicity of which may hereafter commend it to the adoption of Israel restored. Taking the length of the whole land at 280 miles, and deducting the allotment for the priests, Levites, temple, and prince, (see chap. 45. 1), there will remain for each tribe a parallelogram of less than 20 miles in breadth by 150 in length from east to west. But, lest this appear an inadequate allotment, let it be remembered that each tribe has an equal share in the city, (ver. 19), and must be common occupiers on the lands of the prince. And let this mathematical arrangement be viewed as the emblem of the covenant "well ordered in all things," and of "all things done decently and in order" in the church, while the perfect equality that prevails among the tribes, and extends to all resident strangers, will appear equally descriptive of that state in which there is "neither Greek nor Jew, circumcision nor uncircumcision, but Christ is all and in all."—Ed.

13—23. The Jews after their captivity never had the whole territory here mentioned. Few of the ten tribes then returned. Nor was the country ever parcelled out in the manner directed in this and the next chapter. While therefore these things may partly respect the state of the Jews when returned from their present dispersion, they chiefly respect the church of Christ, the boundaries of which are appointed by God, and in which all true Israelites, Jews and Gentiles, have their whole portion of blessedness assigned them by God.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLVII.—What a blessed source of oracles, ordinances, and influences, is Jesus Christ, God-man, the Lord our righteousness. While divine truths are gradually manifested, and spiritual influences bestowed, it is proper to be carefully searching and applying them. And the more we contemplate or experience them, the more shall we be lost in wonder at their height, depth, length, and breadth. But let us always begin with what is more plain and practical, and admire what we cannot comprehend. Great is the sovereignty of God in transmitting his blessings to the very worst of persons and places; and almighty the influence of his word and Spirit! not even death—a death in trespasses and sins, can withstand it! But, alas, unhappy are they to whom it is a savour of death unto death and damnation! The gospel and its influences find the sinners of mankind in the most diversified and abominable forms of iniquity. But infinite power and grace can apprehend the most outrageous, and render the most ugly and deformed like unto Christ. And it is delightful for ministers, in multitudes, to administer the ordinances of the gospel when Jesus goeth forth with them conquering and to conquer. Glorious in character, persevering and fruitful in good works towards God and men, are his saints!—And there is abundant room in the gospel church for Gentiles equally with Jews. In comely order they coalesce into one mystical body of Christ. All are entitled to the same privileges, share alike the same grace and glory, in virtue of God's new covenant promise and oath.

† The holy oblation (ver. 12), of 25,000 square reeds was divided into three parts from north to south, (chap. 45. 1). The north division of 25,000 reeds by 10,000 for the priests, in the midst of which was the temple, surrounded by a wall 500 reeds square, (ver. 9, 10. & chap. 42. 15). Next to this lay the portion of the Levites of the same dimensions, (ver. 13, 14), and on the south another portion of the same length, but only 500 reeds in breadth for the city, (ver. 5). In the midst of this portion was the city, being 4,500 reeds, or about 9 miles square, with a suburb of about 250 reeds, or about half a mile on each side, (ver. 17), leaving 10,000 reeds, or nearly 10 miles on the east and west, as a common for the servants of the city out of all the tribes (18, 19). On the east and west sides of this square are the royal demesnes, each of which, taking the breadth of the land at 190 miles, would form a square of 50 miles. The calculation by cubits instead of reeds, proportionally reduces this calculation; which, it may be right to add, others have held to be vastly greater; some making the dimensions of the city greater than all Europe; others, perhaps, greater than the habitable portions of the earth. But the reed and the cubit being the only measures mentioned, it is obvious the calculation must be taken from the one or the other. But it matters not for any purpose of interpretation which is adopted. But in addition to what has been adduced (chap. 45. 1), the use of the reed in measuring the city, (Rev. 11. 1. & 21. 15), seems to favour the conclusion, that where the cubit is not mentioned, the reed was the measure intended by Ezekiel.—Ed.

character or privilege, is in the least to be regarded. Jerusalem, the holy city, represents the gospel church as exceedingly enlarged, as wholly answerable to the measuring line of God's word, as abundantly accessible to all ends of the earth, and as dignified with the special care, presence, and ordinances of JEHOVAH.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XLVIII.—In the gospel church old things are all passed away, and all things are become new. In the most comely order, the last is made first; the chief of sinners become the chief of saints. What abundant access have they to Christ and to God in his ordinances! And the most faithful tribes are admitted into the nearest fellowship. Yea, God hath made abundant provision for the support of his ordinances, ministers, or magistrates; and it is at their peril if any receive his revenues without serving as his deputies. What is dedicated to his service cannot be alienated to other purposes. And every one in his station ought to lay out himself in the service of this city, knowing that his labour shall not be in vain in the Lord. Great is the regularity, the stability, the strength, the extent, the freedom, the life, and honour of our gospel Jerusalem in the apostolic and millennial periods! What then shall be the heavenly city, in which God is ALL and IN ALL.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF EZEKIEL.

It is vain to speak of the distinctive mental qualities, or peculiar styles of the prophets; seeing these "holy men of old spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost," and as God severally gave them both thoughts and utterance. The only real distinctive characteristics of the prophets lie in the subjects and objects of their several commissions. Taking this view of Ezekiel, he stands conspicuous among his fellows by the splendour of the visions of God with which he was favoured; and has in this respect none that approach to equality, with the exception of Daniel, and John the Divine. Cast over these visions, we, no doubt, find a veil of deep, perhaps of impenetrable, obscurity; which, those who cannot lift, must contemplate with humility, prayer, and patience, till "the day dawn and the shadows flee away." But if Ezekiel present to us some things that are thus obscure, he also sets before us much that is plain. His descriptions and denunciations of national idolatry are calculated for every understanding, and are truly so plain "that he may run that readeth." Hab. 2. 2. And they apply not to Judah and Israel alone, but to all generations; for though one form of idolatry has been totally banished from the reformed Christian churches, alas! other forms have disguisedly sprung up in its room; and the idolatry of the imagination, or of the intellect, the idolatry of self-love or of self-will, with that "covetousness that is (literally) idolatry," have extensively occupied their room. On this ground Ezekiel was not merely a prophet for the Jews, but also for many contemporary nations. Upon these he poured out the judgments of God with remarkable clearness and minuteness of description; so that the records of travellers, through these prophetic countries, form the best commentary upon this part of the Scriptures.

A few miles to the south-east of the ruins of Babylon, a monument is still pointed out as the tomb of Ezekiel. That this is really the tomb of the prophet is the tradition of the Jews who have inhabited the country ever since the captivity; and who say that he died while on a visit to Babylon. This tomb was first described to Europeans by Benjamin of Tudela; and who adds that it was said to have been erected by the captive king Jeconiah. Benjamin adds that the prince of the captivity with multitudes of the Jews were accustomed to pay an annual visit to the tomb, for the purposes of devotion and trade, and that it was surrounded by several synagogues, and a public library that had subsisted since the time of the first as well as the second temple. It is also visited by Arabian pilgrims, and the Jews of Media and Persia.

Those who know the difficulty, the frequent impossibility, of ascertaining the burying-places of eminent men, after the lapse of a few hundred years—and especially those who know how ready superstition is to admit of the slightest evidence that may minister to its morbid sensibilities—will be slow to attach much value to such traditions when found unsupported by contemporary history. It may or it may not be the tomb of the prophet; but would to God that the men who superstitiously visit his tomb, and venerate his dust, would rather study his writings and drink of his spirit!—Ed.

THE BOOK OF DANIEL.

Ezekiel, a priest, had not begun prophesying to the poor captives in Babylon, when Daniel, a prince, begins to officiate as a prophet at court, and continued about seventy years. He was early famed for wisdom and piety; chap. i, ii. Ezek. xxviii. 3. and xiv. 14, 20; was one of the first who were carried captives to Babylon, and lived to see the deliverance. The first six chapters of this book are generally historical and plain, narrating his and his three companions' captivity and education at Babylon; his companions' advancement and deliverance from the fiery furnace; his own interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dreams and Belshazzar's handwriting; and his deliverance from the lions; chap. i—vi. The last six are generally prophetical, containing his four visions of the future state of the world, and church of God; chap. vii—xii. [His prophecies contain some remarkable proof that Jesus is the Christ; for the Saviour came exactly at the time he had predicted. IN the third year[a] of the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah [a] came Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon unto Jerusalem, and besieged it.

2 And the Lord gave Jehoiakim king of Judah into his hand, with part of the vessels of the house of God, which he carried† into [b] the land of Shinar, to the house of his god; and he brought the vessels into the treasure-house of his god.

3 ¶ And the king spake unto Ashpenaz the master of his eunuchs, that he should bring certain of the children of Israel, and of the king's seed, and of the princes;

4 Children in whom was no blemish, but well-favoured, and skilful in all wisdom, and cunning in knowledge, and understanding science, and such as had ability in them to stand in the king's palace, and whom they might teach [c] the learning and the tongue of the Chaldeans.

5 And the king appointed them a daily provision of ‡ the king's meat, and of § the wine which he drank: so nourishing them three years, that at the end thereof they might stand before the king.

6 Now among these were of the children of Judah, Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah; ‖

7 Unto whom the [d] prince of the eunuchs gave names: [e] for he gave unto Daniel the name of Belteshazzar; and to Hananiah, of Shadrach; and to Mishael, of Meshach; and to Azariah, of Abed-nego.*

8 ¶ But Daniel [f] purposed in his heart § that he would not defile† himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank: therefore he requested of the prince of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself.

9 Now [h] God had brought Daniel into favour and tender love with the prince of the eunuchs.

10 And the prince of the eunuchs said unto Daniel, [i] I fear my lord the king, who hath appointed your meat and your drink: for why should he see your faces ‡ worse liking than the children which are of your § sort? then shall ye make me endanger my head to the king.

11 Then said Daniel to ‖ Melzar, whom the prince of the eunuchs had set over Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, 12 Prove thy servants, I beseech thee, ten days; and let them give us [k] pulse* † to eat, and water to drink.

13 Then let our countenances be looked upon before thee, and the countenance of the children that eat of the portion of the king's meat: and as thou seest, deal with thy servants.

14 So he consented to them in this matter, and [l] proved them ten days.

15 And at the end of ten days their countenances appeared [m] fairer and fatter in flesh than all the children which did eat the portion of the king's meat.

a Jehoiakim was raised to the throne of Judah by the king of Egypt, and remained his tributary during three years; but at the close of that period Nebuchadnezzar defeated the Egyptians, and Jehoiakim became tributary to Babylon. At the end of three years he rebelled, but Nebuchadnezzar being otherwise engaged did not depose him till three years after his rebellion, which was the eleventh and last of Jehoiakim's reign, (2 Kin. 23. 34—36. & 24. 1. Jer. 25. 1. & 46. 2). The chronological difficulties may be solved thus. Nebuchadnezzar came against Jerusalem in the third of Jehoiakim, and took it on the fourth. Three whole years after the fourth Jehoiakim remained tributary to Babylon, and on the eighth rebelled; after which, during three whole years, he remained in rebellion, and in the end of the eleventh was carried captive.—Ed.

16 Thus Melzar took away the portion of their meat, and the wine that they should drink, and gave them pulse.

17 ¶ As for these four children,[a] God gave them knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom: and [n] Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams.

18 Now, at the end of the days that the king had said he should bring them in, then the prince of the eunuchs brought them in before Nebuchadnezzar.

19 And the king communed with them;[†] and among them all was found none like Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah: therefore stood they before the king.

AND in the second year[a] of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, Nebuchadnezzar dreamed dreams, wherewith his spirit was troubled, and his sleep brake from him.

2 Then the king commanded to call the magicians,[†] and the astrologers, and the sorcerers, and the Chaldeans, for to show the king his dreams. So they came and stood before the king.

3 And the king said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and my spirit was troubled to know the dream.

4 Then spake the Chaldeans to the king in Syriac, O king, live for ever: tell thy servants the dream, and we will show the interpretation.

5 The king answered and said to the Chaldeans, The thing is gone from me:[‡] if ye will not make known unto me the dream, with the interpretation thereof, ye shall be [§]cut in pieces, and your houses shall be made a dunghill:

6 But if ye show the dream, and the interpretation thereof, ye shall receive of me gifts and rewards, and great honour: therefore show me the dream, and the interpretation thereof.

7 They answered again and said, Let the king tell his servants the dream, and we will show the interpretation of it.

8 The king answered and said, I know of certainty that ye would [a]gain the time, because ye see the thing is gone from me.[*]

9 But if ye will not make known unto me the dream, there is but [b]one decree for you; [c]for ye have prepared lying and corrupt words to speak before me till the [d]time be changed:[†] therefore tell me the dream, and I shall know that ye can show me the interpretation thereof.

10 ¶ The Chaldeans answered before the king, and said, There is not a man upon the earth that can show the king's matter: therefore there is no king, lord, nor ruler, that asked such things at any magician, or astrologer, or Chaldean.

11 And it is a rare thing that the king requireth; and [e]there is none other that can show it before the king except the gods, whose dwelling is not with flesh.

12 For this cause [f]the king was angry and very furious, and commanded to destroy all the wise men of Babylon.

13 And [g]the decree went forth that the wise men should be slain; and they [h]sought Daniel and his fellows to be slain.

14 ¶ [i]Then Daniel [‡]answered[§] with counsel and wisdom to Arioch the [‖k]captain of the king's guard, which was gone forth to slay the wise men of Babylon:

15 He answered[*] and said to Arioch the king's captain, Why is the decree so hasty from the king? Then Arioch made the thing known to Daniel.

16 Then Daniel went in, and desired [l]of the king that he would give him time, and that he would show the king the interpretation.

17 Then Daniel went to his house, and made the thing known to Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, his companions;

18 [m]That they would desire mercies [†]of the God of heaven concerning this secret, [‡]that Daniel and his fellows [n]should not perish with the rest of the wise men of Babylon.

19 [o]Then was the secret revealed unto Daniel in a night vision. Then Daniel blessed the God of heaven.

20 Daniel answered[§] and said, [p]Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever; for [q]wisdom and might are his:

21 And [r]he changeth the times and the seasons: he removeth kings, and setteth up kings: [s]he giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that know understanding:

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—When men profane God's temple by their sins, it is but just that he should profane it by his judgments. How exactly Hezekiah's pride is punished in the captivity of his seed! They who wish to serve their generation, must not spend their youth in idleness, but in study. And it is shameful for Christians to take less care of educating their children than heathens do of their slaves; and to show less regard to their God than heathens do to their idols. If we receive favours from men, let us always view them as the gift of God, and be the more careful to avoid every appearance of evil; and let us always be humble under humbling providences. Let us never be backward to that self-denial which tends to prevent sin: and for that end, let us improve whatever interest we have with the great. Whatever in diet, or any thing else, we willingly lose for God's honour, will prove clear gain in the issue. Proper abstemiousness and temperance contribute to the improvement of our mind, as well as the health of our body. God honours them that honour him, while they who despise him are lightly esteemed. And they who mourn much with Zion in her distress, are, if for their good, spared to share with her in the joys of her deliverance.

22 [t]He revealeth the deep and secret things: he knoweth what is in the darkness; and the light dwelleth with him.

23 [u] I thank thee, and praise thee, O thou God of my fathers,* who hast given me wisdom and might, and hast made known unto me now what we desired of thee: for thou hast now made known unto us the king's matter.

24 ¶ Therefore Daniel went in unto Arioch, whom the king had ordained to destroy the wise men of Babylon: he went and said thus unto him, [x] Destroy not the wise men of Babylon: bring me in before the king, and I will show unto the king the interpretation.

25 Then Arioch brought in Daniel before the king in haste, and said thus unto him, [y] I have found a man, of the [z] captives of Judah, that will make known unto the king the interpretation.

26 The king answered and said to Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, Art thou able to make known unto me the dream which I have seen, and the interpretation thereof?

27 Daniel answered in the presence of the king, and said, The secret which the king hath demanded [a]cannot the wise men, the astrologers, the magicians, the soothsayers, show unto the king;

28 But there is a God in heaven† that revealeth secrets, and ‡ maketh known to the king Nebuchadnezzar what shall be in the latter days. Thy dream, and the visions of thy head upon thy bed, are these;

29 (As for thee, O king, thy thoughts [§]came into thy mind upon thy bed, what should come to pass hereafter; and he that revealeth secrets maketh known to thee what shall come to pass.

30 But as for me, this secret is not revealed to me for any wisdom that I have more than any living, but [b]for [c]their sakes‖ that shall make known the interpretation to the king, and that thou mightest know the thoughts of thy heart;)

31 ¶ Thou, O king, *sawest, and behold a great image. This great image, whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee; and the form thereof was terrible.

33 His legs of iron,* his feet part of iron, and part of clay.

34 Thou sawest till [f]that a stone† was cut out [g]without hands,* which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces.

35 Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, and became [h] like the chaff of the summer thrashing-floors; and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them: and the stone that smote the image [i]became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth.†

36 ¶ This is the dream; and [k]we will tell the interpretation thereof before the king.

37 Thou, O king, art [l]a king of kings: [m]for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory.

38 And wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the heaven hath he given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all. Thou art this [n] head of gold.

39 [o]And after thee shall arise [p]another kingdom inferior to thee, and [q] another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth.

40 And [r]the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron; forasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things: and as iron that breaketh all these, shall it break in pieces and bruise.

41 And whereas thou sawest *the feet and toes part of potters' clay, and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided; but there shall be in it of the strength of the iron, forasmuch as thou sawest the iron mixed with miry clay.

42 And as the toes of the feet were part of iron, and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong, and partly ‡ broken.

43 And whereas thou sawest iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men: [§] but they shall not cleave [‖] one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay.

44 And in *the days of these kings† shall the God of heaven [t]set up a kingdom,‡ [u]which shall never be destroyed: and the [§] kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall [x] break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever.

45 Forasmuch as thou sawest that [y]the stone was cut out of the mountain [‖] [z] without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold; the great

† A mountain filling the whole earth, has appeared to some an unintelligible figure. The difficulty, however, lies not in the image, but in the manner of picturing it. For example, Mount Sinai, Mount Hor, Mount Seir, are not single mountains, but vast mountain ranges, which it were easy to picture, extended over the whole earth.—ED.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. II.—Ver. 31—45. This great image, beheld in a quickly forgotten dream, represented the successive empires in the world as but an empty show, a terrible, but quickly forgotten vision. The golden head was the Chaldean monarchy, extremely rich, and in appearance lasting, including the Assyrian; it continued about 240 years. The breast and arms of silver signified the Medo-persian, established by Cyrus, which lasted about 204 years. The belly and thighs of brass represented the strong, though less rich, empire of the Greeks, which was chiefly continued in the two kingdoms of Egypt on the south, and Syria on the north, lasting, in all, about 320 years. The legs of iron and the feet ending in ten TOES of iron and clay, never rightly joined, denote the Roman empire, very strong and very destructive and conquering, which, after having two joint consuls, and two conjunct emperors of east and west, was at last formed into ten different kingdoms, consisting partly of the old Roman subjects, and partly of the barbarous nations which invaded and ravaged the empire: it is not yet quite destroyed. The little stone, cut out of the mountain without hands, and breaking in pieces the remains of these empires, and becoming a great mountain, filling the whole earth, is the gospel church, supernaturally formed in the countries, and on the ruins of these ancient empires, and which did, in the apostolic age, and will, especially in the millennium, extend over the whole habitable world. See Introduction, chap. iv. sect. xii—xv, xix.

46 ¶ Then the king Nebuchadnezzar [b]fell upon his face, and worshipped Daniel,[†] and commanded that they should offer an oblation and sweet odours unto him.

47 The king answered unto Daniel, and said, [c]Of a truth it is that your God is a God of gods, and a Lord of kings, and a [d]revealer of secrets, seeing thou couldest reveal this secret.

48 Then the king made Daniel [e]a great man, and gave him many great gifts, and made him ruler over the whole province of Babylon, and [f]chief of the governors over all the wise men of Babylon.

49 Then Daniel requested of the king, and [g]he set Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, over the affairs of the province of Babylon: but Daniel [h]sat in the gate of the king.

NEBUCHADNEZZAR the king made an [*]image of gold, whose height was threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof six cubits: he set it up in the plain of Dura, in the province of Babylon.

2 Then Nebuchadnezzar the king sent to gather together the princes, the governors, and the captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs,[†] and all the rulers of the provinces, to come to the dedication of the image which Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up.

3 Then the princes, the governors, and captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs, and all the rulers of the provinces, were gathered together unto the dedication of the image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up; and they stood before the image that Nebuchadnezzar had set up.

4 Then an herald cried aloud, To you it is commanded, O people, nations, and languages,

5 That at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, [‡]dulcimer, and all kinds of music,[§] ye fall down and worship the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king hath set up:

[*] An image.—Diodorus relates that Xerxes took a statue of gold 40 feet in height out of the temple of Belus, when he destroyed it; which may have been the image here mentioned. The height of 60 cubits (say 90 feet) is not to be assigned to the body of the image, but to the image and the pedestal or column upon which it stood.—Ed.

And it is worthy of notice, that Herodotus says the Greeks received the duodecimal division of the day from the Babylonians, whose astrological studies emerging, as afterwards in Europe, into the genuine and more dignified science of astronomy, would naturally lead them to a division, the variety of whose roots would facilitate their necessary calculations—or the natural division of the year into months, and of the heavens into 12 corresponding signs, may have conducted to an analogous division of the day by 12 hours.—Ed.

7 Therefore at that time, when all the people heard the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and all kinds of music, [a]all the people, the nations, and the languages, fell down and worshipped the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up.

8 ¶ Wherefore at that time certain Chaldeans came near, and [b]accused the Jews.

9 They spake and said to the king Nebuchadnezzar, [c]O king, live for ever.

10 [d]Thou, O king, hast made a decree, that every man that shall hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of music, shall fall down and worship the golden image:

11 And [e]whoso falleth not down and worshippeth, that he should be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace.

12 [f]There are certain Jews whom thou hast set over the affairs of the province of Babylon, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego; these men, O king, [*]have not regarded thee: they serve not thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.

13 ¶ Then Nebuchadnezzar, [g]in his rage and fury, commanded to bring Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego. [h]Then they brought these men before the king.

14 ¶ Nebuchadnezzar spake and said unto them, Is it [†]true, O Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego? do not ye serve [k]my gods, nor worship the golden image which I have set up?

15 Now if ye be ready, that at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of music, ye fall down and worship the image which I have made, well: but if ye worship not, ye shall be cast the same hour into the midst of a burning fiery furnace: and [l]who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hands?

16 Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, answered and said to the king, O Nebuchadnezzar, we are [m]not careful[‡] to answer thee in this matter.

17 If it be so, our God whom we serve is [n]able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace; and [o]he will deliver us out of thine hand, O king.

18 But if not, [p]be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.

19 ¶ Then was Nebuchadnezzar [‡]full of fury, and the form of his visage was changed against Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego:

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—To what perplexing cares and anxieties are great men subjected by God! To what pangs, what sleepless hours, because of fear in the night! It is dreadful to be under the power of wicked and unreasonable men. Yet by the most unexpected means God can punish impostors and exalt his favourites. How inexpressibly valuable are friends mighty in prayer!—Fervent prayer is powerful to unlock the mysteries of Providence. And there is great need of earnestness in it when God's favourites are in danger of suffering as evil-doers. God must be thankfully acknowledged as the bestower of wisdom and every good gift. But humble souls will rather attribute the obtaining of his favours to the prayers of their friends than their own: and distinguished abilities never appear so grand as when accompanied with uncommon humility. Whatever influence we have with great men should be improved in attempts to bring them to the true God; as no princes, no, not the greatest, have any power but from him. Earthly kingdoms do but overturn one another, to therefore he spake, and commanded that they should heat the furnace one seven times more than it was wont to be heated.

20 And he commanded the [*] most mighty [†] men that were in his army to bind Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, and to cast them into the burning fiery furnace.

21 Then these men were bound in their [‡] coats, their hosen, [§] and their [‖] hats, and their other garments, and were cast into the midst of the burning fiery furnace.

22 Therefore, because the king's [*] commandment was urgent, and the furnace exceeding hot, the [†] flame [‡] of the fire slew those men that took up Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego.

23 And these three men, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, fell down bound into the midst of the burning fiery furnace.

24 ¶ Then Nebuchadnezzar the king was astonied, and rose up in haste, and spake, and said unto his [§] counsellors, Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered and said unto the king, True, O king.

25 He answered and said, Lo, I see [‖] four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and [q] they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like [r] the Son of God."

26 Then Nebuchadnezzar came near to the [†] mouth of the burning fiery furnace, and spake, and said, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, ye servants of the most high God, come forth, and come hither. Then Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, came forth of the midst of the fire.

27 And the princes, governors, and captains, and the king's counsellors, being gathered together, saw these men, upon whose bodies the fire had no power, nor was an hair of their head singed, neither were their coats changed, nor the smell of fire had passed on them.

28 Then Nebuchadnezzar spake, and said, "Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, who hath sent his angel, and delivered his servants that trusted in him, and have changed [‡] the king's word, and yielded their bodies, that they might not serve nor worship any god except their own God.

29 Therefore [t] I make a decree, That every people, nation, and language, which speak [§] any thing amiss against the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, shall be [‖] cut in pieces, and their houses shall be made a dunghill; because [u] there is no other God that can deliver after this sort.

30 ¶ Then the king [x] promoted Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, in the province of Babylon.

§ Or, governors.

‖ If the three confessors were thrown into a reverberatory furnace, how could the king see them walking? 4 ¶ I Nebuchadnezzar was [d] at rest [†] in mine house, and flourishing in my palace:

6 Therefore made I a decree to bring in all the wise men of Babylon before me, that they might make known unto me the interpretation of the dream.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—At what expense will proud men dare to affront JEHOVAH, and mark their gratitude to an idol which never showed them a favour! Sinners readily comply with the most wicked commands of terrible tyrants: and few can at once withstand the charms of music, and the terrors of a fiery furnace. Everywhere there are villains ready to accuse the faithful servants of God. But it is honourable to the cause of God, when, in the way of duty, we avoid all parleying with temptation, and drop all care about the consequences; when faith in God casts out slavish fears; and when self-denial prepares for the severest conflicts. How terrible and violent the passions of proud men become when they are indulged! they bid defiance to everything human! and it is dangerous to be the instruments of persecution and cruelty to tyrannical princes; but always safe and honourable to suffer for Jesus Christ. He will walk with his people in that

" By consulting Gen. 31. 49. Job 14. 16. Jer. 31. 28. & 44. 27, the providence of God will be found explained by God's "watching" over human affairs either in relation to good or evil; and, as it is evident from ver. 17, that "the decree of the watchers," is the purpose of providence; and as from ver. 8, 18, it appears that Nebuchadnezzar directly ascribes "holiness" to God; therefore the conclusion seems manifest, that by "watcher and holy one," he meant some such visible manifestation of God, ever watchful in providence, ever holy in nature, as that to which he had previously referred in the miraculous preservation of the three confessors, chap. 3. 25.—Ed.

In this disease the patient sometimes fancies himself a piece of furniture, a beast, &c. BELSHAZZAR [e] the king made [f] a great feast to a thousand of his lords, and drank wine before the thousand.

2 Belshazzar, whiles he tasted the wine, commanded to bring [b] the golden and silver vessels which his [c] father Nebuchadnezzar had [f] taken out of the temple which was in Jerusalem; that the king and his princes, his wives and his concubines, [d] might drink therein.

3 Then they brought the golden vessels that were taken out of the temple of the house of God which was at Jerusalem; and the king and his princes, his wives and his concubines, drank in them.

4 They drank wine, and [e] praised the gods of gold, and of silver, of brass, of iron, of wood, and of stone.

5 ¶ [f] In the same hour came forth fingers of a man's hand, and wrote over against the candlestick upon the plaster of the wall of the king's palace; and the king saw the part of the hand that wrote.

6 Then the king's [g] countenance [g] was changed, and his thoughts troubled him, so that the [g] [h] joints of his loins were loosed, and his knees smote one against another.

7 The king cried [i] aloud to bring in the astrologers, the Chaldeans, and the soothsayers. And the king spake and said to the wise men of Babylon, Whosoever shall read this writing, and show me the interpretation thereof, shall be clothed with [e] scarlet, and have a chain of gold about his neck, and shall be the third ruler in the kingdom.

e This is a very difficult portion of chronology. The common account closes Nebuchadnezzar's reign in B. C. 561, succeeded by Evilmerodach in B. C. 562; succeeded by Neriglissar B. C. 560, and who perished in battle against Cyrus, and was succeeded by his son Laborosoarched B. C. 555, and being assassinated by Gobryas, was succeeded by Belshazzar the son of Evilmerodach, B. C. 554, in whose reign the city was taken by Cyrus B. C. 538. But, according to Hales, the succession was thus: — Nebuchadnezzar, who ascended the throne B. C. 604, was succeeded by his son Evilmerodach, B. C. 561. He was succeeded by Belshazzar B. C. 555, who was killed by conspirators on the night of the "feast," leaving a son, Laborosoarchod, who, after a reign of nine months, died, and was peaceably succeeded by Darius the Mede, whose viceroy, Nabonadius, revolting, Cyrus marched against Babylon and took it, as foretold by Jeremiah. chap. 51.—Ed.

‡ How comes it to pass that Belshazzar does not know so notable a person as Daniel? The recluse education of an Eastern prince would alone sufficiently account for his ignorance. His attachment to idolatry will farther account for Daniel being kept out of the way by the idolatrous court party. Added to these things, Daniel, as a pious student of the divine word, would naturally live retired in the Chaldean college of which he was president, and had, most probably, after the death of Nebuchadnezzar, been removed from his place in the cabinet.—Ed.

10 ¶ Now [‡] the queen, [§] by reason of the words of the king and his lords, came into the banquet-house; and the queen spake and said, [m] O king, live for ever: [n] let not thy thoughts trouble thee, nor let thy countenance be changed:

11 [o] There is a man in thy kingdom, in whom is the spirit of the holy gods; and in the days of thy [p] father, light, and understanding, and wisdom, like the wisdom of the gods, was found in him; whom the king Nebuchadnezzar thy [q] father, the king, I say, thy father, made [r] master of the magicians, astrologers, Chaldeans, and soothsayers;

13 Then was Daniel brought in before the king. And the king spake, and said unto Daniel, Art thou [u] that Daniel, [‡] which art of the children of the captivity of Judah, whom the king my [x] father brought out of [y] Jewry?

15 [a] And now the wise men, the astrologers, have been brought in before me, that they should read this writing, and make known unto me the interpretation thereof: but they could not show the interpretation of the thing:

16 And I have heard of thee, that thou canst [g] make interpretations, and dissolve doubts: now, if thou canst read the writing, and make known to me the interpretation thereof, [b] thou shalt be clothed with scarlet, and have a chain of gold about thy neck, and shalt be the third ruler [‖] in the kingdom.

17 ¶ Then Daniel answered and said before the king, [c] Let thy gifts be to thyself, and give thy [d] rewards to another; yet I will read the writing unto the king, and make known to him the interpretation.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Kings, by prayers and good wishes, as well as by good instructions and good deeds, should study to be a blessing to their subjects. If God remarkably rebuke or deliver us, we ought to manifest his dealings to those around us. And the more wisdom and power we discern in his works of creation or providence, the more wonderful will they be in our eyes. God can easily reach the greatest, and make the terrors of mankind tormentors to themselves, amidst their nightly repose. It is common for wicked men to apply to the devil, or to anything, rather than to God, for instruction and comfort. But what is the chaff to the wheat? What amazing pomp and grandeur sinners sometimes arrive at on earth! yet saints, angels, and divine persons shall concur to debase them. With deep concern faithful ministers observe ruin impending on the heads of many quite unaffected with it themselves. And with great freedom and prudence ought they to give warning of it; for sinners must be often courted to secure their own mercies. And they who wish to know God's mind, ought to encourage ministers in an unrestrained freedom with them. Perhaps they may have time for repentance allotted them before they are ruined. And in repentance, it is not enough to cease from doing evil; we must also learn to do well.—How strangely pride prevails after the most humbling warnings! and few sins more certainly or fearfully provoke God's judgments than extravagant pride. Easily he can render the self-fancied deity a mad and senseless brute! But if we return to him by penitential acknowledgments, he is ready to restore us our dignity and honour. Our afflictions last no longer than to accomplish God's end of their mission. And therefore all the accounts which we give or receive of God's marvellous works ought to begin and end with his praise.

18 O thou king, the most high [e]God gave Nebuchadnezzar thy father[*] a kingdom, and majesty, and glory, and honour:

19 [f]And, for the majesty that he gave him, all people, nations, and languages, trembled and feared before him: whom he would he slew, and whom he would he kept alive, and whom he would he set up, and whom he would he put down.

20 But [g]when his heart was lifted up, and his mind hardened [†]in pride, he was [‡]deposed from his kingly throne, and they took his glory from him:

21 And he was driven from the sons of men; and [§]his heart was made like the beasts, and his dwelling was with the wild asses: they fed him with grass like oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven; [h]till he knew that the most high God ruled in the kingdom of men, and that he appointeth over it whomsoever he will.

22 And [i]thou his son, O Belshazzar, [k]hast not humbled thine heart, though thou knewest all this;

23 But [l]hast lifted up thyself against the Lord of heaven; [m]and they have brought the vessels of his house before thee, and thou and thy lords, thy wives and thy concubines, have drunk wine in them; and thou hast praised the gods of silver, and gold, of brass, iron, wood, and stone, [n]which see not, nor hear, nor know: and the God in [o]whose hand thy breath is, and whose are all thy ways, hast thou not glorified.

24 [p]Then was the part of the hand sent from him; and this writing was written.

25 ¶ And this is the writing that was written, MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN.[‖]

26 This is the interpretation of the thing: MENE; God hath [q]numbered thy kingdom, and finished it.

IT pleased Darius to set over the kingdom [a]an hundred and twenty princes,[*] which should be over the whole kingdom;

2 And over these three presidents, (of whom Daniel was [b]first,) that the princes might [c]give accounts unto them, and the king should have no damage.

3 Then this Daniel was [d]preferred above the presidents and princes, because [e]an excellent spirit[†] was in him; and the king thought to set him over the whole realm.

4 ¶ Then the presidents and princes [f]sought to find occasion against Daniel concerning the kingdom, but they could [g]find none occasion nor fault; forasmuch as he was faithful, neither was there any error or fault found in him.

5 Then said these men, We shall not find any occasion against this Daniel, [h]except we find it against him concerning the law of his God.

6 Then these presidents and princes [i]assembled together to the king, and said thus unto him, King Darius, [k]live for ever.

7 All the presidents of the kingdom, the governors, and the princes, the counsellors, and the captains, have [l]consulted together to establish a royal statute, and to make a firm [m]decree, that whosoever shall ask a petition of any god or man for thirty days, save of thee, O king, he shall be cast into the den of lions.

8 Now, O king, [n]establish the decree, and sign the writing, that it be not changed, according to the [o]law of the Medes and Persians, which [‡]altereth not.

9 Wherefore [p]king Darius signed the writing and the decree.[§]

10 ¶ Now, when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house; and, [q]his windows being open in his chamber toward Jerusalem, [r]he kneeled upon his knees [s]three times a day, and prayed, and [t]gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime.

11 Then these men [u]assembled, and found Daniel praying and making supplication before his God.

12 Then they came near, and spake before the king concerning the king's decree; Hast thou not signed a decree, that every man that shall ask a petition of any god or man within thirty days, save of thee, O king, shall be cast

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Alas, how mad is it to riot in luxury and carnal security—in drunkenness and uncleanness; when death and hell stand ready to receive us! But awfully criminal is that mirth in which men profane or jest with sacred things. Immorality and impiety, drunkenness and idolatry, greatly promote one another. And indeed drunken worshippers are good enough for dunghill gods. How easily can God awaken the most secure, and cause the stoutest heart to tremble! and the incapacity of creatures to comfort adds to the terror. But if a handwriting on a wall can so affect sinners, how is it that they do not tremble to see every day, in the Bible, God's handwriting, denouncing their everlasting damnation! Wise counsellors are strangely overlooked at luxurious courts. But necessity nevertheless often forces their despisers to receive them back to honour and regard; and such are worthy of praise who again introduce them to esteem. Ministers ought to deal faithfully with the greatest, in showing them their guilt, their presumptuous pride and profaneness, and what they may expect for their punishment: and God will procure honour to such, even from them who contemn his own word.

into the den of lions? The king answered and said, The thing is true,* [x] according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not.

13 Then answered they, and said before the king, That Daniel, which is of the children of the captivity of Judah, regardeth not thee, O king, nor the decree that thou hast signed, but maketh his petition three times a day.

14 Then the king, when he heard these words, [y] was sore displeased with himself, and set his heart on Daniel to deliver him; and he laboured† till the going down of the sun to deliver him.

15 Then these men assembled unto the king, and said unto the king, [z] Know, O king, that the law of the Medes and Persians is, That no decree nor statute which the king establisheth may be changed.

16 [a] Then the king commanded, and they brought Daniel, and cast him into the den of lions. Now the king spake and said unto Daniel, Thy God, whom thou servest continually, he will deliver thee.

17 [b] And a stone was brought, and laid upon the mouth of the den;‡ and the king sealed it with his own signet, and with the signet of his lords; that the purpose might not be changed concerning Daniel.

18 ¶ Then the king went to his palace, and passed the night fasting: neither were § instruments of music brought before him; and his sleep went from him.

19 Then the king arose very [c] early in the morning, and went in haste unto the den of lions.

20 And when he came to the den, he cried with a lamentable voice unto Daniel: and the king spake and said to Daniel, [d] O Daniel, servant of the living God, is thy God, whom thou servest continually, able to deliver thee from the lions?

21 Then said Daniel unto the king, [e] O king, live for ever.

22 My God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me: [f] forasmuch as before him innocency was found in me; and also before thee, O king, have I done no hurt.

23 Then was the king [g] exceeding glad for him, and commanded that they should take Daniel up* out of the den. So Daniel was taken up out of the den, [h] and no manner of hurt was found upon him, [i] because he believed in his God.

24 ¶ And the king commanded, [k] and they brought those men which had accused Daniel, and they cast them into the den† of lions, them, their children, and their wives; and the lions had the mastery of them, and brake all their bones in pieces or ever they came at the bottom of the den.

25 ¶ Then king Darius [l] wrote unto all people, nations, and languages, that dwell in all the earth; [m] Peace be multiplied unto you.

26 [n] I make a decree, That in every dominion of my kingdom men tremble and fear before the God of Daniel; for he is [o] the living God, and stedfast for ever, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed, and his dominion shall be even unto the end.

27 [p] He delivereth and rescueth, and he [q] worketh signs and wonders in heaven and in earth, who hath delivered Daniel from the [r] power of the lions.

28 So this Daniel prospered in the reign of Darius, and in the reign of [r] Cyrus the Persian.

"The law of the Medes and Persians altereth not." "The statute which the king establisheth may not be changed." Flattery must endow human wisdom and power with the perfections of Deity. To guard against uncertainty, immutability is adopted; and Daniel unmasks—not that guilt may be punished, but that a bad principle may be observed.—Ed.

‡ The den is generally represented as a natural cavern with a single opening covered by a stone. But nothing can be more unsuited to the habits of the lion, and the means of its comfortable and healthy preservation. Besides, if "the den" was at Babylon, the existence of a natural cavern in an alluvial plain is very improbable—scarcely conceivable. But whether at Babylon or elsewhere, it seems most natural to imagine "the den" either a building after the manner of a Roman amphitheatre, whose, it is well known that criminals, yea, and martyrs of Jesus as faithful as Daniel, were wont to be cast to the lions; or else a natural valley, and not a cave, surrounded by a wall, and entered by a single door.—Ed.

CHAPTER VII.

(1) The vision of four beasts: 1—8. (2) Of God's kingdom: 9—14. (3) The interpretation: 15—28.

A. M. cir. 3440. B. C. cir. 555.

IN the first year of Belshazzar* king of Babylon Daniel had a dream, and visions of his head upon his bed; then he wrote the dream, and told the sum of the matters.

2 Daniel spake and said, I saw in my vision by night, and, behold, the four winds† of the heaven strove upon the great sea.

3 And four great beasts‡ came up from the sea, diverse one from another.

4 The first was like a lion,§ and had eagle's wings: I beheld till the wings thereof were plucked, and it was lifted up from the earth, and made stand upon the feet as a man, and a man's heart was given to it.

* This date was about 17 years before the history in the foregoing chapter.—Ed.

† Four winds.—Political and religious opinions and interests striving for mastery.—Ed.

‡ Four beasts.—The four successive empires naturally fierce as the beasts of the forest—impelled by stormy passions, and ravening for conquest.—Ed.

§ Like a lion—strong, eagle-winged, swift, and aspiring, (Jer. 4. 7. & 48. 40.) Wings plucked—provinces cut off by revolt or conquest.—A man's heart—its lion-like ferocity was tamed, but, like degenerate man, only to become "deceitful above all things and desperately wicked." Jer. 17. 9.—Ed.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—Steadfast uprightness is the best method of retaining favour and honour in courts, however wicked: by that men may preserve their places amidst strange revolutions. And the more our neighbours wait for our halting, let us be the more circumspect. It is extremely honourable if they can find nothing to accuse us of but the regular worshipping of God. If we thus suffer, we need neither be afraid nor ashamed. And it is highly honourable to have our habitations temples for God, and houses of daily, of frequent prayer; and never to omit duty for fear of suffering. But, alas, how unhappy are most princes in the information and advices which they receive! What is done from a conscientious regard to God is represented as done in contempt of their authority: and they are often decoyed into that which is furthest from their intentions. Their flatterers, and their vain-glorious humour, plunge them into fearful depths of vexation and torment. But God wonderfully preserves his faithful worshippers: he is a present help in their trouble, and will stand by them in the hour of temptation. And it is kind in such as share his bounty readily to overlook the fault of their unwilling injurers. But dreadful is the danger of their malicious accusers and persecutors. They shall fall into the pit which they had digged for others. The Lord is known by the judgments which he executes; and can make even heathens publish his honours.

CHAP. VII.—Ver. 1, 8, 11, 12, 17—25. The tempestuous SEA denotes this world filled with contention, violence, and confusion. To represent their emptiness and gradual decay, the four successive monarchies had been represented by a terrible image seen in a forgotten dream. Here, to represent their mischievous nature, they are represented as ravenous beasts. The LION, with eagle's wings soon plucked, and his heart turned into the heart of a man, represents the Chaldean monarchy, strong and despotic, rapid in its conquests; but quickly after Nebuchadnezzar's death all dismembered, weakened, and dispirited. The BEAR, raising itself on one side, having three ribs in its mouth, and devouring much flesh, represents the Medo-persian monarchy, fierce and savage, but at last lazy and luxurious, raising up itself on the side of Persia, carrying its conquests almost only to the westward, conquering the three kingdoms of Lydia, Chaldea, and Egypt, and making fearful slaughter and spoil, especially among the Chaldeans. The LEOPARD, with four wings and four heads, marked the Grecian monarchy, agile, crafty, and spotted by a mixture of vices and virtues;—under Alexander, astonishingly rapid in its conquests; and, after his death, parted into the four kingdoms of Macedonia, Lesser Asia, Syria, and Egypt. The fourth beast, different in form, and dreadfully terrible and strong, with iron teeth, and ten horns, represented the Roman empire, which, in a most fearful manner, by powerful

5 And behold another beast, a second, like to a bear, and it raised up itself on one side, and it had three ribs[a] in the mouth of it between the teeth of it; and they said thus unto it, Arise, devour much flesh.

6 After this I beheld, and lo another, like a leopard,[†] which had upon the back of it four wings of a fowl: the beast had also four heads; and dominion was given to it.

7 After this I saw in the night-visions, and behold a fourth beast,[‡] dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth: it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it: and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it; and it had ten horns.[§]

8 I considered the horns, and, behold, there came up among them another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots: and, behold, in this horn were eyes like the eyes of man, and a mouth speaking great things.

9 ¶ I beheld till the thrones were cast down,[‖] and the Ancient of days[•] did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like the pure wool: his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire.

10 A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him: thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him: the judgment was set, and the books were opened.

11 I beheld then because of the voice of the great words[†] which the horn spake: I beheld even till the beast was slain,[‡] and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame.

12 As concerning the rest of the beasts, they had their dominion taken away:[§] yet their lives were prolonged for a season and time.

13 I saw in the night-visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him.

14 And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed.

‡ Saints of the most High may literally be rendered, "But the righteous ones of the holy ones (or holy places, see Eph. 2. 6.) shall receive the kingdom." The idea of "places" is not merely sustained by the marginal authority and Eph. 2. 6, but by the words translated "most high God," (chap. 3. 26.) and "high God," (chap. 3. 32.) which are the same in both, and literally signify "God of the high, or highest, place."—Ed.

15 ¶ I Daniel was grieved in my spirit in the midst of my [•] body, and the visions of my head troubled me.

16 I came near unto [a] one of them that stood by, and asked him the truth of all this: so he told me, and made me know the interpretation of the things.

17 These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, which shall arise [b] out of the earth.

18 But the saints of the [†] most High [‡] shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever.

19 Then I would know the truth of the fourth beast, which was diverse [§] from all the others, exceeding dreadful, whose teeth were of iron, and his nails of brass; which devoured, brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with his feet;

20 And of the ten horns that were in his head, and of the other which came up, and before whom three fell; even of that horn that had eyes, and a mouth that spake very great things, whose look was more stout than his fellows.

21 I beheld, and the same horn [c] made war with the saints, and prevailed against them;

22 Until the Ancient of days came, and [d] judgment was given to the saints of the most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom.

23 Thus he said, The fourth beast shall be [•] the fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth,[‖] and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces.

24 And the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings• that shall arise: and [f] another shall rise after them; and he shall be diverse from the first, and he shall subdue three kings.

25 And he shall speak great words against the most High, and shall [g] wear out [†] the saints of the most High, and think to change times and laws: and they shall be given into his hand until [h] a time, and times,[‡] and the dividing of time.

26 [i] But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and to destroy it unto the end.

27 And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole armies, conquered and tyrannized over the known world for many ages, and at last was divided into ten different kingdoms or states. The LITTLE HORN, which sprung up after the rest, and plucked up three of the former, and which had eyes like the eyes of a man, and a mouth speaking great things, is the papal authority, which arose from small beginnings, and, dispossessing three of the Italian powers, became a civil as well as an ecclesiastical principality; and which is noted for craft, circumspection, and vigilance; for blasphemous boasting of their own excellencies and prerogatives, even against God, his laws and ordinances; for making proud decrees to bind men's consciences; and for the persecution of his people.—It continues 1260 years, or three times, or years, and a half, in prophetic language; —and on account of it, Rome, the seat thereof, will be at last destroyed: whereas, though the Chaldeans, Persians, and Greeks, had their imperial power taken from them, they long remained a people.

Ver. 9, 10, 13, 14, 18, 22, 26, 27. represent JEHOVAH as judging and condemning to ruin these monarchies, especially the Roman, that the gospel kingdom of his Son might be established in the world. His white robes denote his unspotted righteousness and holiness in all his proceedings. His white hairs represent his eternity, venerable Majesty, and the ripeness of his counsels. His fiery throne his awful scrutiny and fearful condemnations. Its burning wheels and fiery stream denote the swift execution of his sentences and fearful severity of his judgments. His numerous ministers are his angels, and the agents in his providence. The opening of the books denotes the exact discovery he makes of men's works, and the infinite equity and regularity of his decisions. The power here given to the Son of man implies not only his ascension into heaven, but his authority to destroy the Roman and Antichristian powers, in order that his gospel church may fill the whole world, especially in the millennium.

CHAPTER VIII.

(1) The vision of the ram and he-goat: 1—12. (2) Two thousand three hundred days of sacrifice: 13, 14. (3) Gabriel's conference with Daniel: 15—27.

IN the third year of the reign of king Belshazzar, a vision appeared unto me, even unto me Daniel, after that which appeared unto me [a] at the first.

2 And I saw [b] in a vision; (and it came to pass, when I saw, that I was at [c] Shushan in the palace, which is in the province of [d] Elam;[*]) and I saw in a vision, and I was by the river of Ulai.

3 Then I lifted up mine eyes and saw, and, behold, there stood before the river [*] a ram[†] which had two [f] horns: and the two horns[‡] were high; but [§] one was higher than [§] the other, and the higher came up last.

4 I saw the ram [h] pushing westward, and northward, and southward; so that no beasts might stand before him, neither was there any that could deliver out of his hand; but he did according to his will, and became great.

5 And as I was considering, behold, an [i] he-goat[‖] came from the west on the face of the whole earth, and [*] touched not the ground: and the goat had [k] a notable horn between his eyes.

6 And he came to the ram that had two horns, which I had seen standing before the river, and ran unto him in the fury of his power.

7 And I saw him come close unto the ram, and he was moved with [l] choler against him, and smote the ram, and brake his [m] two horns; and there was no power in the ram to stand before him, [n] but he cast him down to the ground, and stamped upon him: and there was none that could deliver the ram out of his hand.

8 Therefore the he-goat [o] waxed very great: and [p] when he was strong, [q] the great horn was broken; and for it came up four notable ones toward the four winds of heaven.

* A little horn—applied by some to Antiochus Epiphanes; by others to the Romans; by others to Mahomet. That it cannot predigure Antiochus, seems evident from the fact, that the power of "the little horn," was to continue unto 2,300 days (ver. 14), which, if literal days, were not fulfilled in the case of Antiochus, for he first took Jerusalem and profaned the temple in 170 B. C., and commenced his persecution of their religion in 168 B. C. But his army was conquered by Judas in 165 B. C., when the sanctuary was cleansed, and the worship restored by Judas; thus giving, at the utmost, a period but of five years, or less than 1825 literal days; or rather, dating from 168 B. C., a period less than 1095 literal days. On the other hand, if the 2300 days be taken as prophetical years, (as Newton thinks) then the Roman power did not continue so long over Jerusalem; for it commenced in 65 B. C., and the temple was destroyed, and, with it, every Jewish ordinance abrogated, A. D. 70; and all the Roman power in the East finally terminated with the fall of Constantinople, A.D. 1453; and the sanctuary, moreover, still remains uncleansed. The conclusion seems inevitable, that "the little horn," (ver. 9), like "the little horn" (chap. 7. 8), is an ecclesiatico-political power, in which characteristic Mohammedanism in the East, exactly coincides with Popery in the West.—Ed.

† Last end.—This intimates a progressive series of acts; and the vision of the "little horn" of the Eastern empire commences the last act of this vast drama of "indignation" against Jewish and Christian apostasy, self-righteousness, and worldliness; and closes with the cleansing of the Jewish sanctuary and the establishment of the kingdom of the saints of the most High, including the whole renovated church.—Ed.

9 And out of one of them came forth a little horn,[*] which waxed exceeding great, toward the south, and toward the east, and toward the pleasant land.

10 And it waxed great, even [†] to the host of heaven; and it cast down some of the host and of the stars to the ground, and stamped upon them.

14 And he said unto me, Unto two thousand and three hundred [u] days; then shall the sanctuary be [x] cleansed.

16 And I heard a man's voice between the banks of [z] Ulai, which called, and said, Gabriel, make this man to understand the vision.

17 So he came near where I stood; and when he came, I was afraid, and fell upon my face: but he said unto me, Understand, [a] O son of man; for at the time of the end shall be the vision.

18 Now, as he was speaking with me, I was in a deep sleep on my face toward the ground: but he touched me, and [*] set me upright.

19 And he said, Behold, I will make thee know what shall be in the last end [†] of the indignation: for at the time appointed the end shall be.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—Thrice happy is that retirement from business and courts, which is filled up with intimate fellowship with God, and with discoveries of the secrets of his covenant and providence! What a troubled, unsettled, ever changing, and noisy world is ours, made by the ambitious and contentious men who dwell in it! But all their empires, established by iniquity, are but contemptible things before the eternal God, and mischievous and destructive to one another! Infinite is the glory and majesty, the power and equity, of the most High; and certain, but tremendous, his appearance for the ruin of his opposers and the establishment of his church! Yea, the reproach of Jesus' cross is effectually wiped away in his solemn exaltation to glory; and shall be in the glory of his church, especially in the millennial and heavenly state. O how affecting are noted revelations from God! There is great need to search into their meaning by prayer and meditation! and, conscious of our weakness, to consult such as can instruct us. And if we ask we shall find. If we run to and fro in diligent search, we shall understand knowledge.

CHAP. VIII.—Ver. 3—8, 20—22. The RAM with two horns, of which the last sprung was the highest, pushing westward, northward, and southward, and without any effectual resistance, denotes the empire of the Medes and more powerful Persians, which pushed its conquests all along from the Euxine Sea and the Hellespont on the north, to the river Indus on the south, and as far as African Ethiopia and Lydia on the west, containing in all about 1,600,000 square miles. The he-goat, which came flying from the west, and had a notable horn between his eyes, denotes the Grecian monarchy under Alexander, marching forces with prodigious rapidity into Persia, conquering it, and erecting a still greater empire on the ruins of it. The four horns which sprung up after the notable horn of the he-goat was broken, refer to the four generals which, after Alexander's death, parted his empire into four kingdoms, of Macedonia, Lesser Asia, Syria, and Egypt. 9—14, 23—25. The little horn which sprung from one of the four horns, and waxed exceeding great, cast down the host of heaven, and magnified himself against their prince, abolished the daily sacrifice, and trode the sanctuary under

7 O Lord, [k] righteousness [*] belongeth unto thee, but unto us confusion [l] of faces, as at this day; to the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and unto all Israel [m] that are near, and that are far off, through all the countries whither thou hast driven them, because of their trespass that they have trespassed against thee.

8 O Lord, [n] to us belongeth confusion of face, to our kings, to our princes, and to our fathers, because we have sinned against thee.

9 To the Lord our God [o] belong mercies and forgivenesses, [p] though we have rebelled against him:

10 Neither have we obeyed the voice of the LORD our God, to walk in [q] his laws, which he set before us by his servants the prophets.

11 Yea, [r] all Israel have transgressed thy law, even by departing, that they might not obey thy voice: therefore [s] the curse is poured upon us, and the oath that is written in the law of Moses the servant of God, because we have sinned against him.

12 And [t] he hath confirmed his words, which he spake against us, and against our judges that judged us, by bringing upon us a great evil: for under the whole heaven [u] hath not been done as hath been done upon Jerusalem.

13 As [x] it is written in the law of Moses, all this evil is come upon us: yet [y] made we not our prayer before the LORD our God, that we might turn from our iniquities, and understand thy truth.

14 Therefore hath the LORD [z] watched upon the evil, and brought it upon us: for [a] the LORD our God is righteous in all his works which he doeth; for we obeyed not his voice.

15 And now, O Lord our God, [b] that hast brought thy people forth out of the land of Egypt with a mighty hand, and hast [†] gotten thee [c] renown, as at this day, we have sinned, we have done wickedly.

16 ¶ O Lord, according to all [d] thy righteousness,[‡] I beseech thee, let thine anger and thy fury be turned away [e] from thy city Jerusalem, thy holy mountain: because for [f] our sins, and for the iniquities of our fathers, Jerusalem and foot, 2300 days, mornings and evenings, till at last it was broken without hand, denotes Antiochus Epiphanes, a Syro-grecian king, who by craft, and by the assistance of some neighbours, obtained the kingdom instead of his nephew; and becoming strong, persecuted the Jews, profaned their sanctuary, set their high priesthood to sale, abolished their daily sacrifices about three years, murdered multitudes of them, and, after vowing to extirpate them, was cut off by the fearful vengeance of God. He may also be considered as typical of the popish Antichrist, that chief corrupter and destroyer of the Christian church.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—The people of God have often enjoyed the most glorious liberty in their souls when their bodies have been held in captivity. But those who abuse others may quickly expect the like treatment. God quickly stops the career of ambitious men. And little do they, who risk both soul and body, in amassing power or wealth, know who shall enjoy them. If ever God's people suffer, their sins are the cause. They who slight or abuse the privileges of God's sanctuary, deserve to be deprived of them. But no wicked persecutor has any more power than the Lord permits. His hand must be observed even in all the enterprises of his enemies. And it is comfortable to reflect, that he looks on the persecution of his church as against himself: and that, though her adversities may be severe, they cannot be lasting. In his time her privileges shall be restored, the sanctuary cleansed, and her most crafty and powerful enemies fearfully destroyed. It is proper, however, that perplexed souls should consult Jesus, the wonderful Counsellor; and that gracious souls should be deeply affected with the church's distress, but never so as to disqualify them for the duties of their station.

17 Now therefore, O our God, [h] hear the prayer of thy servant, and his supplications, and cause thy face to shine upon thy sanctuary that is desolate, for the Lord's sake.*

18 O my God, [i] incline thine ear, and hear; open thine eyes, and behold our desolations, and the city [k] which is called by thy name: [l] for we do not [†] present our supplications before thee for our righteousnesses, but for thy great mercies.

19 O Lord, [m] hear; O Lord, forgive; O Lord, hearken and do; [n] defer not, for thine own sake, O my God: for thy city and thy people are called by thy name.

20 ¶ And [o] whiles I was speaking, and praying, [p] and confessing my sin, and the sin of my people Israel, and presenting my supplication before the LORD my God [q] for the holy mountain of my God;

21 Yea, whiles I was speaking in prayer, even the man [r] Gabriel,‡ whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning, being caused to [s] fly [§] swiftly, [t] touched me [u] about the time of the evening oblation.

22 And he [x] informed me, and talked with me, and said, O Daniel, I am now come forth [‖] to give thee skill and understanding.

23 [y] At the beginning of thy supplications the [z] commandment came forth, and I am come to show thee; for thou art [a] greatly beloved: therefore understand the matter, and consider the vision.

24 [a] Seventy weeks† are determined upon thy people, and upon thy holy city, [b] to finish the transgression, and [c] to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and [d] to bring in everlasting righteousness, and [e] to seal up the vision and [f] prophecy, and to anoint the most holy.

* This was not the "commandment" of Cyrus, which related merely to the temple, (Ezra 1. 1—3); nor of Darius, which only confirmed the former, (Ezra vi); nor of the 7th of Artaxerxes, which merely confirmed the decrees of his predecessors, (Ezra 7. 7, 13, 31); but is the decree of the 20th Artaxerxes, (Neh. 2. 1, 6—8), and from this date the 70 weeks are to be computed. Now the 20th Artaxerxes was 445 B. C. Then take 70 Chaldee years, equal to 69 Julian; and so 478 Julian years, making 483 Chaldee years, will terminate A. D. 33, the date of Messiah's death. If the time be reckoned from the 7th Artaxerxes, the result is the same. Thus, Artaxerxes' 7th is 457 B. C.; which taken from 490, the whole 70 weeks, arrives at the same date, A. D. 33.—ED.

CHAP. IX.—Ver. 24—26. That these verses relate to the manifestation of Jesus Christ to fulfil all righteousness, and make full atonement for the sins of his people, to fulfil all the ancient types and prophecies, and to receive the Holy Ghost above measure himself, and miraculously pour him out upon his followers, for the restraining of iniquity, and the introduction of remarkable holiness into the world, among both Jews and Gentiles, is generally agreed. That each of the weeks mentioned denotes seven years, a day for a year, Ezek. iv. 6; and that the whole of the numbers is intended to point out the time of our Saviour's appearance, is also agreed. In applying the weeks there has been great difference among calculators: but it is enough that they must all fix the conclusion of the weeks near the time of our Saviour's death. From Ezra's commission, by Artaxerxes Longimanus, in the 7th year of his reign, to restore the affairs of the Jewish church and state, to the death of Christ, is precisely 70 weeks, or 490 years. From Nehemiah's commission to rebuild the wall of Jerusalem, in the 20th year of Artaxerxes, to the death of Christ, is 490 lunar years, and a little more; or perhaps precisely 490 to the rejection of the Jews and calling of the Gentiles. From Ezra's commission to Nehemiah's finishing his reformation, might be precisely seven weeks, or 49 years; thence to John Baptist's manifestation (by his ministry) of Christ as come, 62 weeks, or 434 years; thence to Christ's death another week, or seven years;—490 in all. Perhaps too from Julius Cæsar's edict, for the Jews to repair and fortify their cities, to Christ's birth, might be precisely 49 years; and as much from Herod's building of the inner temple to Christ's baptism; and as much from his finishing the outer temple to Christ's death.

In the last week, ver. 27, the covenant was confirmed with many, and the daily sacrifice abolished, either by Christ's ministrations, and the conversion of multitudes to him by the covenant of grace, and by his rendering useless all the typical sacrifices by his death; or near forty years afterward, when Titus made leagues of peace with sundry of the Asian nations, that he might have the more leisure to make war against the Jews; by which their temple was destroyed, their civil and ecclesiastical constitution overthrown, and themselves generally murdered or driven from the country; under the dreadful effects of which they have remained for above 1700 years past. [See Introduction, chap. iv. sect. xviii.]

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—The near fulfilment of God's promises animates the believing mind to earnest prayer for it. But, alas, how shameful and criminal is the conduct that exposes God's people to his righteous judgments, which so exactly correspond with his threatenings! The desolations of God's sanctuary are a great grief to gracious souls. But it is an animating encouragement to prayer, to consider his readiness to forgive sins, his ability to supply our wants, and that he has done so much for his people in former times, and can glorify his name, his Christ, his justice and mercy, and his relation to us, in our deliverance! Yea, God sometimes makes immediate and sensible returns to the prayers of his people, and gives them more than they ask. And with great humility and serious consideration ought such favours to be received! Necessary, great, and glorious, and fixed in every circumstance, is Jesus' incarnation, his unction with the Holy Ghost, his labours and death for sinners: and terrible the vengeance incurred by his obstinate despisers. But great is the mercy that, when some circumstances in scripture are left in great obscurity, the principal things are expressed so plainly, that he that runs may read and understand them.

CHAP. X. Ver. 5, 6. Christ's clothing of fine linen denotes his righteousness as our surety, and his holy and righteous government. His golden girdle denotes

His eyes as lamps of fire denote his infinite knowledge, terrible to his enemies. His arms and feet as polished brass denote his almighty power to uphold his church, and tread down her enemies. His loud voice, his terrible judgments, and powerful spread of his gospel. 13, 20. The angel Gabriel had to baffle the attempts of Cambyses, Cyrus' son, or of some evil angel at the Persian court, who laboured to stir up mischief against the Jews, and had none to assist him herein but Jesus Christ, or some principal angel.

Reflections upon Chap. X.—The slow advances of God's work of deliverance in his church deeply affect the minds of his faithful saints. And let God turn back our captivity on earth as he will, this world will be still a valley of tears. But Jesus kindly manifests his glory to humble, importunate, and solemn supplicants. Oh how unnumbered are his excellencies! And the faith and sense of his love ought to banish all slavish dread, which would indispose us for hearing his words. What insignificant and polluted nothings are the best of men before God; and in their own view, when they behold him! But graciously his power and promises support his people under their terrors and grievances. As the entrance of their prayers is pleasant to him, so the entrance of his word is quickening to them. And we ought to be patient under present trials, lest God should send heavier ones. Though kings on earth and devils from hell be against us, it is enough if Jehovah, if Jesus, and his angels, care for and protect us.

Chap. XI.—Ver. 1. Should have stood in the preceding chapter; and means that Gabriel had encouraged and excited Darius the Mede and Cyrus to release the Jews, notwithstanding the great opposition that design met with from devils and wicked courtiers. 2—4. After Cyrus, Cambyses, and Darius Hystaspes, Xerxes, being extremely wealthy, shall attempt to engage all his subjects and many others to destroy the Greeks, and shall invade them with a powerful army, but shall be shamefully defeated.—Long after this, Alexander the Macedonian, having become king of all Greece, shall invade and conquer Persia; and, after a short reign, be cut off by death, and his kingdom parted into four; but no part shared by his own relations. 5—9. of the south shall come to the [§] king of the [‖] north to make [*] an agreement: but she shall [b] not retain the power of the arm; neither shall he stand, nor his arm: but she shall be given up, and they that brought her, and [†] he that begat her, and [‡] he that strengthened her in these times.

7 But out of a [§] branch of her roots shall one stand up in his estate, which shall come with an army, and shall enter into the fortress of the king of the north, and shall deal against them, and [c] shall prevail;

8 And shall also carry captives into Egypt [d] their gods, with their princes, and with [e] their precious vessels of silver and of gold; [f] and [‖] he shall continue more years than the [g] king of the north.

9 So the king of the south shall come into his kingdom, and shall return into his own land.

10 But [†] his sons [‡] [§] shall be stirred up, and shall assemble a multitude of great forces: and [‖] one shall certainly come, and [g] overflow, and pass through; then shall he return, and be stirred up, even to his [h] fortress.

11 And the [*] king of the south shall be moved with choler, and shall come forth and fight with him, even with the king of the north: and [†] he shall set forth a great multitude; but the multitude shall [i] be given into [‡] his hand.

12 And when he hath taken away the multitude, his heart [k] shall be lifted up; and he shall cast down many ten thousands: but he shall not be strengthened by it.

13 For the king [§] of the north shall return, and shall set forth a multitude greater than the former, and shall certainly come, [l] after certain years, with a great army, and with much riches.

14 And in those times there shall many stand up against the king of the south: also [*] the robbers of thy people [†] shall exalt themselves to establish the vision; but they shall fall.

15 So the king of the north shall come, and [l] cast up a mount, and take [‡] the most fenced cities: and the arms of the south [m] shall not withstand, neither [§] his chosen people, neither shall there be any strength to withstand.

16 But he that cometh against him [n] shall do according to his own will, and none shall stand before him: and he shall stand in the [o] [*] glorious land, which by his hand shall be consumed.[†]

17 He shall also set his face to enter with the strength of his whole kingdom, and [‡] upright ones with him; thus shall he do: and he shall give him the daughter of women,[§] [p] corrupting her; but she shall not stand on his side, neither be for him.[‖]

18 After this shall he turn his face unto the [q] isles, and shall take many: but [] a prince[†] [r] for his own behalf shall cause [‡] the reproach offered by him to cease; without his own reproach [] he shall cause it to turn upon him.

19 Then [†] he shall turn his face toward the fort [§] of his own land: but he shall stumble, and fall, and not be found.

20 Then shall stand up in his estate [‖] a raiser of taxes in the glory of the kingdom; [*] but within few days he shall be destroyed, neither [†] in anger, nor in battle.[‡]

21 ¶ And in his [§] estate shall stand up [u] a [x] vile person,[‖] to whom they shall not give the honour of the kingdom: but he shall come in peaceably, and obtain the kingdom by [y] flatteries.

22 And [z] with the arms of a flood shall they be overflown from before him, and shall be broken; yea, also the [a] prince of the covenant.[*]

23 And after the league made with him [b] he shall work deceitfully: for [c] he shall come up, and shall become strong with a small people.

24 He shall enter [†] peaceably even upon the fattest places of the [‡] province; and he shall do that which his fathers have not done, nor his fathers' fathers; he shall scatter among them the prey, and spoil, and riches: yea, and he shall [d] forecast his devices against the strong holds, even for a time.

25 And he shall stir up his power and his courage against the [§] king of the south with a great army; and the king of the south shall be stirred up to battle with a very great and mighty army; but he shall not stand: for they shall forecast devices against him.

26 Yea, they that feed of the portion of his meat shall destroy him, and [‖] his army shall overflow: and many shall fall down slain.

the places adjacent, still more powerful, and his dominion more extensive.—Wearied of the war between the two kingdoms, Antiochus Theos, the third Syro-grecian king, shall, for establishing a peace, marry Berenice the daughter of Ptolemy Philadelphus of Egypt. But he and she, and all her relations and friends, shall be quickly destroyed by Laodice his former wife. Then Ptolemy Euergetes of Egypt, Berenice's brother, in revenge, shall terribly ravage Syria, and even conquer it, till a sedition at home shall oblige him to return, yet laden with prisoners and spoil. 10—20. To recover what their father Callinicus of Syria had lost, his sons Ceraunus and Antiochus the Great shall levy a formidable army; and, after his brother's death, Antiochus shall ravage even to the north-east border of Egypt, where Ptolemy Philopater's troops shall give him a terrible defeat; which, issuing in Ptolemy's rage against the Jews, and his abandoning himself to luxury, shall conduce to the hurt of his kingdom. Ptolemy dying, and leaving his son Epiphanes an infant, Antiochus, assisted by part of the Jews, shall march a great army into Egypt, and ravage the country; and after bribing his daughter Cleopatra to murder him, he shall marry her to young Ptolemy Epiphanes of Egypt: but she proving faithful to her husband, her father, disappointed of his designs on the kingdom of Egypt, shall, in his rage, attack and take many of the isles and coasts of the Ægean Sea, now the east part of the Mediterranean. But the Romans, whom he now insults, in invading their allies, and treating their ambassadors with contempt, shall stop his career; and after many shameful defeats, oblige him to quit Lesser Asia, pay all the expenses of the war, and give his own son for a pledge of the payment. Retiring into his kingdom, he shall be murdered at Elymais, in his attempt to rob a temple of Jupiter. His elder son Seleucus Philopater shall be famous for nothing but for oppressing his people with taxes to pay the Roman debts; and shall, after a short reign, be poisoned by Heliodorus his treasurer. 21—29. § According to scriptural geography, all southerly points from east and west of Jerusalem are called "the south." Thus explained, this verse represents the northern hordes of Huns, Goths, Vandals, &c.; and the southern tribes, of Saracens, Tartars, Turks, &c., by whom the Roman empire was overrun, and foretells the rise of some great northern power that is finally to invade the kingdoms, and settle his proud throne "upon the glorious holy mountains," and there perish where "none shall help him." making a league with him, which neither party intend to keep, he shall return home to Syria, terribly murdering the Jews, and ravaging their country in his way. Not long after he shall again invade Egypt with a formidable army, but without success. 30—35. For the Roman ambassadors, arriving in Macedonian ships, shall prohibit him from proceeding against Ptolemy, whom they shall have taken into their protection. Enraged herewith, he shall return home; and, by fearful murder and persecutions, shall attempt to abolish the Jewish religion, or extirpate their nation. And assisted by apostate Jews, he shall abolish the daily sacrifice, and make their temple a sink of idolatry, whoredom, and other wickedness.—While many of the Jews suffer for their religion, Matthias and his sons, called Maccabees, shall take arms; and, by a multitude of violent encounters, shall defeat the Syro-grecians, retake and purify the temple, and restore the true worship of God.—But some understand these six verses of the Romish heathens, and their persecution of the Christians. 36—45. Some understand these verses also of Antiochus' pride, insolence, blasphemy, introduction of new deities, and his brutal murder of women and children; and of his ravaging Canaan, Egypt, and the countries about; till at length he was embarrassed by a Parthian war from the east, and at last miserably destroyed by God. But they, at least, chiefly represent the Romish Antichrist as exalting himself above magistrates, angels, and even the Divine Persons, prohibiting marriage, and, regardless alike of the God of primitive Christians and of heathen idols, setting up angels and departed saints, or consecrated waters, as protectors of countries, cities, and societies, and as harassed by the Saracens, and afterwards more terribly by the Turks, who have conquered the west of Asia, north of Africa, and south-east of Europe; and who will be ruined in their attempt to dispossess the returned Jews of their country in the beginning of the millennium, about the very time that the Lord shall destroy Antichrist.

Reflections upon Chap. XI.—Infinitely perfect is God's insight into futurities. Often riches are kept for the hurt of the owners. Yea, all things here are but vanity and vexation of spirit. While God in his providences sets up one and pulls down another, exactly answerable to his purpose, men's lusts render this world a tremendous scene of ravage and murder. And God often exalts the worst of men to render them scourges to sinners, and especially his own people. And none are more bitter persecutors than apostates from the truth. While God singularly honours those that cleave to him in an evil day, he permits their opponents to rush forward in wickedness, till, becoming impudent in impiety, he can no longer delay their tremendous destruction. And how marvellous a confirmation of our faith is it, to find some scripture predictions, of contingent events, more particularly circumstantiated than in any particular history of them!

last deliver them from, the terrible harassments of Antiochus, Romish heathens, Antichrist, Turks, &c., and at the last day he will reward them according to their faithfulness and usefulness. 4, 9, 10. These predictions shall never be fully understood before the fulfilment. And as there will be then a mixture of persons good and bad, it will be only the former who will be bettered by these troubles, or who, by diligent observation, will understand the fulfilled predictions. 7, 11, 12. The time, times, and a half, or 1260 days, denote the 1260 years of Antichrist's reign. Thirty years of terrible wars at the destruction of Antichrist bring it to 1290; and, by the end of 1335, we expect the millennium will be introduced in its full glory. 9, 13. Daniel must rest contented with the discoveries which he had obtained, and prepare for the eternal state, in the assurance of happiness and honour in it.

Reflections upon Chap. XII.—Seasonable and effectual are Jesus' assistance, protection, deliverances, and comforts. He is a present help in times of trouble to his people. And to all his chosen sheep he gives eternal life, and none shall pluck them out of his hand. O how great is the happiness of saints, and especially of faithful ministers, in the resurrection and in the eternal state! But, on the contrary, inexpressible the infamy and ruin of the wicked! Neither angels nor saints know anything more of future events but as God is pleased to reveal them. Yet, by humble searching of the Scriptures, and careful observation of providences, every prediction will at length appear plain. And it is Christ to whom we must apply for all necessary illumination. Never must we, except by death, and the last judgment, expect complete deliverances all at once. And it is not the curious scrutinizer into God's secrets, but the firm believer of his promises and observer of his laws, who may then expect safety and happiness.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF DANIEL.

1. In Daniel we may observe a glorious example of the power of early religious impressions in resisting subsequent temptations. He was one of the Jewish captives selected, according to eastern custom, for the courtly education in Babylon. His religious distinction between "clean and unclean" food, and his fixed objections against wine offered to idols, conducted him to a course of temperance as favourable to the health of his body, as to the development of his mind.

2. We observe the blessed influence of his principles and example upon his three friends—from which every pious youth should take courage to be decided in his profession of religion, as he shall thereby not only save his own soul, but may be the happy and blessed instrument of saving the souls of his youthful companions, 1 Tim. 4. 16.

3. Daniel presents us with a striking example of the worldly advancement that often accompanies or flows from the sincere profession of religion. No doubt his success exposed him to envy, and his religious principles were readily turned into instruments for his overthrow; but the God whom he served delivered him out of the snare, not merely to display his miraculous power over the ravenous lions, but to exhibit, in the most striking manner, the watchful care of his providence, and the all-sufficiency of his grace; and practically to exemplify the consolatory fact, that "godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and also of that which is to come."

4. In Daniel there is also exhibited the importance of an early education in secular knowledge, when combined with piety; and the duty, advantage, and necessity, of the continued studying of the Holy Scriptures, which is not superseded even by prophetic inspiration. Daniel, though a man so pre-eminent that the Spirit ranks him with Noah and Job—a man "greatly beloved" of heaven, and favoured with the visions of futurity—has yet left upon record that "he knew by books"—the books he had read and prayerfully studied, and not by any immediate revelation—the things that God designed, and the times of their accomplishment. But while this fact affords a gracious encouragement to the study of the Sacred Scriptures in general, it guides to the study of the prophecies in particular. Of the profitableness of the study of fulfilled prophecy there can be no question. Were it true, which it is not, that the evidence of testimony diminishes in proportion to the lapse and distance of time, the evidence from fulfilled and fulfilling prophecy would constantly supply the deficiency; for if the one did decrease, the other is constantly on the increase. And every traveller who returns from the great field of prophetic vision, furnishes—even where he intends it not—some new illustration of the historic accuracy with which the spirit that was in the prophets foretold the events to come. But does not the record of Daniel's successful study of the prophetic books, furnish a light and encouragement to the study of unfulfilled prophecy also? The record of his success is not a mere fact, but a fact intended to teach its own peculiar lesson; and that lesson is, the hopefulness of studying unfulfilled prophecy. This, like every other department of sacred study, must be undertaken, not in the spirit of an eager and anxious curiosity, but in the spirit of deep humility, childlike teachableness, earnest prayer, and patient waiting. And were it so, that every attempt to penetrate the future, ended but in the conviction of the weakness of our vision, and the depth of the darkness that shrouds it, still the deep thoughtfulness and prayer into which the attempt has conducted, would alone repay the time and pains bestowed. But a total want of success in such studies we hold to be unexampled, if not impossible. Taking the language of prophecy fulfilled, as the key to what is still future; and, taking the attitude, not of a dogmatizing teacher, but of an humble learner, the student of unfulfilled prophecy, though he may be utterly unable to fill up the minor details, will yet discover the great outlines so broad and distinct, that he can have as little hesitation about anticipating the future, as about verifying the past. Indeed one of the chief errors to be avoided in the study of unfulfilled prophecy, is the attempt at filling up those minor details which the Spirit of God has been pleased to withhold. Let the student of prophecy never attempt to pass the barriers of the written word, nor endeavour to supply by imagination one image which the Spirit has not drawn. That Spirit best knew how much should be revealed for the establishment of faith, the encouragement of hope, and the support of patience; and wise are they who follow where the Spirit leads, but pause and stand still where he commands to "shut up the words, and seal the book."

The prophecies of Daniel being chiefly visional, should be studied in conjunction with the visional portions of Isaiah, Ezekiel, Amos, and Zechariah, but particularly in the light of the "Revelation" of John, which may justly be regarded as an expansion of Daniel, and a supply of as much detail as the Spirit wills or the church requires.—Ed.

THE PROPHECY

THIS book and the eleven following were, by the Jews, comprehended in one volume, called the Lesser Prophets. Hosea began his public work about A. M. 3196; and lived to see most of what he had foretold fulfilled in the misery and ruin of the ten tribes of Israel. His style is concise and sententious; in some places very obscure, and in others clear and pathetic. His general scope is to convince the Hebrews of their sins, excite them to repent, and prevent their own destruction, and to denounce the judgments of God against such as should remain obstinate. But with these he intermixes some very evangelical promises; chap. i. 7, 10, 11; and ii. 1, 7, 14—23; and iii. 5; and v. 15; and vi. 1—3, 11; and xi. 8, 9; and xiii. 4, 9, 10, 14; and xiv. 1—8; which indeed almost all respect the happy restoration of the Jews in the glorious millennium. In the first three chapters he instructs by signs; in the rest by discourses only.—N. B. In this and other prophecies, Ephraim and Israel denote the ten tribes, as distinguished from the kingdom of Judah and Benjamin.

Hosea is placed at the head of the twelve "Lesser Prophets," who are so called, not from any inferiority in their character, authority or matter, but merely on account of their brevity when compared with Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel. Hosea was contemporary with Isaiah, Joel, Amos, and Jonah; and prophesied, instructed, reproved, or comforted, the people, during the reigns of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah—in all above sixty years. His prophecies, however, are chiefly directed to the ten tribes, before their captivity. His book is quoted or referred to in the New Testament in, at least, the following passages:—Mat. ii. 15. & ix. 13. & xii. 7. Luke xv. 18. & xxiii. 30. John vii. 34. Rom. ix. 25, 26. 1 Cor. xv. 54—56. Gal. vi. 7, 8. Heb. iv. 12. 1 Pet. ii. 9, 10. Rev. vi. 16.—ED.]

CHAPTER I.

(1) God's declaration against the spiritual unfaithfulness of Israel: 1, 2. (2) The emblem of the marriage of Gomer, and birth of her children: 3—9. (3) The merciful restoration of Israel and Judah: 10, 11.

A. M. cir. 3219. B. C. cir. 785.

THE word of the LORD that came unto Hosea, the son of Beeri, in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam, the son of Joash, king of Israel.[a]

2 ¶ The beginning of the word of the LORD by Hosea. And the LORD said to Hosea, Go, take unto thee[†] a wife of whoredoms, and children of whoredoms: for the land hath committed great whoredom, departing from the LORD.

3 So he went and took Gomer[‡] the daughter of Diblaim; which conceived, and bare him a son.

4 And the LORD said unto him, Call his name Jezreel;[§] for yet a little while, and I will avenge the blood of Jezreel upon the house of Jehu, and will cause to cease the kingdom of the house of Israel.

5 And it shall come to pass at that day, that I will break the bow[‖] of Israel in the valley of Jezreel.

6 ¶ And she conceived again, and bare a daughter. And God said unto him, Call her name Lo-ruhamah: for I will no more have mercy upon the house of Israel; but I will utterly take them away.

7 But I will have mercy upon the house of Judah, and will save them by the LORD their God, and will not save them by bow, nor by sword, nor by battle, by horses, nor by horsemen.

8 ¶ Now, when she had weaned [•]Lo-ruhamah, she conceived, and bare a son.

9 Then said God, Call his name Lo-ammi: [†] for ye are not my people, and I will not be your God.

10 ¶ [a]Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered: [b]and it shall come to pass, that [‡] in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people, there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God.

11 Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together, and appoint themselves one head, and they shall come up out of the land: [c]for great shall be the day of Jezreel.[§]

[a] Jeroboam, king of Israel, was contemporary with Uzziah king of Judah; and is here mentioned, because the prophecy was chiefly directed to his subjects.—ED.

[†] The "whoredom" here described consisted in the people of Israel having "departed from the LORD," and gone after the idolatry of the nations. This command, when interpreted by the second chapter—which evidently describes the kingdom of Israel under the emblem of a faithless but reclaimed, reformed, and penitent wife—will clearly appear to be itself, not an actual command for God's prophet to marry an adulteress, but an emblem of what grace and mercy must do in bringing back faithless rebels to the covenant and kingdom of God.—ED.

[§] Jezreel, "God will disperse;" or as seed sown by the way side is scattered and lost.—ED.

[‖] Break the bow.—Nations, like an elastic bow, often make sudden and wonderful recoveries after defeats apparently ruinous; but as the "broken bow" recovers no more, so Israel now falls never again to rise, till the judgment is completed.—ED.

[•] Lo-ruhamah—not having obtained mercy. The character of an individual unbelieving and impenitent.—ED.

EXPLANATORY NOTES. CHAP. I.—Ver. 4. In executing God's judgments on the family of Ahab, 2 Kings ix. x., Jehu only aimed at gratifying his own ambition and cruelty; and therefore his conduct is justly punished, as murder, upon his own family, and the throne of Israel taken from them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—God can easily preserve his ministers in the very worst of times, and make them steadily to serve him either in honour or dishonour. And it becomes them to use very diversified methods, in order to convince hardened sinners, and warn them to flee from the wrath which is to come. God sovereignly destroys the instruments of his wrath when his work with them is finished. And there is no warding off the strokes of his vengeance. They who depart from him weaken, and bring certain ruin on themselves. If God's mercy be once taken from men, they are irrecoverably miserable. And they who in works deny God may expect to be disowned by him at last. But our salvation is solely owing to his sovereign grace. And if we cleave to God in a day of defection, he will save us in a day of trouble. Thrice happy are they who, adopted into his family, have Jesus for their spiritual Head, and go up from this world to their heavenly rest. Happy are the apostolic and millennial periods, and especially that of the last judgment, in which multitudes of Jews and Gentiles shall follow after him as the Head of his redeemed church.

CHAP. II.—Ver. 1, might have been connected with the preceding chapter, intimating that, at that general restoration, the Hebrews will again be adopted as God's people, and share his peculiar favour. 2—4. And let the pious Israelites, or Jewish converts to Christianity, earnestly plead with their nation, which have practically abandoned my worship and service, and which I am just ejecting from their peculiar relation to me to repent of, and reform from their idola-

4 And I will not have mercy upon her children; for they be the children of whoredoms.

5 For their mother hath played the harlot: she that conceived them hath done shamefully: for she said, I will go after my lovers, that give me my bread and my water, my wool and my flax, mine oil and my [*] drink.

6 Therefore, behold, I will hedge up thy way with thorns, and [†] make a wall, that she shall not find her paths.

7 And she shall follow after her lovers, but she shall not overtake them; and she shall seek them, but shall not find them: then shall she say, I will go and return to my first husband; [‡] for then was it better with me than now.

8 For she did not know [§] that I gave her corn, and [‖] wine, and oil, and multiplied her silver and gold, which they prepared for Baal.

9 Therefore will I return, and take away my corn [*] in the time thereof, and my wine in the season thereof, and will recover my wool and my flax given to cover her nakedness.

10 And now will I discover her [†] lewdness in the sight of her lovers, and none shall deliver her out of mine hand.

11 I will also cause all her mirth to cease, her feast-days, her new-moons, and her sabbaths, and all her solemn feasts.

12 And I will destroy her vines and her fig-trees, whereof she hath said, These are my rewards [‡] that my lovers have given me: and I will make them a forest, and the beasts of the field shall eat them.

[‡] This is the exact parallel of the younger son, (Luke 15. 18), who, having wasted his substance, and having been reduced to the degrading employment of feeding swine, at last, through grace, "came to himself," and said, "I will arise and go unto my father."—Ed.

[§] Either to be ignorant of God, or altogether to overlook or deny him, is the constant characteristic of irreligion. The prophet here draws his evidence of this fact from agriculture and commerce—corn, oil, wine, wool, flax, silver, and gold—the produce, possessions, and emblems, of a prosperous people; all naturally calculated to lead the heart to the Giver, but all, through sin, leading to neglect or ignorance both of his providence and grace.—Ed.

[‡] The march of improvement in agriculture, manufactures, and the various useful, or ornamental arts, ought to be accompanied with similar advancement in the public feeling of gratitude to God. But, alas! experience discovers that improvements in temporal, are too often attained at the expense of spiritual things. Israel had greatly advanced in the cultivation of the vine and the fig—two inexhaustible sources of national employment and prosperity—but, having derived her improvements chiefly from the example and instruction of her idolatrous neighbours, she not merely adopts their improvements, but conforms to their idolatry, and records her success as "rewards" from them, and forgets or denies that they are mercies from God. O that Britain may take warning, and never be seduced after this sad example of national unbelief!—Ed.

[†] Achor was the place (Josh. 7. 25), where Achan was put to death for his covetousness of gold and silver, and a Babylonish garment. Now "covetousness is idolatry," and until that principle is destroyed by the mortifying spirit, (Rom. 8. 13), some form of idolatry will still reign in the heart; but, when "covetousness" is destroyed, then the believer is "saved by hope;" "because the love of God is shed abroad in his heart," just in proportion as the love of the world is expelled. tries and other beloved abominations, lest I quickly deprive them of all their privileges, render their country desolate, themselves miserable captives, and without mercy continue my vengeance upon their posterity for many generations. 5—13. For since they, with impudent obstinacy, depend on heathen alliances and idols, as if these had procured them their enjoyments, I will bring them into inextricable perplexities and miseries, that they shall not be able to accomplish their idolatrous or wicked designs. And neither idols nor idolatrous allies being able to help them, they shall return to their God, who anciently heaped so many favours on their ancestors. And because they refuse to own me as the bestower of those outward things, wherewith they make and worship idols, I will deprive them of these things; and, by my fearful judgments, effectually and incontrollably manifest their fearful wickedness to all the nations around, turn all their joy into mourning, all their plenty into miserable poverty, and give their substance to furious enemies, render their country desolate, and thus severely punish their idolatries. 14—18. Nevertheless, I, who brought their fathers out of Egypt into the wilderness, and entered into covenant with them, will at last deliver them from their captivity and dispersion, and to their great comfort bring them through all difficulties into their own land, and make them to rejoice in my salvation, as their fathers did on their having passed through the Red Sea; and I will effectually determine them to renounce their idolatry and apostasy, and solemnly and cordially to acknowledge me alone as the Lord their gracious God. I will effectually protect them from every temporal or spiritual enemy and danger, 19—23; and through the righteousness of my Son, I will, in infinite equity, wisdom, love, mercy, and faithfulness, render them my people by an everlasting covenant, and make them to know and acknowledge me as their God, fulfilling all my gracious promises. I will make all things in heaven and earth to concur in promoting their temporal, spiritual, and eternal welfare. Yea, I will graciously multiply their children; and notwithstanding their long and fearful rejection, both Jews and Gentiles shall be rendered my peculiar people, sincere, bold, and open professors of the gospel of Christ.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—Our relation to God, and dependence on him, exceedingly aggravate our rebellion against him; and yet God will renew his grant of that relation. O how loath he is to give up his professing people! They who love him ought therefore with great earnestness to expostulate with backsliding brethren, in order to convince them of their sin, warn them of their danger, and persuade them to repent of, and reform from, their sins; and not only to put away the grosser acts, but even the most inward and beloved abominations. If men abuse God's temporal favours in the service of idols, or accept them as received from such, it is but just that he should deprive them of them; and that he should mar the fields and flocks of those who have profaned his ordinances. But how sovereign are his mercies! Where sin and its punishments had abounded, grace much more abounds. God allures those by his gospel grace who justly deserve his everlasting destruction. And distress and fear, as well as foretastes of his kindness, promote spiritual gladness, and detestation of idols. And, O, thrice-blessed is it to have JEHOVAH our reviver and comforter, our cleanser from all idols, our protector from every enemy, our gracious, faithful, and everlasting husband, our enricher, our God, and our ALL! In view of this, let my soul, hedged in by his providence, and all allured by his kindness, cast out her idols, and claim JEHOVAH as my own; that, in Christ, I may have his grace, mercy, and peace, multiplied unto me! Adoring the grace which first chose, espoused, and drew my heart, let me, in communion with his people, cordially and solemnly take him to be my God for ever, and my guide even unto death.

CHAPTER III.

By the purchase and seclusion of an adulteress for a wife, is set forth the degraded state, merciful preservation, and final restoration of Israel.

A. M. cir. 3219. B. C. cir. 785.

THEN said the LORD unto me, Go yet,[a] love a woman beloved of her friend,[†] yet an adulteress, according to the love of the LORD toward the children of Israel, who look to other gods, and love flagons of wine.

2 So I bought her[‡] to me for fifteen pieces of silver, and for an homer of barley, and an half homer of barley.

3 And I said unto her, Thou shalt abide for me many days: thou shalt not play the harlot,[§] and thou shalt not be for another man; so will I also be for thee.

4 For the children of Israel shall abide many days without a king, and without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an image, and without an ephod, and without teraphim:

5 Afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the LORD their God, and David[‖] their king; and shall fear the LORD and his goodness in the latter days.

[a] Go yet—go again. The former parable of the unfaithful wife, (ch. 1. 2—9), related to "the house of Israel" (ch. 1. 4); that is, to the ten tribes as a kingdom. This parable relates to "the children of Israel" (ch. 2. 10, 11, & 3. 2), which name includes the whole "twelve tribes scattered abroad."—ED.

[†] Beloved of her friend—her husband, (Jer. 3. 20. Song 5. 10). —Yet an adulteress. Though an adulteress, the emblem of Israel, "beloved for the fathers' sakes," notwithstanding all their unfaithfulness.—ED.

[‡] I bought her.—Intimating the enslaved state into which Israel would be brought during the dispersion.—ED.

[§] The dispersion of Israel was to cure them of idolatry—justly characterised as adultery, because idolatry and licentiousness have, in all ages, been intimately, if not inseparably, united.—ED.

[‖] David signifies "beloved," which is the name by which the Father acknowledges the Son from heaven. Mat. 3. 17.—ED.

CHAPTER IV.

(1) Judgments against national sins: 1—5. (2) Against the priests: 6—11. (3) Against idolatry: 12—14. (4) Judah exhorted to take warning from Israel: 15—19.

A. M. cir. 3220. B. C. cir. 765.

HEAR [a] the word of the LORD, ye children of Israel: for the LORD hath a controversy[*] with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God in the land.

2 By swearing, and lying, and killing, and stealing, and committing adultery, they break out,[†] and [‡] blood toucheth blood.

3 Therefore shall the land mourn, and every one that dwelleth therein shall languish, with the beasts of the field, and with the fowls of heaven; yea, the fishes of the sea also shall be taken away.[§]

CHAP. III.—Ver. 2. Hosea's purchasing back his whorish wife at the price of a slave, denotes that base and disgraceful bondage in which the Israelites should long continue. 3, 4. This shows that the Israelites and Jews should, in the most deplorable manner, continue many ages without either civil or ecclesiastical establishment, neither worshipping the true God aright, nor professing regard to the idols of the nations. 5. But, after the captivity, and especially in the beginning of the glorious millennium, shall all the Hebrew tribes, through the marvellous kindness of God, be converted to the Christian faith and true worship and fear of God.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—It is very difficult to instruct or reclaim hardened professors. Precept must be upon precept, and sign upon sign. And the kindness of God seems long lost upon obstinate sinners. Sharply he must afflict them, even while he waits to be gracious: and long and disgraceful distress must teach them to value his kind returns. But happy are those afflictions which restrain us from using sinful means of relief, or which restrain us from following after idols. And thrice happy is it when both favours and frowns effectually draw us to Jesus Christ and his service. It is only in him that we can find JEHOVAH as ours, or taste of his heart-constraining goodness.

CHAP. IV.—Ver. 1—5. Let the ten tribes of Israel know assuredly, that God, highly provoked with their hypocrisy, fraud, and falsehood, their uncharitableness and cruelty, their wilful or slothful ignorance of divine things, and by their presumptuous profane swearing, perjury, murder, theft, and adultery, the repeated, and everywhere frequent, murders of their kings and others, will, by sword, famine, and pestilence, render their country most miserable and desolate. But it is to no purpose to warn or reprove them, they are so hardened and obstinate, and are ready to fly in the face of the best authorized reprovers. Therefore they and their false prophets shall be destroyed together, and their civil constitution shall be utterly broken, and the people murdered or dragged into captivity. 6—11. Since the priests neglect to instruct the people, and reject or forget the law of God, I will exclude them and their children from the office and benefit of the priesthood; and since, as their numbers, wealth, and power increase, they become more daring in their impieties, I will strip them of all their possessions and honours, and render them miserable and contemptible captives. And since they, with eagerness and pleasure, pamper themselves with the flesh of the people's sin-offerings, and even encourage them to sin, that their gain may abound; therefore shall priests and people, already alike in ignorance, intemperance, and profaneness, be quickly alike involved in fearful punishments. Their food being withdrawn or cursed, they shall be pinched with hunger. Their whoredoms shall not increase their families, nor their idolatries nor sinful alliances their strength:—For they have openly cast off all regard to me and my law; their whoredoms, idolatries, drunkenness, and luxury, rendering them quite stupid and besotted. 12—14. Though they profess to be my people, they consult their wooden idols, and divine things by the falling of their staves. Instigated by the devil and their own idolatrous inclinations, they have renounced their dependence on me; and so abandoned themselves to idolatry, that there is scarcely the top of a hill, or a cluster of trees, where they do not worship some idol; and therefore will I give them up to the basest uncleanness and whoredoms, even in the worship of their idols, their daughters and wives being encouraged thereto by the example of their fathers and husbands:—in consequence of which, this besotted nation shall plunge themselves into ruin.

15—19. But, though the Israelites have abandoned themselves to idolatry, let not the Jews copy their example, nor come near any of their idolatrous temples at Gilgal or Beth-el, nor profane the name of the Lord by using it lightly, or attributing it to idols, or any way mixing his worship with idolatry or superstition;—for these Israelites are become quite headstrong and untractable in their apostasy from God to idols; and therefore shall their shortlived prosperity, under Jeroboam II. and Pekah, quickly issue in a miserable dispersion through the Assyrian empire. They are so violently addicted to idolatry, that it is needless for ministers to rebuke, conscience to check, providence to restrain or afflict, or my Spirit to strive any more with them. Their drink-offerings and other services are quite abominable to me: and the wine which they have intemperately drunk turns sour on their stomach. They are perpetually occupied in whoredom and idolatry; and nothing can be obtained from their judges but by the force of shameful bribery: therefore shall the Assyrians hurry them into a miserable captivity and lasting dispersion, in which they shall with shame see their folly in trusting to idols, and departing from God.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Alas, what unhappy discord sin sows, between God and men! But they who have lost the true knowledge of God, generally proceed from evil to worse. And profane ministers and magistrates are ordinarily ringleaders in guilt, and will rejoice in the wickedness of those under their charge, if it but add to their gain.——But it is just that God should withdraw his mercies from such as abuse them, and heap upon obstinate transgressors one plague after another;—that rebels against the light of his word should perish in their ignorance;—that ignorant and scandalous ministers should be exposed to peculiar misery and shame;—that what is unlawfully gained should be blasted with a curse, and that with which we have dishonoured God should be turned to our shame; and that sharers in sin should be sharers in punishment! Men will go the most dreadful lengths in sin when abandoned to their own hearts' lusts: every one will then keep another in countenance, and their dreadful crimes will at last be made a distinguished branch of their punishment. And when apostasy is general, there is great need to guard against the most distant compliance with it. It is hard to forbear the devil's service if we walk on his ground, or lose a proper reverence for God. And dreadful is the danger of complying with that which so quickly hurries men into sudden, unavoidable, and everlasting ruin.

CHAP. V.—Ver. 1, 2. Seriously take warning, ye priests, Israelites, and princes, of the fearful, but just, judgments of God impending over you, because, like hunters and fowlers upon the mountains, ye have endeavoured by all means to insnare men to idolatry and ruin; and notwithstanding manifold rebukes by my prophets and providences, have, by subtle contrivances and specious pretences, oppressed and murdered your opposers. 3—7. But I am fully acquainted with all your wickedness, your idolatries and whoredoms, and how, through ignorance of me, ye are obstinately addicted to your apostasy and wickedness. Your pride is openly avowed, and your insolence in sin is manifested in your very looks; therefore shall ye be quickly destroyed by civil wars, and at last ruined by the Assyrians, in which the Jews shall partly share along with you. Nor shall either multitudes of sacrifices or of prayers avail to appease or turn away my wrath from you: but since you have treacherously transgressed my command in marrying heathens, and bringing up your children as heathens, the Assyrians shall, in a short time, devour both you and your estates. 8—10. Be warned, O ye Jews, that the Assyrians, having desolated the country of the ten tribes, will render you miserable. They shall be utterly ruined, as I have often warned them by my prophets. And since the princes of Judah have disregarded the bounds fixed by my law, and seized on their neighbours' property, therefore shall the Assyrians and others, as instruments of my wrath, overflow and sweep them away. 11—15. As a just punishment of the Israelites' ready compliance with the idolatrous laws of Jeroboam and his successors, they are terribly oppressed by their unrighteous and tyrannical magistrates; and my judgments shall gradually and insensibly waste the kingdoms of Israel and Judah; and, perceiving their weakness, they shall apply to the Assyrians for help; who will distress and ruin, instead of helping them. And I, by their means, will, in the most fearless and furious manner, destroy them, and bereave them of their wealth. And, forbearing to help them, I will, for a time, leave them under the power of their troubles, till at last they be made candidly to acknowledge their offences, and earnestly supplicate my favour.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—No station can protect men from God's vengeance, and no secrecy can conceal sin from his notice. But as they who allure men to sin are plagues to all around them, they may expect redoubled judgments. And none are more subtle and barbarous oppressors and persecutors than apostates, who sin against much light and love. They who treacherously revolt from God, and educate their children in idolatry, may expect to have themselves, and all they have, quickly destroyed. And nothing more certainly presages destruction than pride and impudence in sinning. If men will not be humbled for their sins, they must perish in them. If men will make this world their portion, they may expect to have it rendered a means of their ruin. The destruction of one sinful nation should, but seldom does, make all their neighbours repent of their wickedness. God's threatenings become serious and awful in their fulfilment: and it forebodes ill when wicked laws are readily obeyed: when judgments are discerned but not their cause; and when, under lesser judgments, men are not reformed, but fly to human aids. All means of relief prove fruitless except God bless them: and to trust to them but draws on heavier judgments. It is only in fellowship with God that men can be truly happy; and it is only in the way of acknowledging our offences, and of earnest prayer, that we can expect the returns of his favour.

† There are here three distinct periods. The first is the day of the captivity of the ten tribes, which closed with the captivity of Judah. The second was the day of the complete dispersion and utter desolation by the Romans. The third is the period yet to come, commencing with the restoration so often promised, so long delayed, but still a sure word of prophecy which JEHOVAH, who cannot lie, will assuredly accomplish in his own time. There seems also an implied allusion to the resurrection of our Lord, first carried captive by the soldiers; secondly, by death; on the third "his going forth prepared as the morning," when he literally arose, "early on the first day of the week, as it began to dawn."—ED.

CHAP. VI.—Ver. 1—3. Come, let us, by faith and repentance, return to the Lord who hath afflicted us, in the firm assurance of his graciously, seasonably, and speedily delivering us, and restoring us to happiness and comfort through the resurrection of Christ. And in the persevering exercise of these graces we shall experience his instruction, the clear and gradual manifestation of his favour, and his refreshing and fructifying comforts. 4—6. But, ye hypocritical Israelites and Jews, what favour can be granted you? for those pretences of reformation under Hoshea, Jehu, and Hezekiah, were but hypocritical: all is quickly blown over; therefore have I sharply rebuked them by the prophets, and by my threatenings devoted them to ruin; and in a little time my judgments, manifestly just, shall unavoidably overtake them. For it is inward and practical holiness and virtue, not ceremonial forms of service, that I chiefly regard. 7—11. But they, notwithstanding favours unnumbered, have, like Adam, broken my covenant, and lived as corruptly as the very heathens; even in the land which I gave them, to encourage them to obedience; yea, in their very acts of devotion they have treacherously played the hypocrite. Ramoth-gilead, though inhabited by Levites, is notorious for idolatry, murder, and every other crime. The Israelitish priests, who dwell there, support one another in robbery, murder, and other enormities. Nay, idolatry, whoredom, and other heaven-daring wickedness, so fearfully prevail among the ten tribes of Israel, as cannot be thought of or mentioned without horror.—And even the Jews have, by their impiety, ripened themselves for destruction.—But their harassment by the Assyrians, and captivity by the Chaldeans, shall nevertheless quickly issue in joyful deliverances.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—All troubles ought to be viewed as coming from God, and should awaken us to faith and repentance. There is no plague in this world which the infinite mercy of God in Christ cannot cure. His providence, which distresses, can relieve; and his Spirit, who convinces, can comfort us. Let us therefore always maintain faith in a risen Redeemer, and in the infinite power and kindness of God. Our deliverance and comforts are most likely to surprise us when our case is at the darkest. But God little regards that religion which comes by fits and starts. And often much hardened are the hearts of gospel hearers when almost ripened for immediate destruction. God indeed repeatedly warns before he destroys: but his words will certainly issue either in the death of men's sins, or in their own. Want of true morality can never be balanced by forms of religion: it but provokes JEHOVAH to attempt it. To what treachery, perjury, idolatry, murder, and everything horrid, professors, and especially careless clergymen, will abandon themselves! And how unanimous are mankind in their rebellion against God! No wonder then that he makes their plagues dreadful! and sovereign is the mercy when he connects deserved judgments with gracious deliverances.

CHAP. VII.—Ver. 1, 2. Notwithstanding the reformation which was begun under Jehu, and the restoration of their glory under Jehoash and Jeroboam, and notwithstanding all the pains which I have taken with them by my prophets, the wickednes of the ten tribes, in hypocrisy, perjury, dishonesty, and violence, and other forms unnumbered, is so increased before me, and is so notorious and daring, that I must punish them with unavoidable calamities. 3. By ready compliance with their wicked laws, by acting wickedly, by uttering flattery, or by slander of the godly, they please their kings. 4. They are all adulterers and idolaters; their bodies and minds being inflamed, and their hearts entertaining corrupt desires, they contrive how to gratify them. 5. In their royal feasts, they and their king besot themselves with drunkenness, and deride the oracles, ordinances, or judgments of God. 6. Heated by wine, inflamed by lust, eagerly attached to idolatry, and infuriated with hatred of one another, they greedily wait for, and seize on, the first opportunity to execute their sinful purposes. 7. Thus inflamed, they murder their magistrates one after another. But in all their calamities they never request my pity or help. 8. By marriages and alliances with heathens they have learned their manners. They are zealous for their idols, but indifferent about the true worship of God, and at best halt between him and their idols. 9. Therefore heathen enemies have wasted their country, and everywhere symptoms of their approaching destruction appear; but they never regard it, nor take any proper means to prevent it. 10. So notorious is the pride and obstinacy of their hearts, that, notwithstanding all the calamities which they have felt, or may see impending, they do not in the least repent or reform, or even request my assistance. 11. Nay, without any attention to the true method of relief, they, by turns, apply for help to their implacable enemies of Egypt and Assyria. 12. But I will entangle and disappoint them in all their designs; and will, as I have publicly warned them by my prophets, debase and distress them. 13. Their apostasy from me, and rebellion against my laws, shall issue in their fearful and lasting ruin. For though I have often delivered them in straits, they have set up idols in my room, contradicted my oracles, or entertained me with hypocritical pretences and promises of reformation. 14. Yea, even when, in their beds or idol temples, they pitifully mourned under their calamities, they never heartily supplicated me: and, while they eagerly desired corn and wine to satisfy their lust, they continue in their rebellion against me. 15. Whether I weakened them by adversity, or strengthened them by prosperity, they contrived how to displease me more and more by their idolatrous and wicked courses. 16. And even when they pretend to repent and turn to me, all is mere dissimulation;—therefore shall their princes, who have blasphemed me and reviled my prophets, be miserably destroyed by the Assyrians or conspirators; and all their applications to the Egyptians for help shall but issue in a derision of their calamities.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—Alas, how men oppose JEHOVAH'S kindness to themselves, and obstinately dare to discredit the threatenings of God. But his ruinous judgments will at last convince them, that he remembers their works. Palaces and courts are in general nests of abominations. And infernal influence and lustful fire furiously hurry sinners into whoredom and wickedness, while, with surprising care and contrivance, they wait for opportunities of gratifying their desires. And awful is their case who in trouble restrain prayer before God. Unnecessary connexion with the wicked is very insnaring and ruinous to religion and liberty; and God often makes such companions the instruments of punishing us. While stupidity under lesser judgments presages greater ones, application to heathens for help hastens them forward. Either pride, or they who indulge it, must be infallibly ruined. And nothing can be more provoking to God, than to see those, whom he has kindly warned, returning him hatred for his love. No wonder he detests the prayers of such as seek nothing but carnal enjoyments to gratify their lusts. And if even the greatest deal deceitfully with God, or outrageously with men, they themselves shall be rendered miserable and contemptible.

CHAP. VIII.—Ver. 1. Loudly and earnestly warn these Israelites, who profess to be my people, that the Assyrians shall quickly and unavoidably tear, murder, and destroy them, because they have violated their covenant-obligations to me, and rebelled against my commandments. 2. In their distress they will indeed profess to acknowledge me for their God: 3. But, since they have practically rejected me and my worship, and cast off any due regard to my laws, the Assyrians shall pursue, murder, and carry them captive. 4. Without any regard to my commandment, they have set up what kings and governors they pleased; and, to their own ruin, have made themselves idols of silver and gold. 5. But the idol calf, which they have placed at Samaria, Dan, Beth-el, or anywhere else, instead of protecting those obstinate sinners, provokes me to abandon them to their enemies. 6. According to their own invention, not any command of mine, the craftsman formed that merely pretended deity; and quickly shall it, unable to protect itself, be broken to pieces. 7. In their idolatrous courses and heathen alliances, they but hasten upon themselves fearful miseries; and any appearance of success, which they have for a while, shall but tempt the Assyrians to invade and ruin their country. 8. They shall certainly be spoiled and devoured; and the poor remains of them, in the most despicable condition, be dispersed among the heathens of Assyria, and the places adjacent. 9, 10. Their headstrong application to the Assyrians for help shall but issue in their unhappy captivity. The allies, whom they have procured at great expense, shall turn their enemies, and besiege them in their cities. And the vexatious tribute, imposed upon them by Pul, the powerful monarch of Assyria, is but a prelude to far greater calamities. 11. The multitudes of idolatrous altars which they have erected, instead of atoning for their sin, or preventing their punishment, shall increase both. 12. I have, in the most clear and instructive manner, revealed to them my oracles, directing them in everything important in time or eternity; but they have quite disregarded my institutions, and abused my prophets, as setters forth of strange doctrines or insignificant fables. 13. Their sacrifices, which, without inward piety, they pretend to offer to me, but feast on themselves, I regard as no better than dead carrion; yea, they but hasten the punishment of their sins, and their flight into Egypt, for fear of the REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—Ministers had need to be extremely bold and earnest in warning sinners. Men's own sins are their destroyers. God never casts off any till they cast off him. They who break his covenant of friendship, expose themselves to the devouring rage of all around. Nor will any profession of relation to, or knowledge of God, avail those who in works deny him. The idolizing of creatures makes way for the destruction of both them and ourselves; and, however gradually God's judgments may come, they will fall irresistibly at last. None are more despicable than professed Christians who have degenerated into profaneness. And the helps that men court instead of God will but prove the means of their ruin. If the great doctrines and laws of his word be disregarded, no sacrifices, however costly, no forms of religion can avail, but to aggravate our guilt or hasten our ruin. And neither temples nor fortifications can protect in the day of his wrath.

CHAP. IX.—Ver. 1. Do not vainly imagine, ye Israelites, that your prosperity will be as secure and lasting as that of other nations, for your iniquities are greater; you have treacherously revolted from JEHOVAH, your God, to idols: and reckoning your enjoyments their gifts, ye have honoured them with the tithes and first-fruits belonging to JEHOVAH. 2. Therefore blasting or mildew, or the ravages of the enemy, shall rob you of your abused blessings, and leave you pining for want. 3. No longer shall ye continue in Canaan; but part of you, as fugitives and vagabonds, shall retire into Egypt, and the rest be carried captive into Assyria, to live in slavery and idolatry. 4. Nor shall ye be qualified, nor have any opportunity to present any offerings to God that will be accepted; for ye shall have no access to bring your meat-offerings, or sacrifices for your sins, into my temple. 5. Under your cruel oppression, ye shall have neither time nor liberty to keep any of your solemn feasts. 6. And while such of you as flee into Egypt, or the countries adjacent, are cut off by sword, famine, and pestilence, your stately and expensive houses shall be turned into heaps of rubbish. 7. Quickly ye shall see and feel those dreadful, but richly-deserved, judgments. Ye who mocked the prophets of God as fools and madmen, shall find that your false prophets were such, when ye are abandoned of God for your inexpressible wickedness and great hatred of him and his worship, and even of one another. 8. Once ye had prophets who were zealous for me, and faithfully declared my messages: but now, whatever they pretend, your false prophets do, by their doctrine and example, insnare you into sin and punishment, being haters of, and hated by, God, as they seduce and deter men from his worship and service; nay are detested in the very temple of their idols. 9. Like the miscreants of Gibeah, ye are generally arrived at the highest pitch of lewdness, cruelty, and contempt of me, therefore will I speedily punish you in an exemplary manner. 10. Once I delighted in your fathers in the wilderness, blessed and watched over them as my chosen people; but they ungratefully apostatized to the shameful worship of Baal-peor, drawn into the snare by whorish women; and ever since ye and your fathers have multiplied and worshipped idols, as your lusts and fancies directed you. 11, 12. Your present blossoms of prosperity shall quickly leave you; and partly by miscarriages, early deaths, ravage, and murders of the enemy, your multitudes, of which ye boast, shall be almost utterly destroyed; and dreadful and lasting shall be your miseries, when I withdraw my protection. 13. Your country seems as well replenished and fortified as Tyre itself; but your children shall be destroyed by the Assyrians. 14. Ye had therefore better have no children than bring them up for the slaughter. 15. Gilgal, where I so remarkably blessed your fathers, and where my tabernacle once stood, is become notorious for idolatry and other wickedness. Therefore I hate them, and will expel them from my land and church, and will for many ages pursue them with the tokens of my vengeance. Their princes are revolters from my worship, and break through all the rules of justice and honesty. 16, 17. I will therefore utterly destroy them, root and branch; and for their obstinate rebellion, cast them away into a miserable captivity and dispersion among the heathens.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—It is absurd to rejoice when sin reigns in us, guilt burdens our consciences, and God's wrath hangs over our heads. If we idolize our created enjoyments, or bestow them upon the service of the devil, it

CHAPTER X.

Israel reproved and threatened for unfruitfulness and idolatry.

A. M. cir. 3264. B. C. cir. 740.

ISRAEL [a]is [*]an empty vine, he bringeth forth fruit [b]unto himself: [c]according to the multitude of his fruit he hath increased the altars; according to the goodness of his land they have made goodly [†]images.

2 [‡]Their heart [d]is divided; [§]now shall they be found faulty: [e]he shall [‖]break down their altars, he shall spoil their images.

3 For now they shall say, [f]We have no king, because we feared not the LORD; what then should a king do to us?[*]

4 They have spoken words, swearing falsely [g]in making a covenant: thus [h]judgment springeth up as hemlock[†] in the furrows of the field.

5 The inhabitants of Samaria shall fear [i]because of the calves of Beth-aven: for the people thereof shall mourn over it, and [k]the priests thereof [l]that rejoiced on it, for the glory thereof, because it is departed from it.

6 [m]It shall be also carried unto Assyria for a present to king Jareb:[‡] Ephraim shall receive shame, and Israel shall be ashamed of his own counsel.

7 As for Samaria, [n]her king is cut off as the foam upon [§]the water.

8 The high places also of Aven, the sin of Israel, shall be destroyed: the thorn and the thistle shall come up on their altars; [o]and they shall say to the mountains, Cover us; and to the hills, Fall on us.

9 O Israel, [p]thou hast sinned from the days of Gibeah:[*] there they stood: the battle in Gibeah against the children of iniquity did not overtake them.

10 [q]It is in my desire that I should chastise them; [r]and the people shall be gathered against them,[†] when they shall bind themselves in their two furrows.[‡]

11 And Ephraim is as [*]an heifer that is taught, and loveth to [t]tread out the corn; [u]but I passed over upon [§]her fair neck:[‖] I will make Ephraim to ride; [x]Judah shall plough, and Jacob shall break his clods.

12 [y]Sow to yourselves in righteousness, reap in mercy; break up your fallow ground: for it is time to seek the LORD, till he come and rain righteousness upon you.

13 [z]Ye have ploughed wickedness, ye have reaped iniquity, ye have eaten the fruit of lies: because thou didst trust in thy way, in the multitude of thy mighty men.

14 Therefore shall [a]a tumult arise among thy people, and all thy fortresses shall be spoiled, as Shalman spoiled Beth-arbel in the day of battle: the mother was dashed in pieces upon her children.

15 So shall Beth-el do unto you[*] because of [†]your great wickedness: in a morning shall the king of Israel utterly be cut off.

is but just that God should deprive us of them. It is but just that apostates from God's service should be expelled from his land; that they who despise his ordinances should be deprived of them. And if sin turn populous countries into desolations, the sinful inhabitants may expect destruction, flee where they will. The appointed season of God's judgments will bring to light and punish their abominations. Nor have any a more awful influence in ripening nations for ruin than villanous clergymen. If sinners will imitate their fathers in wickedness, they may expect to draw on themselves the most fearful destruction. If they separate themselves to wickedness, God will separate them to punishment. If they follow their lusts, God will withdraw his protection, and usher in a flood of calamities. If they educate their children in sin, God will destroy them in wrath. The crosses which children often occasion, more than counterbalance the comfort of them. And no misery is greater than to be deserted, hated, and rejected by God. But thrice happy are they, in the worst of times, who have God for their God and their ALL.

CHAP. X.—Ver. 1. The Israelites, destitute of true goodness, have done nothing for my glory, but have been intent only upon gratifying their own lusts; and the more their wealth increased, the more they multiplied their idolatries. 2. Their heart is divided between me and their idols; and mutual contentions rage among them: but their guilt shall quickly issue in their desolation; and the Assyrians shall destroy their altars and images. 3. Their contempt of my authority shall issue in their having no government of their own that can do them any good in their distressed circumstances. 4. They quite disregard their vows to God, and oaths to the Assyrians or to one another; and, instead of just judgments, injustice, oppression, and violence overspread the whole land. 5, 6. Dreadfully shall the worshippers mourn, and especially the priests, who lived merrily on their incomes, when their golden calves at Beth-el shall be disgracefully seized by the Assyrians, and sent as a present to their king, and themselves exposed to shame, for their obstinate worshipping of an insignificant idol, which cannot protect itself. 7. Their king, in whom they also trusted, shall be quickly and easily murdered. 8. Their high places of Beth-el, where they have committed so much wickedness, and their altars, shall be turned into heaps of rubbish; and their worshippers shall earnestly wish the mountains and hills, on which they had worshipped their idols, to fall on and crush them to death. 9. From the war against the Benjamites, who protected the miscreants of Gibeah, to the present time, ye have sinned in a like or in a more notorious manner. There your fathers were preserved, and became conquerors over the wicked Benjamites. Nay, there the wicked Benjamites stood in their own defence, and gained two battles over your slothful and inactive ancestors. 10. But now I intend effectually to punish you by the Assyrian armies, for your attachment to your calves of Dan and Beth-el, and for your revolting from my worship and allegiance to the family of David. 11. And since, notwithstanding all my pains to instruct and engage you to keep my laws, ye love only your own ease, pleasure, and profit; and since lesser judgments do not avail to reform you, I will make you the miserable slaves of the Assyrians; and even the Jews shall be terribly harassed by them, and afterwards more so by the Chaldeans;—though both shall issue in a harvest of joyful deliverances. 12. Applying the imputed righteousness of the Messiah, in his strength, live soberly, righteously, and godly, that in due time ye may enjoy the gracious reward of eternal life. Study to have your hearts convinced and renewed. It is high time now, when troubles are so near, to cry mightily to God for the gracious bestowal of his righteousness and grace. 13. Ye have, with great pains, laboured in wickedness, and thereby ripened yourselves for destructions and disappointments, because ye trusted in your idols and heathen alliances, and in your carnal projects and numerous armies. 14. Therefore shall your intestine divisions, and the invasion of the Assyrian army, throw you into the most terrible perplexity; and all your forts shall be taken and cruelly destroyed, as at the taking of Beth-arbel, where even the women and children were inhumanly butchered. 15. Your idolatry, committed at Beth-el, shall draw down the like vengeance upon you. Suddenly, and while ye expect quite other things, shall Hoshea your king be deprived of his authority, and imprisoned or murdered, and your whole civil constitution broken in pieces.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. X.—A selfish spirit defrauds God of his due honours. Nothing can be more criminal than to multiply our sins as God increases his favours: and nothing more just than for God to deprive us of that which we employ in the service of Satan. No inward treachery or dissimulation escapes his notice: highly he detests all deceit in oaths, covenants, and vows, and all injustice in civil dealings or judgments.—If we make creatures our idols, it but hastens their destruction. And if God's grace destroy not the love of sin in us, his providence will destroy the fuel of sinful lusts around us. It is kind in God to chastise men, that he may not destroy them. He often punishes with hardships those who have indulged themselves in luxurious pleasures. And men's rewards or punishments are framed answerably to their virtue or vice. But, alas, what barbarous work, what dreadful and unexpected calamities, hath sin introduced!

‡ There are certain practices claiming to be tolerated in almost every class and profession, which others condemn, but the perpetrators excuse, palliate, or justify. Among these rank certain commercial practices both of the buyer and seller, which Ephraim, by aid of his own peculiar code, complacently and confidently denies to be sins, but which God threatens with exile from his commercial cities into a state as poor, unsettled, and profitless as that of his fathers in the wilderness. CHAP. XI.—When your nation was extremely debased, and unable to help themselves, I fixed upon it for my peculiar people, and, by my special providence, brought them out of Egypt by the hand of Moses and Aaron; and I will hereafter bring forth my Son Jesus Christ from thence. Ver. 2. But such was their ingratitude, that the more my prophets exhorted and invited them to repentance and holy obedience, the more contrarily they walked, and obstinately abandoned themselves to heathenish idolatries. 3. I tenderly conducted them through the Arabian wilderness, and supported and carried them through every difficulty: but they seemed insensible of, and never cordially acknowledged my kind removal of judgments which they had deserved, and my preservation from dangers. 4. By every endearing motive and constraining influence, suited to their rational nature, I allured them to a steadfast obedience; I delivered them from their repeated oppressions by the Egyptians, and under the Judges; and, both in the wilderness and in Canaan, provided them with every necessary enjoyment. 5, 6. But since, notwithstanding my favours, they obstinately persist in their wickedness, and trust to their own devices, I will put an end to their alliances with, or their fleeing for shelter to, the Egyptians, by giving them into the hand of the Assyrians, who shall desolate their cities and villages, and carry the survivors into a miserable captivity. 7. For they are so obstinate in their idolatries, that, let my prophets invite and entreat them as they will to forsake their idols and return to me, scarcely any regard either me or them. 8. But, though their enormous wickedness richly deserves the most tremendous ruin, my own bowels of mercy towards them call for my pity. 9. I will not therefore inflict on them all that they deserve; nor will I redouble my strokes to their utter destruction; nor shall their cities, like Sodom, be perpetual monuments of my wrath; for I am infinitely sovereign in my mercy, and unchangeably faithful to my covenant made with Abraham. 10. After the captivity, and especially in the apostolic and millennial periods, the Lord shall, by the powerful voice of his gospel, cause them to own Jesus Christ, and walk in his ways. 11. Trembling under a sense of their sinfulness and misery, they shall come to him from every quarter; and with fear and trembling shall they return to their own land, and be placed in the church. 12. The Israelites compass me about with a deceitful profession and hypocritical services; but the tribes of Judah and Benjamin are yet governed by my laws, and faithfully walk in the steps of their progenitors.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XI.—Great is the kindness of God in preserving, supporting and directing us in childhood. But how much greater his kindness in bringing his Son into, and through our Egyptian world, and in delivering our souls from our worse than Egyptian bondage to Satan and our lusts, drawing us to himself, and making us heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ! Awfully criminal and ruinous is it to contemn his counsels or offers, and to persist obstinately in idolatry or ingratitude. But O how unbounded is his tender compassion! how slow is he to wrath! how averse to abandon or destroy his professed people! It is impossible then that he will ever abandon a saint! And when he speaks powerfully in his word and providence, with the most solemn awe ought we to turn from our evil ways, and follow him as our God and Guide. Thrice happy millennium, when both Jews and Gentiles shall, from all the ends of the earth, be converted to Christ! And happy are they who, amidst general apostasy, remain faithful to God and his people!

CHAP. XII.—The Israelites flatter themselves that their idols, or their Assyrian or Egyptian allies, will help and protect them; whereas, notwithstanding the labour and expense they cost them, they will at last be the instruments of ruin to their kingdom. Ver. 2. Yea, even the kingdom of Judah shall, by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, and Romans, share a punishment similar to that of the Israelites, on account of their wickedness. 3—6. And since ye have so degenerated from the piety of Jacob your father, who at Peniel wrestled with God himself, the Angel of the covenant, the infinite Sovereign, who gives being to all his promises, and by strong faith and earnest supplications obtained a remarkable blessing, and at Beth-el had the covenant of God confirmed to himself, and to you in him, see that, by faith and repentance, ye turn to this God as your God: and, while ye believe his mercy, wisdom, and equity, study to imitate him therein, and wait upon him in all the ordinances of his grace, for whatever is necessary to enable you to fulfil your duty. 7, 8. But ye Israelites, like the heathen Canaanites, make a trade of cheating, and take delight in oppressing your neighbours; and yet ye impudently pretend that your success and wealth are an evidence of your being chargeable with no gross iniquity. 9, 10. Nevertheless, I, the Lord your God, who brought you out of the land of Egypt, will, after the captivity in Babylon, and especially in the apostolic and millennial periods, bring you into my church, give you the ordinances thereof; and, as I have, so will I instruct you by my prophets and gospel ministers in divers forms. 11. And yet now, after all my instructions, not only Ramoth-gilead, a city of priests and refuge, and Gilgal, once so famous for the mercies and tabernacle of God, and tents of his people, but all the country, on both sides of Jordan, are polluted with the worship of useless idols and their altars, as numerous, and as much contemned by God, as heaps of stones in the furrows. 12—14. Yea, notwithstanding God has raised you up from so low an origin as a mere keeper of sheep, who was obliged to serve like a slave for his wife; and miraculously, by Moses, conducted you from Egypt and through the wilderness; ye have bitterly provoked him to anger with your wickedness; and therefore shall he avenge all your reproaches against him and his prophets upon you, in rendering you base and contemptible.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XII.—Alas, what a cheat many put upon their own souls, and what vexation and misery they prepare for themselves, who make creatures their confidence! God often sharply corrects those who are right in the main, that he may draw and keep them still nearer to himself: and great and lasting is that honour which is obtained by intimacy with him; and glorious the victories which saints obtain by their prayers and tears. Thrice happy are they, who have august memorials of God inscribed on their heart, and who can improve his declared relation to them as an effectual spur to a genuine repentance. But alarming is the situation, when neither the kindness of God, nor the example of pious progenitors, animate us to a holy conversation: and awful is it to consider, that, in mercantile dealings, men should be so rarely honest in God's sight. Most men think all is well if they grow rich, and retain a fair character before the world. But infinite is the mercy of God: for his grace abounds where sin had abounded! Strict is the account which God keeps of all the mercies that he bestows on us, and of our improvement of them. And all our education and advancements are his free gifts. But if we employ our grandeur and wealth to his dishonour, it is but just that he should strip us of them, and punish our shameful transgressions with shameful punishments.

CHAP. XIII.—While you Israelites retained any fear of the true God, and awful regard to his messages, ye prospered, and were revered. But since ye abandoned yourselves to the grossest idolatries, ye have been in a declining condition. Ver. 2. And yet ye are still racking your minds, and exhausting your wealth, to make and serve new idols; and your rulers are making new laws as to their worship. 3. Therefore shall ye, as utterly despicable and worthless, be quickly, easily, and universally ruined, murdered, and carried captive by the Assyrians. 4. And however ungratefully ye have disowned me, the gracious God and Saviour of your fathers, ye shall find at last that none else can avail you as a God to protect and deliver you. 5. In the wilderness, where was nothing but dangers and wants, I carefully supplied your fathers with everything necessary and comfortable, and adopted them for my peculiar people. 6. But they had scarcely entered Canaan, and enjoyed its plentiful product, when they attended to nothing but the gratification of their proud and sensual lusts. 7, 8. Therefore will I give you up to the furious, irresistible, unavoidable, sudden, barbarous, and ruinous ravages of the Assyrian troops. 9. By your sins ye have brought all this misery on yourselves: but in and by me, your almighty God and Saviour, and no other, can ye have protection, support, or deliverance. 10, 11. What avail now your kings and other magistrates, of whom ye were once so fond, as if better governors than me? Both the giving and the removing of your kings have been generally the fruits of my displeasure with you, and contributed to ruin you. 12. And your iniquities have all been kept in reserve by me, to be brought forth and punished in due season. 13. Dreadful distress and anguish shall therefore suddenly come upon you. And yet, alas! stupid and thoughtless, ye take no more pains than a stillborn child, by an earnest repentance, to extricate yourselves from the troubles which you feel, or have reason to fear. 14. In mere sovereignty I will therefore prevent your utter destruction, and will infallibly at last restore you from the lowest depths of misery. Nay, by my own death, I will ransom multitudes of mankind from all their misery of every form, and give them a glorious resurrection to everlasting life. 15, 16. But, before this take place, the Assyrians shall invade your populous and wealthy country, shall lay it desolate, seize on your wealth, destroy your wicked capital, and, in the most barbarous and inhuman manner, murder the inhabitants.

the certain path to death and destruction. When men have once set off in a course of sin, they generally wax worse and worse. And as holiness is the honour and stability of persons and societies, sin is the shame, and will be the ruin, of any people. No solid or lasting comfort is anywhere to be found but in God himself: and his help, in the time of need, is doubly kind and useful, and never to be forgotten. But, alas, his mercies are often fearfully abused, to the terrible and irresistible ruin of the impenitent! Obstinacy in sin is the grossest self-murder: but in JEHOVAH our God, our Saviour, our King, the very worst may find abundant relief. And sad would be our case if he were not better to us than we are to ourselves. Unprofitable is everything that we get without his blessing. And exact is the account he keeps of our sins against the time of his judgments. With great care he chastens his people, that they may not be destroyed. And sinners do but foolishly rush forward into dreadful and everlasting ruin by delaying their repentance. But O how astonishing is the freedom and fulness of salvation! May our hearts for ever glow with gratitude, and our lips for ever utter praise, to that kind Redeemer who so loved us, and gave himself to death and the grave for us!

CHAP. XIV.—Ver. 1. But, notwithstanding all the misery ye have brought upon yourselves by your sins, return, by faith and repentance, to me, who have granted myself to you in the gospel, as your reconciled God. 2. Earnestly beg that I may pardon your guilt, mortify your corruptions, accept you into favour, adopt you into my family, and bestow upon you all necessary blessings, that may fill your hearts and mouths with grateful praise. 3. Solemnly renounce all carnal confidence in foreign forces, military preparations, or lying idols, and trust only in me, as the helper of the helpless outcasts. 4. And I, as one graciously reconciled in Christ, will, in free mercy, pardon your iniquities, reform you from your evil courses, remove the judgments which ye have deserved, and confer upon you unmerited favours. 5—7. And not only will I, by my favourable dispensations of providence, after the captivity in Babylon, and especially in the millennium, render you glorious, well established, numerous, and every way prosperous, useful, and respected as a nation; but, by the gracious influences of my word and Spirit, will render you fruitful, flourishing, and well established in the beauties of holiness. Your converts shall greatly increase in number, and grow in knowledge and grace; and their gracious endowments, and holy conversation, shall be steady, persevering, delightful, and engaging to all around. They who enjoy the ordinances of my grace shall be thereby converted; and after their afflictions, become more fruitful in holiness, to the edification and comfort of all around them. 8. While ye with abhorrence shall renounce all your idolatries, I will graciously hear your prayers, bless, protect, and save you; and from me shall all your happiness and holiness be derived. 9. But it is only they who, being taught of God, seriously inquire into these things, that shall understand them: for his oracles and ordinances, and dispensations of providence, are all right, holy, just, and good; and the righteous will walk in them, obedient to his will, and submissive to his providence; but proud, obstinate, and inconsiderate sinners, will take occasion from them to fall into wickedness and ruin.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. XIV.—Awfully ruinous is sin; and very necessary a gospel repentance for it; and nothing more effectually leads to this than a firm faith in God's gospel grant of himself to us as our God. Great is the condescension that God should instruct us what to pray for, and how to pray, as well as readily grant our requests. And happy and delightful is it to deal with a God of infinite mercy and goodness: for all his promises are answerable to the necessities and prayers of those whom he instructs. Marvellous is the change made on persons and societies by his all-powerful grace, and kind the notice which he takes of his people's penitential resolutions! He is the gracious fountain and root of all blessings and spiritual influences to them. And there is great need therefore seriously to consider his oracles and providences, and what different use is made thereof. To the humble inquirer they are the savour of life unto life—but of death unto death to every impenitent transgressor.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF HOSEA.

While the books of Scripture form a uniform whole, uniformly contributing to one great object—the development of the character, vindication of the judgments, and commendation of the love and mercy of God in Christ—the several books may yet be generally distinguished by some special part and object assigned by the Spirit to each historian, prophet, evangelist, or apostle. Like the workmen in Solomon's temple—all are engaged in the erection of one dwelling-place for the glory of God; but some hew timber in the mountains, others square the stones in the quarry, some convey them to Jerusalem, while others rear the walls, or shape and ornament the sacred furniture. To each there is a several and appropriate part; but all are actuated by one spirit, concur in one design, and perfect one result. Accordingly, to Hosea, the Spirit seems, in a peculiar manner, to have assigned the subject of national sin and national repentance; with those sharp rebukes that smite the one, and those gracious promises that encourage the other. The prophet lived in a day when all public principle was sunk in idolatry, and its sure companion, licentiousness (chap. 1. 2. & 3. 1); yet, during their downward course, the nation had been steadily advancing in agriculture, manufactures, commerce, and riches, as is evident from chap. 2. 5, 8, 9, 12. Yet this prosperity, so far from leading the nation to God as its author, became the incentive to that idolatry (chap. 13. 2), and that dissolution of morals, which the prophet was commissioned to denounce under the name of adultery (chap. 2. 2), the complicated crime of lewdness and of perjury; while, in addition to this general indictment, the destructive sins of profane swearing, lying, stealing, and murder, are successively alleged against them (chap. 4. 2. & 7. 1). Nor is any rank exempt from the national guilt. The princes, the prophets, the priests, are all included under one common charge, and threatened with one common judgment (chap. 5. 1, 10). Yet, in the midst of all these delinquents, is the prophet commissioned to preach repentance, and to promise pardon. And in this announcement and promise he exhibits the true character of God, who is ever "long-suffering, slow to wrath, and plenteous in mercy;" while he exemplifies the only way in which a sinful man or sinful nation can ever be brought to repentance—the simple and faithful deliverance of the gospel of the grace of God, the word of reconciliation. The reformation of national manners has been attempted by mere moral instruction; but the philosophers of Greece and Rome utterly failed. It has been attempted by the satire of poets—their strains have been equally unsuccessful. It has been attempted by coercive laws, and by every form of severe and mitigated punishment; and if, by such means, public crime has for a little been restrained, it has only been effectual in producing a temporary calm, and preparing for the more terrible outburst of popular and ruinous commotion. It has been attempted in Christian lands by preaching all the precepts of a holy law, and all the terrors of approaching judgment, and the remedy has, no doubt, often affrighted the patient, but uniformly aggravated the disease; because it merely discovered the taint of the constitution, and the depth of the guilt (Rom. 3. 20. & 8. 3, 6—8). The preaching of the gospel in repentance towards God, and faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ, has alone been ever effective in producing real and effective reformation of public principles and morals.

Of this fact the Bible affords the most striking of all examples—the apostolic reforms of heathenism, merely through the preaching of the cross of Christ, and the freeness and fulness of his grace. Nor is modern missionary history wanting in similar examples. The experience of the Moravians in Greenland has borne ample testimony to the fact, that the instruction that reaches the heart is "the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ" in dying for us, and that pardon and remission of guilt which sinners find in his blood. And wherever else (as in Africa, the East Indies, or the South Seas) the grace of the gospel has been simply and zealously preached, there either local or national reformation has followed. It may not, and it should not be denied, that by means of law, whether of human or divine origin, civilization may be extensively effected and long sustained. But civilization is so far from melioration, that it is often concurrent with the deepest moral depravity. Such was the case of the Jews when Hosea preached; and the remedy he brought to their deadly disease, was a faithful exposure of all its horrors, and a faithful proclamation of the gospel of promise and grace. Such is now the case in not a few of the classes of European Christianity. The fact may be witnessed on the broad scale of cities or kingdoms, where civilization and depravity seem to go hand in hand; and where, unless God totally change the current of his providence—a thing impossible with him who changes not—judgments, either from internal commotion, or external foes, with the ruin of that national prosperity which God bestows and man abuses, must speedily and heavily fall. And for all this disease, what is the remedy? Simply the faithful preaching of that gospel of grace which Hosea addressed to the Jews, in which they are invited to "return unto the Lord," while the Lord promises to "heal their backslidings, and love them freely." chap. 14. 1, 4.—Ed.

J O E L.

Whether Joel prophesied in Judea before Hosea and Amos prophesied in Israel, and foretells the plagues of locusts and drought which Amos laments; chap. vii. or after the Israelites were carried captive into Assyria, we cannot determine. His prophecy contains (1) A representation of Judea, as terribly plagued by swarms of locusts and other insects, and great drought, intermixed with calls to solemn repentance and promises of deliverance; i. ii. 1—17. (2) Predictions of the glorious blessings to the gospel church in the apostolic and millennial periods, and of ruin to her and the Jews' enemies; ii. 28—32. iii.

[The date of Joel's prophecy is uncertain; but its continued recognition in the Hebrew canon is unquestioned, while the references to it, and the quotations from it in the New Testament, afford all that can be necessary to commend it as the word of the Lord (see Mat. xxiv. 29. Acts ii. 16—21. Rom. x. 13—16. Rev. xxi. 27. & xxii. 1). The occasion of the prophecy appears to have been a dreadful famine caused by the ravages of locusts, and other destructive insects (for whose powers of destruction, see Kirby and Spence's Entomology), upon which calamity the prophet founds an exhortation to priests and people to repent with prayer and fasting, and earnestly intercedes with God on their behalf. But, in the foresight of their impenitence, he foretells still greater judgments by an army of locusts, and exhorts them again to fasting, prayer, and repentance; on which, not as meritorious purchases of deliverance, but as witnesses of their renewal by grace, and acknowledgments, and vindications of the being and providence of God, he promises, not only deliverance from their calamities, but increase of temporal and spiritual blessings. But foreseeing still the hardened impenitence of his people, he predicts the ruin of Jerusalem and the Jewish nation, while he intersperses promises of safety to the believing remnant of "the election of grace." He then predicts the divine judgments upon the enemies of God's people, with the peace, prosperity, and purity, of Israel, when again grafted into the tree from which, as a barren branch, it had, in judgment, been broken.

His remarkable prediction of the effusion of the Holy Spirit in tongues, and prophecies, and visions, formed one of the original evidences of Christianity; and still affords the only means of accounting for the rapid propagation of the gospel through so many nations, during the first century of the Christian era.—Ed.]

CHAPTER I.

(1) Sundry judgments: 1—7. (2) Mourning prescribed: 8—13.
(3) A fast ordained: 14—20.

THE word of the Lord that came to Joel the son of Pethuel.

2 [a]Hear this, ye old men; and give ear, all ye inhabitants of the land. Hath this been in your days, or even in the days of your fathers?

3 [b]Tell ye your children of it, and let your children tell their children, and their children another generation.

4 [*]That which the palmer-worm[†] hath left hath the locust eaten; and that which the locust hath left hath the canker-worm[‡] eaten; and that which the canker-worm hath left hath the caterpillar eaten.

5 Awake, ye drunkards,[§] and weep; and howl, all ye drinkers of wine, because of the new wine; for it is cut off [c]from your mouth.

6 For a nation[‖] is come up upon [d]my land, strong, and without number, whose teeth are the teeth of a lion, and he hath the cheek-teeth of a great lion.

7 He hath laid my vine waste, and [*]barked[†] my fig-tree; he hath made it clean bare, and cast it away: the branches thereof are made white.

8 ¶ Lament like a virgin girded with sackcloth for the husband of her youth.

[†] The palmer-worm, is represented by Bochart as a particular species of locust; but the Septuagint renders it by a word signifying a caterpillar.—Ed.
[‡] The canker-worm.—This cannot be the ordinary canker-worm, for in Nah. 3. 15, it is described as a winged creature. Some think it a species of locust; others, an insect that ravages vineyards; Jeremiah (51. 27), describes it as rough; and some species of locusts have their heads covered with hairs. See Rev. 9. 8.—Ed.
[§] Drunkards.—Every period, and every nation, has its own peculiar, favourite, and prevailing sin, that seems to swallow up all others. And, it is not improbable, that as the "drunkards" are first called to awake to repentance, the sin of drunkenness had become the prevalent sin of the day.—Ed.

The seed planted in the morning has grown vigorously—the seed planted at noon has totally, or partially rotted away. The labour of one day has been lost, the labour of the next successful. Many have investigated—no man has satisfactorily accounted for the difference.—Note. Totally independent of natural causes, are such events not merely calculated, but intended, to lead men to trace the inseparable connexion between national sins and national judgments?—Ed.

12 The vine is dried up, and the fig-tree languisheth; the pomegranate-tree, the palm-tree also, and the apple-tree, even all the trees of the field, are withered: because [h]joy is withered away from the sons of men.

13 [i]Gird yourselves, and lament, ye priests; howl, ye ministers of the altar; come, lie all night in sackcloth, ye ministers of my God; [k]for the meat-offering and the drink-offering is withholden from the house of your God.

Man repents, either because he has resolved or acted ignorantly, or foolishly, and changes his purpose, and expresses his sorrow when better informed; or man has resolved or acted wickedly, and changes his purpose, and expresses his sorrow, when he has learned the evil of sin, and left the love of God. But when God is said to "repent," it means, not that he changes his purpose absolutely, but relatively. His purpose was, and ever will be, to punish the unbelieving and the impenitent; but it equally is, and ever will be, to have mercy on those who, through grace, have learned to tremble at his word, and turn from their sins to God "with full purpose of, and endeavour after, new obedience." REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—God's judgments and mercies ought to be carefully observed and remembered. Nor need we wonder if he deprive us of the mercies which we have sinfully abused, or make even the weakest insects victorious instruments of his wrath. It is hard to part with created comforts, once idolized. But certain is their shame who labour only for perishing provision: and sad their sorrow at last who place all their happiness in the delights of sense! Alas, how wide spread is the havoc made by men's sins! and it is a lamentable case when poverty disqualifies for the public service of God. National judgments call for national humiliation and importunate prayers. And in the way of our duty we may hope that God will meet us in mercy. But hardened must that heart be which trembles not when God's judgments are everywhere before our eyes; and the very animals around us bewail the disaster. Yet God's ministers must be deeply affected themselves, even though they cannot affect their hearers.

mans, are described in this awful manner, because the former presaged the invasions of the Assyrians, and the latter were preludes of Christ's awful appearance to the last judgment.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—It is very needful that ministers should warn sinners of the fatal consequences of their conduct. But the rareness of tremendous judgments wonderfully discovers the infinite patience and mercy of God. How dangerous is it to rebel against JEHOVAH, who by a nod can muster even an army of insects able to ruin the mightiest nations on earth! No one can either withstand, support under, or flee from his incensed wrath. And but little comfort can the luminaries of heaven afford us when their Maker frowns.—Extraordinary judgments call to extraordinary fasting and prayer; and all private joys ought to give place to public sorrows for sin or its fruits. In all solemn worship ministers ought to lead the way; and every penitent should be careful to perform whatever may prevent the reproach of Christ and his church, and promote the plentiful and purer enjoyment of his ordinances as a principal benefit. But no fasting can avail us, unless the heart be broken and melted by God's kindness, and turned to him. Mercy is all we need ask; and his glory, as interested in our salvation, is a sufficient plea. He will certainly hear when his people cry! and he can easily remove our plagues, renew our comforts, and give us a heart to give him the glory of his work. An abundance of outward comforts are a great mercy, when by them our hearts are enlarged in love and thankfulness to God the bestower. And especially when, together with them, our spiritual knowledge and faith are increased. By the most gracious, almighty, and awful exertions of power, is Jesus' kingdom erected in the world, or in the hearts of men. And thrice happy are they, in the worst of times, who are interested in his everlasting salvation. Rejoice then, ye Gentiles, that by the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, ye are admitted members of his gospel church; and that, though clouds and darkness be round about him in the destruction of Jews, Heathens, and Antichristians, yet mercy and truth go before his face.

CHAP. III.—Ver. 2, 8—16. Chiefly relate to the destruction of the Antichristians and Turks at the beginning of the Millennium, in which the just judgment of God will be fearfully manifested. The valley of Jehoshaphat denotes the place where the Lord will destroy them, as he did the enemies of Jehoshaphat in the valley of Berachah, 2 Chron. xx. 1—26; and may be the same as Armageddon, Rev. xiv. 14, 16; or Hamon-gog, Ezek. xxxix. 4—11; or the valley before Jerusalem, Zech. xiv. 4. The words import that there will be a general combination against God's people, abundantly furnished with weapons of war: but God, by the instruments of his wrath, will suddenly cut them off, trample them under his feet, ruin all ranks, and deprive them of all their comforts. 16—18. Amidst the terrible commotions attending the fall of Antichrist and Mahometanism, the Lord will remarkably comfort, protect, and strengthen his people, particularly the newly converted Jews; and their church and nation shall be singularly holy: neither polluted by unclean persons nor doctrines, nor molested by enemies. And great shall be the abundance of ordinances, spiritual blessings, and gracious influences, suited to both strong and weak believers. Yea, by means of the preached gospel, the most barren places shall become fruitful in saints and good works. 19—21. And, while the Egyptians, Edomites, and other inveterate enemies of the church, shall be destroyed, the Jews and people of God shall enjoy undisturbed repose; for he, who dwells among them and in them, will pardon their guilt, and deliver them from the power and filth of their sins.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—The most kind and obliging often find others unkind and unneighbourly. And no sweetness of temper or conduct can soften the enmity of the wicked. But dreadful is their danger who injure the people of God; for without fail, and in great fury, especially at the last day, will God reckon with them! But when wicked men are cast down, his people shall be lifted up in comfort, holiness, and safety.—How delightful shall this world be when all the corners of it shall be filled with the knowledge, glory, and grace of the Lord! And still more happy in the eternal state, in which God and the Lamb shall be ALL and IN ALL.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF JOEL.

The study of natural history is, in all its branches, exceedingly curious, interesting, and instructive; but in none more than in entomology, or the description of insects. The interest excited by this branch of study arises from many topics, such as, the astonishing variety of their genera and species; their wonderful forms either of beauty or hideousness; the innumerable multitudes in which many of them are produced; the relative loudness of voice and muscular power with which many of them are endowed; their powerlessness as individuals, with their irresistibility in masses; the insatiable appetite and voracity of some in their imperfect state, as the caterpillar of the butterfly, and of others in their perfect condition, as the locust, or the white ant.

But the chief excellence of natural history appears when it is viewed in its relation to God and his providence;—when the inhabitants of every leaf are examined as evidence of his liberality and goodness (Psal. 145. 16), or discovered to be instruments of his judgment which he can call forth at his pleasure, to chastise the rebellious, and humble the pride of man. A single worm can sink whole navies in the ocean; the young of a tiny fly can blight the early hopes of the entire harvest; a creature almost invisible to the naked eye, can empty the teeming granaries; while the locust, which the finger crushes as the moth, can invade an empire with the irresistibility of an Alexander, and spread famine and death over continents.

To this view of natural history, the book of Joel is particularly directed; and it affords a noble example of the fact, that the Scriptures excel all other books, as much in sublimity as in piety and truth.—ED.

THE PROPHECY OF AMOS.

AMOS was a native of Judea; chap. i. and vii. 14: and began to prophesy along with Hosea, about 800 years before Christ. After denouncing ruin to the neighbouring heathens, who had been bitter enemies to the Hebrews, he calls the Israelites, and sometimes the Jews, to account for their idolatry, ingratitude, violence, treachery, oppression, incorrigibleness, uncleanness, contempt of the sabbath, worldliness, &c. i—viii: and concludes, predicting the establishment of the gospel church in the apostolic and millennial periods.

[Amos was one among the herdmen of Tekoa, a town of Judah, four leagues south of Jerusalem; but Beth-el seems to have been his native city, and his removal to Tekoa the consequence of the anger of Jeroboam, the son of Joash, and of Amaziah the priest, (chap. vii. 10—13), because of his faithful denunciation of their idolatry. He began to prophesy along with Hosea, about 800 years before Christ; and, after proclaiming the judgments of God against the neighbouring heathens, who had cruelly persecuted the Jews, he proceeds to upbraid them with their ingratitude, idolatry, violence, oppression, treachery, sabbath-breaking, licentiousness, and worldliness; and concludes with predicting the blessed restoration of Israel, and establishment of the universal kingdom of Christ.—ED.]

of their iniquities. 4, 7, 10, 12, 14. Fire denotes furious enemies and destructive judgments. 3—5. Because the Syrians, whose capital is Damascus, have, to all their other wickedness, added the terrible oppression and murder of the Hebrews on the east of Jordan, I will cause the Assyrians to destroy their cities and forts, murder their people and princes, and carry the poor remains captives to Media. 6—8. Because the Philistines have completed their wickedness, by apprehending the Hebrews in their distress, and giving them up to the cruel Edomites, I will, by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Maccabees, and others, utterly destroy their cities, rulers, and people. 9—15. For their treachery and cruelty, the Edomites and Ammonites shall be served in like manner.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—No person need be ashamed of a mean, if honest, original. God can qualify the meanest for the most honourable work. But dreadful is the case of the mightiest nations when the measure of their iniquities is filled up, and the hour of God's judgment is come. Nothing more hastens their destruction than their oppression or murder of the saints, or implacable enmity against near relations. Walls, palaces, cities, or armies, are altogether ineffectual to withstand the power of God's wrath. And they who spitefully, covetously, and cruelly, thought to drive out others, are often themselves driven out from their dwellings.

CHAP. II.—Ver. 6—8. The most insignificant bribes can carry a cause against the most righteous of the poor. They greedily pant after the small substance which the poor or the meek possess, and insolently trample upon and plunder them. Fathers and sons incestuously commit whoredom with the same woman, to the great dishonour of my name which they profess. Contrary to law, they detain the pledges of the poor, and use them as carpets, whereon to prostrate themselves, or to feast or sleep in, before their idolatrous altars; and their drink-offerings are purchased by the fines of those whom they had unjustly condemned.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—Alas, how horrid are the barbarities of war! But if sinners perish, who sinned without law, apostates from God, and rebels against his revealed laws, may expect double vengeance! Nothing is too horrid for hardened professors. If once men violate their consciences for any advantage, they will soon do it for a very trifling one. And no injury in God's reckoning is more abominable than what is done to the meek: who will not, or to the poor, who cannot resent it. Great is the kindness of God in what he hath done for us, and in raising up ministers and patterns of holiness in our families. But, alas, how apt are men to forget mercies received, and to seduce ministers and saints into scandal! The consciences of sinners testify that it is not for want, but through the abuse, of the means of grace they are so wicked! And the obstinacy of professors, in many and highly aggravated crimes, is infinitely provoking to God, and infallibly ruinous to themselves.

CHAP. III.—Ver. 2, 3. You only have I chosen to be, and used as, my peculiar people; and therefore your punishment shall be exemplary, because ye have sinned against clearer light and higher obligations than others: nor need you expect that I will behave towards you as a friend and benefactor while you continue acting in direct contradiction to my nature and laws. 4—8. God would not issue forth such terrible denunciations of judgment unless he had you in view, as being by your sins the proper objects thereof, and intended to punish you. Not by chance, but by his special providence, these judgments are inflicted; nor shall they be either prevented or removed but upon your repentance. These warnings ought to awaken you out of your stupidity, since no punishments can be inflicted but by the will and power of God: and since he manifests his purposes to his prophets, they must faithfully declare his messages, that sinners may fear and repent. 11, 12. The Assyrians shall invade you on every side, murder your valiant men, take your strong cities, and plunder your wealth; ye shall be butchered, or driven into captivity, like sheep; and very few, even of those who hide themselves under beds, or in secret holes, shall escape.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—How dignified is the church of God! But just and severe are her corrections when her privileges are abused. Obstinacy in sin effectually separates us from a favourable God. And terrible, but certain, preludes of wrath to impenitent sinners are the threatenings of his word and providence. His terrors are not phantoms, raised to frighten the weak, ignorant, or superstitious, but awful realities, which will come to pass. And transgressions most surely insnare men in nets of guilt and misery, from which only God's almighty grace, bringing them to repentance, can deliver them. In all our troubles the hand of God must be acknowledged. He never strikes into ruin, till having warned in vain, sinners prove incorrigible: and then his warnings but aggravate their condemnation. Manifest is his justice in their destruction, who have outrageously sinned in opposition to multiplied means of grace, and who have accustomed themselves to wickedness till they consent to or approve it. If we provoke him with our offences, he will oppress us with his vengeance; and nothing will be able to prevent our ruin, unless we repent. Yea, the things which we had idolized, or had abused to iniquity, shall be ruined along with us.

CHAP. IV.—Ver. 1—3. Hear, ye wealthy and potent rulers of Israel dwelling in Samaria, the capital, who oppress the poor, and sell them for slaves, or determine the cause against them, that ye may feast on the price: therefore God hath irrevocably determined that the Assyrians shall murder and carry you into captivity, like so many small fish; and the walls of your city being broken down, part of you shall flee to the mountains, or shut up yourselves in the palace, but all to no purpose. The fugitives shall be pursued, and the high fortress laid low.

4, 5. And since you are so addicted to your idolatrous worship at Beth-el and Gilgal, pursue it in all its branches, devoting that to idols which is due to me, till ye have ripened yourselves for the most fearful and inevitable destruction. 12, 13. Some have been destroyed by fire from heaven, or some terrible judgment; and you who remain were saved with great difficulty, and are still in danger.—Therefore, whether I bring on you some more terrible judgment, or introduce the promised Messiah, prepare for the event by faith and repentance. —In vain ye will dare to contemn or oppose me, who am the Almighty Creator, the omniscient beholder of hearts and every subtle contrivance; and able to turn the most flourishing prosperity into misery, and to tread down the proudest opposers.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—God always in the end appears the patron of the injured. Great men often take infernal pleasure to render their inferiors miserable. And what they get by extortion is ordinarily expended on intemperance and luxury. But what is obtained by wickedness strangely perishes, and God turns men out of those rich enjoyments which they abuse to his dishonour, or renders them their plague: and nothing is more awful than his giving them up to their own hearts' lusts. In diversified forms, increasingly dreadful, God can punish and destroy his obstinate adversaries; and he can wonderfully distinguish men in his mercies or judgments. Whether therefore he add to his vengeance, or sovereignly meet me in mercy, let me prepare for his coming, all awed by his greatness and his glory!

CHAP. V.—Ver. 2, 3. The kingdom of Israel, once so flourishing, and never heretofore subdued by enemies, shall irrevocably fall into extreme misery, without any help to her. And scarcely a tenth part of the people shall remain to be carried captive. 4—6. Turn to me by faith, repentance, and reformation, and ye shall be preserved from ruin, and continue prosperous; or, at least, in the end be saved with an everlasting salvation;—lest the vengeance of God break forth among the descendants of Joseph, and other fellow-tribes, as devouring fire, which none of your idols can quench. 7—9. Ye who pervert justice, to the great grief of the injured, and who neglect all regard to equity in your administrations and practice, turn to him, who, as Governor of the heavenly influences, can give you rain; as the Disposer of day and night, can change your condition at his pleasure;

But in most, it arises from a restless and discontented spirit, that longs for any change, and that leads them to calculate, that in the drama of life, which they ignorantly imagine a mere "chapter of accidents," something may turn up of which they may take advantage, and enrich themselves without the care of frugality, or the toils of industry.—KO.

as Ruler of the rain, can either comfort or ruin you; and who can enable the weak to encounter their mighty enemies, and besiege and take their strong holds. 12, 13. Biassed by bribes, your judges give sentence against the poor, be their cause ever so good and clear. And since ye so incorrigibly abound in wickedness, that God's judgments must be executed upon you, wise and godly persons must forbear reproving you, and silently adore, not murmur at, these judgments. 15—24. Let justice be always administered with a steady and a free course, and without any interruption. 16, 17. Dreadful wailing and anguish shall abound everywhere, even in the vineyards, where they were wont to be merry, on account of the general havoc that my judgments shall make. 18, 19. Ye, who scornfully wish to see the day of the Lord, shall quickly feel it, full of misery and perplexity, without any comfort: and so numerous shall be the calamities thereof, that if ye escape one, ye shall fall into another. 25—27. Copying after the idolatry of your fathers in the wilderness, ye have neglected my service, and, with no small toil and expense, have carried about your idols, which could not move themselves: therefore I will make the Assyrians to carry you captives into Media, far beyond both Damascus and Babylon.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Sin has the most awful influence to reduce churches and nations. And often death or apostasy much diminishes church members. Yet nations and churches are ordinarily guilty of great and multiplied iniquities before God proceed to execute public judgments upon them. With great earnestness and expectation should we therefore seek after and wrestle with him while he may be found. And if we live up to our prayers, we may expect our requests answered, and happiness in his presence. Great prudence, as well as grief, is necessary in times of singular wickedness and trouble. But it is presumptuous and dangerous to deride God's threatenings and judgments, for they will infallibly overtake the impenitent. How odious to him are hypocritical devotions! If we regard iniquity in our heart, and practise it in our life, no religious services will avail us. And they who obstinately refuse God's calls shall at last be driven far enough from him in their wickedness.

CHAP. VI.—Ver. 1. Wo to those wealthy Jews and Israelites who live in carnal security, as if Jerusalem and Samaria, their capital cities, could protect them from my judgments. 2. Behold how those once famed cities, Calneh in Chaldea, Hamath in Syria, and Gath in the country of the Philistines, lie in ruins, though they never sinned against such abundant favours as ye have done! 3—6. Ye keep the thoughts of approaching judgments out of your minds, or flatter yourselves that they will never come; and take all opportunities to commit injustice and oppression; and abandon yourselves to sloth, luxury, sensuality, carnal mirth, drunkenness, and pride; in nowise affected with the miseries inflicted on, or impending over, the ten tribes: 7—11. Therefore shall ye be quickly carried captive into Assyria, and miserably in want of necessary provision. With unrelenting detestation God will give up your palaces and cities to the ravaging enemies to be destroyed. And meanwhile, the pestilence or famine shall 7 ¶ Thus he showed me; and, behold, the LORD stood upon a *wall made by a plumbline, with ᵇa plumbline in his hand.

8 And the LORD said unto me, Amos, What seest thou? And I said, A plumbline. Then said the LORD, Behold, I will set a plumbline* in the midst of my people Israel: ᶜI will not again pass by them any more:

9 And ᵈthe high places of Isaac† shall be desolate, and the sanctuaries of Israel shall be laid waste; and I ᵉwill rise against the house of Jeroboam with the sword.

10 ¶ Then Amaziah ᶠthe priest of Beth-el sent to Jeroboam king of Israel, saying, Amos ᵍhath conspired against thee in the midst of the house of Israel: the land is not able to bear all his words.

11 For ʰthus Amos saith, Jeroboam shall die by the sword, and Israel shall surely be led away captive out of their own land.

12 Also Amaziah said unto Amos, O thou ⁱseer, ᵏgo, flee thee away into the land of Judah, and there eat bread, and prophesy there:

13 But prophesy not again any more at Beth-el; for ˡit is the king's ‡chapel, and it is the §king's court.

15 And the LORD took me †as I followed the flock, and the LORD said unto me, °Go, prophesy unto my people Israel.

cut off while families, which their few surviving relations shall bury in astonishment, despairing of pity from God: and all ranks, great and small, shall be equally involved in the desolating calamity. 12—14. To no purpose do the prophets plead with you, hardened sinners, for your conversion and reformation. Ye have even rendered the civil administrations altogether unjust and oppressive. Ye rejoice in your idols, wealth, and power; and boast of your self-advancement, and your ability to defend yourselves: but, lo, as executioners of my just vengeance, the Assyrians, and afterwards the Chaldeans, shall ravage your whole country, and murder or take you captive, from one end of your land to the other.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—External privileges are very apt to puff up pride. And if we be once abandoned to carnal security, the examples of God's judgments all around us will scarcely affect us. A round of dissipation and luxury effectually alienates the mind from God, and shuts out every serious consideration, and every degree of sympathy with afflicted churches and nations! Pitiful are the darling pleasures of those who are abandoned of God. But fearful is their case when his wrath begins to burn against them. No external relations, church privileges, or temples, can prevent his judgments. He abhors the form of godliness which is separated from its power. Dreadful is the situation, when luxurious dissipation is exchanged for sword, pestilence, famine, captivity, and hell!—when terrible calamities but plunge men into diabolical astonishment and infernal despair!—when all are generally miserable, and none left to comfort another! and when obstinate perverters of justice, and proud boasters, are divinely abandoned to a merciless foe!

CHAP. VII.—Ver. 1—9. These things were represented to Amos in a vision. The vermin not only consumed the fruits of the ground, but were an emblem of the Assyrian ravagers. The terrible lightning, or drought, dried up their rivers, and destroyed part of the people, or figured out the devastations begun by Tiglath-pileser in Gilead and Galilee. The straight wall signified the Hebrew nation, formed and regulated by the most just laws; and the plumbline denoted that their conduct was discovered as not answerable to their laws, and therefore God would no longer forbear to punish them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—God executes diversified judgments upon obstinate sinners; and commonly directs his strokes in a gradual manner. Yet often the earnest supplications of God's ministers divert his vengeance for a time. And even the low and distressed case of nations and churches are a plea with his mercy. But at last utter, though just, destruction shall overtake the incorrigible revolters from his law; and neither temples nor palaces can protect from ruin, but concur to render them more miserable. Furious persecution is the common reward of ministers' faithful warnings and fervent prayers from their wicked neighbours. And none are more ready to wrest their words, and accuse and persecute them as traitors, than profane clergymen, as their fidelity and diligence are a standing reproach to themselves. They, who are prompted to all their religion by carnal hopes of provision or preferment, are apt to imagine every body as mean and selfish as themselves. But it is a great comfort, especially in evil times, for ministers to have had a clear call to their work. And if men, even the greatest, oppose them, God will attest their mission and messages in the fearful ruin of their ene-

I [] SAW the LORD standing upon the altar;[] and he said, Smite the [†] lintel of the door, that the posts may shake; and [‡] cut them in the head, all of them; and I will slay the last of them with the sword: he that fleeth of them shall not flee away, and he that escapeth of them shall not be delivered.

5 And the Lord GOD of hosts is he that [d] toucheth the land, and it shall melt, [e] and all that dwell therein shall mourn; and it shall rise up wholly like a flood, and shall be drowned, as by the flood of Egypt.

CHAP. VIII.—Ver. 4—6. By your oppression ye devour the substance of the poor, that they can scarcely preserve themselves in life: ye are weary of God's holy seasons, and desirous of their being over, that ye may return to your injustice, in making the measure wherewith you sell your corn too scanty, and causing the poor purchasers to give you more than just weight for the price, that, by your extortions, ye may force the poor to sell themselves to you for slaves, at a mere trifle, or oblige them to buy the very refuse of your grain. 7—10. God hath therefore sworn by himself that he will punish your wickedness by the most terrible and overwhelming judgments; and that your present prosperity shall, of a sudden, issue in the terrible destruction of your princes and people; and your luxurious and idolatrous revelling and mirth, in the most bitter mourning and anguish. 14. The sin of Samaria, and manner of Beer-sheba, denote idols worshipped there.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VIII.—Whatever God shows us ought to be carefully observed. His patience wears out at length; and obstinate sinning must end in deplorable misery; and sinful mirth in howling and ignominious death. Yea, hopeless is the case when fearful calamities only render men sullen and peevish.—Carnal men heartily hate God and his ordinances. Sabbaths and holy duties are intolerable burdens; and merchandise, even the basest, is to them a cordial pleasure. Nor, when nations are ripening for ruin, do they ever fail to oppress God's poor people. But riches got by rapine will bring on ruin. And let the oppressor be ever so high, the flood of God's wrath shall overwhelm him. They who would not tremble for the sins of the land, shall tremble under its judgments And if men hate God's word and ordinances, they, and every impudent idolater, must expect to be deprived of them, and hastened into eternal misery.

CHAP. IX.—Ver. 1. God's standing on the altar at Beth-el, and smiting the lintel, and cutting the posts, denote his treading down and destroying that and other idolatrous temples, together with the king, princes, priests, and people, that worshipped there. 5, 6. I, the Almighty former of heaven and earth, and all that is therein, and the Governor of seas and rains, will, with the greatest ease, ruin the whole country by the ravaging army of the Assyrians. 7. ites are no better than the black, barbarous, and idolatrous Ethiopians; and though I brought you from Egypt, that is no more than what I did for the Philistines, or will do for the Syrians, who are mere heathens. 9. I will despise and afflict you, O ye Israelites and Jews, among all nations; but with such exact care, that not one elect person shall be ruined, or his existence prevented. 11, 12. After the return from Babylon, the Jewish church and nation were re-established, and the Maccabees conquered the Edomites and neighbouring heathens. But by the coming of Christ the church was restored, religion revived, and shone more gloriously than ever before; and Gentiles, as well as Jews, became the happy subjects of his government. 13. The harvest and vintage continuing till the next seed-time, &c. denotes the amazing abundance of spiritual blessings in the apostolic and millennial periods. 14, 15. Their rebuilding the waste cities, &c. denotes the great deliverance from the heathenish idolatry and corrupt lusts; and the abundant peace and prosperity, and fixed settlement of the gospel church. These last five verses had a partial fulfilment among the Jews after their captivity in Babylon; and will have a more noted fulfilment among all the Hebrews in the glorious millennium.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IX.—Obstinate wickedness issues at last in dreadful and unavoidable ruin. It avails not who may be for us, if God be against us: wherever we go, his eyes are upon us for evil; whatever we do, his hand can destroy us; and all creatures are at his command to execute his vengeance. Alas, how sins indulged turn professors of the true religion into worse than heathens! And if they abandon their peculiar holiness, God must strip them of their peculiar privileges. Nothing can be a more lying refuge than hopes of impunity in impenitency: and never is ruin nearer than when men put it far from their thoughts. But marvellously God preserves his elect amidst the most fearful shakings, confusions, and miseries. When all seems desperate, he wonderfully revives his church, and blesses her with all spiritual blessings in Christ Jesus. And great shall be the glory of the millennial, and especially of the eternal period, in which not one good thing promised shall remain unfulfilled.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF AMOS.

Of the Book of Amos two distinct views may be taken. (1) It may be viewed as a mere composition, without any reference to inspiration. And, if so, what an elevated idea does it convey of the literary state of Israel, when a common herdman and fruiterer could produce such a work. Viewed in this light, the sublimity and beauty of its imagery, combined with the purity of its morals, the honesty of its rebukes, and the tenderness and incorruptibility of its patriotism, place it far above every book hitherto produced upon these subjects, in any country, by any of the same rank, opportunities, and education. (2) But while, to humble the pride of man, it may be lawful to draw such a comparison; yet the true view of the book is that of its inspiration—the work of a "holy man of old speaking as he was moved by the Holy Ghost." And here we must note the wisdom of God in "condescending to men of low estate." He delivers his oracles not by "the wise," not by "the scribe," not by "the disputers of this world," but "chooses the weak to confound the strong, and things which are not to bring to nought things that are, that no man should glory in his sight." No doubt God has chosen a Moses, "learned in all the learning of the Egyptians;" and a Paul, "bred at the feet of Gamaliel;" but if he did so to demonstrate the power of sanctified learning, he also chose an Amos who was "neither a prophet, nor the son (scholar) of a prophet," but a simple "herdman and gatherer of sycamore fruit," and a few Galilean fishermen, "without (human) learning," to demonstrate that God's work is to be done, "not by wisdom, nor by might, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord."

Amos prophesied of the same events as Hosea, and seems to have been his contemporary. He is quoted in the New Testament, Acts vii. 42, 43. & xv. 15—18, corresponding to Amos v. 25, 26. & ix. 11, 12.—ED.

THE PROPHECY OF OBADIAH.

OBADIAH seems to have prophesied along with Jeremiah, about A. M. 3417. His short prophecy contains, (1) Threatenings against the Edomites, who may be considered as typical of Antichrist, and other implacable adversaries of the true church; viz., that their pride should be humbled; 1—4: their wealth plundered; 5—7: their wisdom infatuated; 7—9: their spiteful carriage towards God's distressed people avenged; 10—16: (2) Gracious promises to Israel, that they should subdue the Edomites and others; 17—20: and that Christ's kingdom should be erected by a great salvation; 21.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.—Ver. 3—7. However proud ye Edomites be, and however rocky and inaccessible your country, I will cause the Chaldeans and others to lay it desolate and destroy your nation. And, worse than robbers or gatherers of grapes, they shall utterly spoil you of all that you have, even of what you think best secreted. Yea, your allies, who have marched to your borders as assistants, and received your subsidies and provision, shall betray you, and turn their arms against you: 10—16. Because, contrary to natural relation and duty, ye took pleasure in the ruin of the Jews, and even helped the Chaldeans to destroy Jerusalem, murder its inhabitants, apprehend captives, and seize on the spoil; or insulted the unhappy sufferers, and even barbarously endeavoured to apprehend, murder, or deliver to the Chaldeans, such as had fled; your conduct shall draw upon you similar sufferings in the day of the Lord's destruction of the heathens around you; and your joyous revellings in Judea, on account of the destruction of my people, shall issue in your drinking up, to the very bottom, the cup of my wrath, to your utter ruin, and the perpetual desolation of your country. 17—21. These verses had a partial fulfilment when Cyrus restored the Jews to their country, and when the Maccabees subdued the Edomites and the nations around, and in the apostolic spread of the gospel among the heathen; but will have a more signal accomplishment when the Hebrews return to their own land in the millennium, and when the Antichristians and Turks are cut off, to make way for the universal kingdom of Jesus Christ.

REFLECTIONS.—God can easily find both hearts and hands for the most bloody work he can intend against sinners. And pride and carnal security dangerously deceive and ripen men for destruction. Their self-exaltation but tends to debase them; their carnal confidences but betray them; their wealth but allures their enemies to hunt out and destroy them; their hired allies assist them to their ruin; their understanding, not employed to keep them from sin, being infatuated, decoys them into danger; the bravery of their warriors but serves to make the slaughter more universal; their joys but issue in imbittering their anguish; their undutiful and barbarous conduct towards God's distressed people but fills up an uncommon cup of misery to themselves.—But marvellously connected are the confusion of Christ's impenitent foes, the deliverance of his church, and the conversion and purification of multitudes of sinners; and great is the honour that Jesus obtains therein. Yea, if we suffer with him we shall also reign with him, and be glorified together.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF OBADIAH.

The prophecy of Obadiah is remarkable as the shortest book in the Old Testament. Yet, within that brief limit, it foretells and describes the final extirpation of an entire people (ver. 10)—a mighty and prosperous kingdom—an event which history has fully realized. For either the Edomites were cut off in the Maccabean and subsequent wars, or completely scattered from their own country and imbodied among the Jews, or absorbed by the Nabathean Arabs. Obadiah appears to be quoted or alluded to Rev. 11. 15. & 18. 17.—ED.

THIS prophet was born in Gath-hepher, a city of Galilee, and prophesied about A. M. 3140. In some unwritten predictions he foretold the restoration of the kingdom of Israel by Jehoash and Jeroboam II. 2 Kings xiv. 25. But here we have the history of the warning which he gave to the heathen Ninevites. It contains remarkable manifestations of human infirmity and divine mercy connected. But the principal scope of it is to figure out Jesus Christ's interposition for guilty sinners, and the amazing and effectual spread of his gospel through the Gentile world.

[This prophet was of the tribe of Zebulun, and born at Gath-hepher, a city of that tribe. (See 2 Kin. xiv. 25. Josh. xix. 13). Many things are conjectured concerning him, which, because merely conjectural, we hold it useless to repeat, believing it better, and, perhaps, the only thing strictly allowable, to speak of those things that are clearly recorded. These things are merely the time of his preaching, which was in, or a little before, the days of Jeroboam the son of Jehoash (2 Kin. xiv. 25), and the facts narrated in the book itself; namely, the prophet's divine commission; his unwillingness to comply; his attempted escape; his wonderful prevention; his miraculous preservation; his faithful announcement of judgment; the remarkable repentance of Nineveh; its merciful reprieve; the prophet's dissatisfaction; and God's condescending defence of his merciful government. These facts, when combined, present us with a truly wonderful narrative—one which, if need were, against mere philosophers, we could well defend; but one of which, to Christians, it is enough to say, its truth is endorsed by our Lord himself; while the miraculous preservation of the prophet is declared to have been a type of his death and resurrection. (See Mat. xii. 39—41. Luke xi. 30—32. Heb. xiii. 15). Jonah, though his book rank fifth in order of the minor prophets, must evidently have been one of the most ancient of all, except David, who have left behind them any written predictions. For, the fall of Nineveh, and the death of Sardanapalus, the last of the Assyrian monarchs, is, by common consent of chronologers, referred to a period about 820 B. C.; while the same authorities generally refer the preaching of Jonah, and the repentance and reprieve of Nineveh, to a period about 862 B. C., which was during the life of Jehu, king of Israel.—ED.]

CHAPTER I.

(1) Jonah's mission to Nineveh, and flight to Tarshish: 1—3. (2) Overtaken by a tempest, thrown into the sea, and swallowed by a fish: 4—17.

A. M. cir. 3142.
B. C. cir. 862.

NOW the word of the LORD* came unto [a]Jonah the son of Amittai, saying,

2 Arise, go to Nineveh, that great city,† and cry against it; for [b]their wickedness is come up before me.

3 But Jonah rose up to [c]flee unto Tarshish‡ from the presence of the LORD, and went down to Joppa; and he found a ship going to Tarshish: so he paid the fare thereof, and went down into it, to go with them unto Tarshish from the presence of the LORD.

4 ¶ But the LORD [§]sent out a great wind into the sea, and there was a mighty tempest in the sea, so that the ship [‖]was like to be broken.

5 Then the mariners were afraid, and cried every man unto his god, and [d]cast forth the wares that were in the ship into the sea, to lighten it of them: but Jonah was gone down into the sides of the ship; and he lay, and was fast asleep.

6 So the shipmaster came to him, and said unto him, *What meanest thou, O sleeper? arise, call upon thy God, if so be that God will think upon us, that we perish not.

7 And they said every one to his fellow, Come, and let us cast lots, that we may know for whose cause this evil is upon us. So they cast lots, and [f]the lot fell upon Jonah.

8 Then said they unto him, Tell us, we pray thee, for whose cause this evil is upon us? [g]What is thine occupation? and whence comest thou? what is thy country? and of what people art thou?

9 And he said unto them, I am an Hebrew; and I fear the LORD, the God of heaven, which hath made the sea and the dry land.

10 Then were the men exceedingly afraid,* and said unto him, Why hast thou done this? (For the men knew that he fled from the presence of the LORD, because he had told them.)

11 ¶ Then said they unto him, What shall we do unto thee, that the sea may be calm unto us? (for the sea wrought, and was tempestuous.)

12 And he said unto them, Take me up, and cast me forth into the sea; so shall the sea be calm unto you: for I know that for my sake this great tempest is upon you.

13 Nevertheless the men rowed hard to bring it to the land; but they could not: for the sea wrought, and was tempestuous against them.

14 Wherefore they cried unto the LORD, and said, We beseech thee, O LORD, we beseech thee, let us not perish for this man's life, and lay not upon us innocent blood: for thou, O LORD, hast done as it pleased thee.

15 So they took up Jonah, and cast him forth into the sea; and the sea ceased from her raging.

16 Then the men feared the LORD exceedingly, and offered a sacrifice unto the LORD, and made vows.

17 ¶ Now the LORD had prepared a great fish† to swallow up Jonah. And Jonah was in the belly of the fish three days and three nights.

According to Diodorus Siculus, it was a parallelogram 20 miles long, and 12 broad; consequently rather more than 60 miles in compass. It was surrounded by walls 100 feet in height, so broad that three chariots could drive abreast, and defended by 1500 towers, each 200 feet high—truly a "great city."—ED.

Tarsus in Cilicia, Carthage in Africa, and Tartissus in Spain, have all been suggested; while some think it a general name for "the sea." That it was not the eastern Tarshish to which vessels sailed from Ezion-geber, on the Red Sea, the embarkation at Joppa, a port in the Mediterranean, is the only thing certain.—ED.

* Though heathens, as appears from each having his peculiar tutelary god (ver. 5), yet, like most other heathens, they did not deny the Deity, but merely the sole Deity, of JEHOVAH; and when they heard of him as the God of the sea, and saw the evidence of the fact in the storm and the confession of Jonah, they became afraid. They seem to have been ignorant and superstitious, but, in their own way, pious men, open to conviction, and, most probably, converted to the knowledge and worship of the true God. See ver. 14—16.—ED.

† A great fish—commonly supposed to be a whale (as most in accordance with Mat. 12. 40), though the species is not here mentioned by the prophet, nor does it necessarily signify a whale even in Matthew. For the purpose of preservation, however, the whale seems most appropriate; as, without supposing the prophet to have descended into the stomach, (which the text does not necessarily require), the mouth of a common whale presents a cavity from 6 to 8 feet wide, from 10 to 12 feet high, and from 15 to 16 feet long; which would contain an abundant supply of air, continually renewed by the creature's ascent to the surface. The fact that whales are not found in the Mediterranean, is of no weight, inasmuch as they may have been there abundantly, and extirpated by the fishers, as they have been in other seas, and the lower latitudes of the Atlantic. But as the whole transaction was a miracle, it is not necessary to have recourse to these facts in defence of the narrative; it is enough to know there is nothing beyond the power and mercy of God, when wisdom requires their exhibition.—ED.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—God's ministers must either send or bear his message as he directs them. But even good men will often take the most foolish methods to evade difficult and dangerous duties. And Providence may seem at first to favour their projects; but rebellion against God will at last awaken terrible storms in consciences and societies; and saints may become a plague to heathens themselves, and need their rebukes for their wickedness and deep unconcern. In troubles it highly becomes us to inquire into the sinful cause. In sinning, we seldom think how mischievous the consequences may be: and in vain we indulge the most secret wickedness, when God can so easily discover it. Yea, shameful is it when ministers and saints are forced to confess their secret rebel-

The prayer and deliverance of Jonah.

A. M. cir. 3142. B. C. cir. 862.

THEN Jonah prayed unto the LORD his God out of the fish's belly,

2 And said, I cried [*] by reason of mine affliction unto the LORD, and he heard me; out of the belly[†] of hell[‡] cried I, and thou heardest my voice.

3 For thou hadst cast me into the deep, in the [§] midst of the seas; and the floods compassed me about: all thy billows and thy waves passed over me.

4 Then I said, [a] I am cast out of thy sight; yet I will look again toward thy holy temple.

5 The [b] waters compassed me about, even to the soul: the depth closed me round about, the weeds[‖] were wrapped about my head.

6 I went down to the [c] bottoms of the mountains; the earth with her bars was about me for ever:[*] yet hast thou brought up my life from [d] corruption, O LORD my God.

AND the word[*] of the LORD came unto Jonah the second time, saying,

2 Arise, go unto Nineveh, that great city, and preach[†] unto it the preaching that I bid thee.

3 So Jonah arose, and went unto Nineveh, according to the word of the LORD. (Now Nineveh was an exceeding great city of three days' journey.[‡])

But Jonah, compelled to his duty, takes up the letter, without duly regarding the spirit, of his message; and, being more deeply concerned for his own character as a true prophet, than for the character of him that sent him as a merciful God, he is sore displeased when his character seems sacrificed, though, in proportion as he apparently suffers, God is really glorified.—ED.

lions to his open enemies. But when men are truly humbled for sin, they will readily submit to either shame or suffering for it. And if sin has raised a storm, we never must hope for peace till it be removed by remission and repentance. Those who acknowledge their guilt with openness and grief are entitled to our deepest compassion. But even natural conscience, if awakened, will startle at the very appearance of murder. There is no striving against the counsels of God: his will must be done: and if, with prayer, we follow his direction, we may trust him with the issue. While alarming providences produce short appearances of religion in sinners, God often strangely marks his dominion over, and direction of, his creatures, and affords marvellous protection to his offending saints.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—Many are forced to pray when and where they never expected. But no place can shut out a saint from communion with his God: nor need he doubt his nearness and willingness to help in a time of need. But how fearful is it to fall into the hands of the living God, even as a provoked Father! Into what hells, what depths, what pits of corruption, desertion, temptation, and affliction, may a saint be plunged! and be reduced, how near the brink of despair! But troubles should lead us directly to our God, and make us by faith call to mind his new covenant characters and promises. To expect happiness in sinful courses, or idolized creatures, is to forsake our own mercy. And if we run from our proper work, we run from our substantial comforts. It is unreasonable, on this side hell, to indulge despair. For great is the power of God over all creatures; and infinite and unbounded his mercy towards penitent and praying offenders. But noted deliverances ought always to issue in high praises and thanksgivings, and in redoubled applications to our duty.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—God often tries the sincerity of men's repentance by assigning to them that very work which they had formerly evaded: and marks his favours to true penitents in honouring them with important trusts. And it is a mercy even to be scourged into cheerful obedience. What alarming messages of unexpected wrath must God's ministers sometimes bear! And his word must not be bent either to the humours of preachers or hearers.—It bears a promising appearance when kings obtain proper notice of God's warnings, and seriously attend to them; when they and their subjects concur in repentance and reformation; and when believing fears of judgment, and hopes of mercy, jointly excite to it. While sinners are stirred up to prayer, there is hope in their end. God favourably regards even external reformation, that he may encourage to that which is truly evangelical.

might be a shadow over his head, to deliver him from his grief.* So Jonah [b]was exceeding glad of the gourd.

7 But God prepared a worm when the morning rose the next day, and it smote the gourd† that it withered.

* I do well to be angry.—The prophet does not mean that he approved being angry with God, but with the worm that devoured his shade, and the wind and sun that distressed him. An ignorant, but common feeling of displeasure with second causes, with a total forgetfulness of God as the first cause of our trials, either for purposes of correction or improvement.—Ed.

† Came up in a night—rather, "came out in a night;" literally "son of a night," in reference to the foliage, and not to the stem.—Ed.

9 And God said to Jonah, Doest thou well to be angry for the gourd? And he said, I do well to be angry,* even unto death.

10 Then said the Lord, Thou hast had pity on the gourd, for the which thou hast not laboured, neither madest it grow; which came up in a night, and perished in a night:†

11 And should not I spare Nineveh, that great city, wherein are more than sixscore thousand persons that cannot discern between their right hand and their left hand; and also much cattle?

Reflections upon Chap. IV.—It is very dangerous to be under the power of a proud, peevish spirit. Men often pretend regard for God's honour, when they mind only their own; and fear disparagement without any ground. Alas! awful is the consideration that pride and passion should so affect even saints, that they should wish for death, either to themselves or others, when they are very unripe for it; and rage at that very mercy of God which prevents their damnation. Yea, even create inconveniences to themselves, that they may get somewhat to complain of! How apt are men to be lifted up or cast down by a mere trifle. But if they will vex themselves with imaginary miseries, it is but just that they be made to feel real ones. Ungoverned passions too often bear down reason and conscience, and make men vindicate the most glaring absurdity and guilt, and outrageously fly out against both their God and their life. But infinite is the tenderness of God in taking such pains to convince and reclaim his froward children and servants. If we have pity on an earthly comfort, how absurd to quarrel with his pity to babes, to creatures endowed with immortal souls, and to all the works of his hands. But let me not bid adieu to this prophet without beholding in him my once suffering and now glorified Redeemer. He, for our rebellion imputed to him, was pursued by the storm, was cast into the raging ocean of his Father's wrath, to procure for us an eternal calm of forgiveness and favour. After lying a part of three days in the grave, he was miraculously raised from the dead, and ascended to glory. And marvellously effectual was the publication of the gospel to multitudes of sinners, chiefly of the Gentiles, for their conviction, conversion, and eternal salvation.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF JONAH.

In whatever point of view he is contemplated, Jonah stands alone among the prophets of God. His first characteristic is resistance to the divine commission. In this, no doubt, he appears assimilated both to Moses and Jeremiah (Ex. iii. 11. Jer. i. 6. & xx. 9); but still there is this remarkable difference,—they only remonstrated against their commission on the ground of their unfitness. Jonah never pleads unfitness, yet timidly, sensitively, alas! it may be, selfishly, shrinks from the unwelcome duty. His second characteristic is irritability; and that, not a momentary ebullition succeeded by as speedy repentance, but a spirit that sits and broods over its malady, and vindicates, even before God, the indulgence of its bitter reflections. The third characteristic stands in the historic events by which his life has been distinguished from other men. His miraculous preservation; his prayer composed at the bottom of the sea; his return from the regions of death; and, probably, his wonderful reappearance to the very mariners that threw him overboard; the faithful boldness of his preaching; its unparalleled success with a rich, luxurious, and abandoned people;—these form peculiarities in the personal history of the prophet, perfectly unparalleled among any of his brethren. But with these historical peculiarities we have little concern, farther than to admire them as examples of the wonderful power of God. Our business is rather with the two moral traits by which the prophet is distinguished, which, however strange, nay, almost incredible, as they may at first sight appear, will, on examination, be found much more common than Christians generally imagine.

(1) As to the first—disobedience to the divine commission—is it not every day realized when conscience tells us not to suffer sin upon our neighbour; and yet fear of giving offence, the desire of pleasing, the love of ease, or some selfish interest, prevents us from delivering the unwelcome message. No doubt we may satisfy ourselves with pleading that we have no direct commission as Jonah had; but he that knows his Master's will, and sees a sinner perishing without an attempt for his salvation, is just as culpable as Jonah was, commits exactly the same fault, and with this remarkable aggravation, that he has more light than Jonah had, and is proportionably liable to greater condemnation.

(2) As to the second characteristic—irritability—it may be partly dependent upon bodily structure; partly upon education, example, and previous habits; and partly upon the state of the health; and it may not be denied, that where these concur, though they cannot justify, they may yet go far to palliate many personal faults of temper. But for Jonah what can be pleaded either in excuse or extenuation? Nothing; at least nothing that is recorded. Nor is it needful that he should be defended; nay, it is just that he be condemned. But while we cast the stone at the prophet, let us carefully examine whether we may not stand under like condemnation. Have we never murmured at our lot? Have we never wished to have it changed? Have we never been unreasonably angry with an adversary? Have we never justified that anger to our own conscience, or to others? If we have ever been guilty of these, or any of these things, have we not acted in the very spirit of Jonah; and when we condemn him, are we not literally condemning ourselves?—Ed.

THE PROPHECY OF MICAH.

This prophet began his predictions a little after Isaiah, and continued prophesying along with him about fifty years. His scope is to convince the Israelites, and especially the Jews, of their wickedness and danger, and so to bring them to repentance; ch. i—iii, vi, and vii. 1—6: and to comfort the people of God, with promises of mercy and deliverance, of the incarnation of the Messiah, and the grace of the gospel through him; ch. ii. 12, 13; iv, v, and vii. 7—20.

Hear, ye Israelites and Jews, nay, the nations around, and even the senseless earth, and let God manifest his indignation against you from heaven, if ye despise this warning.

Behold, JEHOVAH cometh to execute his just vengeance upon you, and to destroy your proud rulers and strong cities, and irresistibly to spread destruction and misery among all ranks in every place. 5—17. Your idolatry and other wickedness, which prevail in the two capitals, and thence spread through the whole kingdoms, are the cause: and therefore shall the Assyrians render Samaria a ruinous heap, and shall seize upon the idols thereof, and their furniture, as a booty bestowed by their gods to reward the toils of the siege. 12—15. The inhabitants of the distressed cities earnestly longed for some news of deliverance; but the Assyrians marched up to Jerusalem itself.—Lachish, which first admitted the idolatries of the ten tribes, shall be peculiarly miserable.—The hired troops of the Philistines shall betray their trust.—The Assyrians shall plunder Mareshah, and pass on to Adullam, or even to Jerusalem. 8, 9, 16. Make therefore every possible demonstration of grief for the murder and captivity of thy people, and the desolation of thy cities.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. I.—It is very hard to awaken obstinate sinners. But if they will not hear God's voice, they must feel his hand; and nothing can protect them from his Almighty wrath. No judgments are inflicted but what our sins have deserved. And the more wicked persons or places be, the larger share in them must they expect. If great cities will be ringleaders in impieties, they must be made distinguished monuments of wrath. Nor need they expect that ever that which hires or tempts men to sin will long prosper. But even the messengers of God ought never to desire the evil day, but to bewail the punishment of sinners, as well as the sufferings of saints. Nor should we ever gratify with tidings such as make merry with the sins or the sorrows of God's people. Alas! what shame, what contempt, what perplexity, what confusion, what anguish and misery, the most delicate sinners are exposed to at last! And by the very sins which themselves introduced, men are effectually driven out of their countries, cities, houses, and property.

CHAP. II.—Ver. 3—5, 10. The Assyrians, and after them the Chaldeans and Romans, shall invade, plunder, and desolate your country, murder, and carry you into captivity, and give your inheritances to others, because of your wickedness. 6. Ye attempt to silence my faithful prophets, who declare to you your transgressions, and warn you of my judgments, that ye may repent; and therefore quickly no more pains shall be taken with you, to render you sensible of your sins. But ye encourage those lying impostors, who, to obtain a good living to themselves, prophesy to you of nothing but peace and plenty, answerably to your luxurious inclinations. 7. Ye who glory in your descent from the patriarch Jacob, but are very unlike to him, can ye stop the revelations of my Spirit? or is the work of threatening a pleasure to me? Do not all my messages work for the real good of penitent and upright persons? 8—10. Lately, you Israelites, under Pekah, fearfully ravaged Judea, without any provocation, plundering the 4 [a] Then shall they [b] cry unto the LORD, but he will not hear them: [c] he will even hide his face from them at that time, as they have behaved themselves ill in their doings.

5 Thus saith the LORD concerning [d] the prophets that make my people err, that [e] bite with their teeth, and cry, Peace; and he that putteth not into their mouths, they even prepare war against him:

6 Therefore [f] night shall be unto you, *that ye shall not have a vision; and it shall be dark unto you, †that ye shall not divine; and the sun shall go down over the prophets, and the day shall be dark over them.

7 Then [g] shall the seers be ashamed, and the diviners confounded; yea, they shall all cover their [h] lips: for there is [i] no answer of God.

8 ¶ But truly [k] I am full of power by the Spirit of the LORD, and of judgment, and of might, [l] to declare unto Jacob his transgression, and to Israel his sin.

9 [m] Hear this, I pray you, ye heads of the house of Jacob, and princes of the house of Israel, that abhor judgment, and pervert all equity.

10 They build up Zion with [n] blood,‡ and Jerusalem with iniquity.

11 [o] The heads thereof judge for reward, and [p] the priests thereof teach for hire, and the prophets thereof [q] divine for money; yet [r] will they lean upon the LORD,‖ and say, Is not the LORD among us? none evil can come upon us.

12 Therefore [s] shall Zion, for your sake, be ploughed as a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps, and the mountain of the house as the high places of the forest.

very poor, abusing the very women and children, and, by enslaving and selling them to the heathens around, ye have for ever deprived them of my worship, privileges, and country; therefore shall ye, in a little time, be murdered in, or carried from, your own country, which ye have so much defiled by your wickedness. 12, 13. These verses, as connected with the preceding, seem to import, that God would gather the Israelites and Jews into their cities for the slaughter; and that the Assyrians, Chaldeans, and Romans, would break into them, and carry them and their kings into a dismal captivity. But taking them as a promise, they mean that God would not only bring back the Jews and Israelites to Canaan, but would render his scattered people one flock under Jesus Christ, who, in consequence of his resurrection and ascension, would, in the apostolic and millennial periods, conquer both Jews and Gentiles, and bring them at last to eternal glory.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. II.—In vain do men think that they may do whatever they can, since no power is given for destruction, but for edification. And if covetousness reign in men's hearts, compassion will be banished from it. The more design and deliberation men discover in their sinning, the more will God manifest his wisdom and power in the certainty, severity, notoriety, and answerableness of their punishment. And no injuries does God more fearfully resent than those which are done to the harmless, the fatherless, and widows, who have least help in man. They who have used others fraudulently and violently, shall be so used themselves. And nothing can be more dreadful than to be cut off from the church of God, and its exalted privileges. They who were most haughty and secure in their prosperity, are generally the most dejected and desperate in their adversity. They who hate holiness hate reproof, and reckon faithful ministers a nuisance and a burden; and being vicious and debauched, they wish to have ministers, and even a god, like themselves. But upright men delight in God's messages, whether promises or threatenings. Blessed be God that Jesus is our chief Shepherd: and, notwithstanding all the rage of hell and earth, he will gather the outcasts of Israel, render his gospel church extensive as the earth, and her members numerous as the sand by the sea shore; and without losing one, bring them from sin, from death, and the grave, to the mansions above!

CHAP. III.—Ver. 2, 3. They cruelly oppressed their subjects, and, by exactions and rapine, took all from them that they could, barbarously making their very lives a burden to them. 5—7. Because they, by their flatteries, seduce my people into wickedness, for the sake of their own bellies, and hate, and do all the mischief they can to my prophets, and all such as give them nothing: therefore such calamities shall come as will effectually refute their flatteries, and shamefully hinder them from foreseeing anything good, either for themselves or others. 8. Called, and inspired by the Spirit of God, I, regardless of all your opposition, faithfully and boldly charge you with your sins, and warn you of approaching judgments. 10—12. Since ye repair the temple and palace, and the houses or walls of Jerusalem, with the money which ye have procured by taking away the lives of the innocent, and then seizing on their estates; and that obtained by bribery;—and since, notwithstanding the basest dishonesty in your respective stations, ye expect prosperity, because of the Lord's temple among you, and other external privileges: therefore shall your temple and holy city, for your wickedness, be, by the Chaldeans, and especially the Romans, turned into heaps of rubbish, and an absolute desert.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. III.—Dreadful is the case of nations and churches, when they, who ought to be chief promoters of religion and virtue, become ringleaders in impiety. And they who oppress or seduce others, infallibly prepare for themselves misery, contempt, and perplexity. Ministers have great need of a clear call, and remarkable qualifications, to render them duly faithful and bold, in opposition to universally rampant corruptions. Nor must they respect even the greatest, but in God's name rebuke with all authority. No pretences of piety can consecrate wicked conduct: but often that which is good is rendered profane by the carnality of its principle, manner, and end. And, alas! often the sins of rulers hasten ruin upon both churches and nations!

A. M. cir. 3284. B. C. cir. 720.

BUT in the last days[a] it shall come to pass, that the [a]mountain of the house of the LORD shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it.

2 And many nations shall come, and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and [b]he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem.

3 ¶ [c]And he shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into [†]pruning-hooks: nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.

4 But [d]they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig-tree; and none shall make them afraid: for the mouth of the LORD of hosts hath spoken it.

5 For all[‡] people will walk every one in the name of his god, and we [e]will walk in the name of the LORD our God for ever and ever.

6 ¶ In that day,[§] saith the LORD, will I assemble her that halteth, and I will gather her that is driven out, and her that I have afflicted;

7 And I will make her that halted a remnant, and her that was cast far off a strong nation: and the LORD [f]shall reign over them in mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever.

8 And thou, O tower of the flock, the strong hold of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion;[‖] the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem.

9 Now why dost thou cry out aloud? is there no king in thee? is thy counsellor perished? for pangs have taken thee, as a woman in travail.

10 [g]Be in pain, and labour to bring forth, O daughter of Zion, like a woman in travail: for [h]now shalt thou go forth out of the city, and thou shalt dwell in the field, and thou shalt go even to Babylon: [i]there shalt thou be delivered; there the LORD shall redeem thee from the hand of thine enemies.

11 ¶ [k]Now[*] also many nations are gathered against thee, that say, Let her be defiled, and let our eye look upon Zion.

12 But they know not the thoughts of the LORD, neither understand they his counsel: for he shall [l]gather them as the sheaves into the floor.

13 [m]Arise and thrash, O daughter of Zion: for I will make thine horn iron, and I will make thy hoofs brass; and thou shalt beat in pieces many people: and [n]I will consecrate their gain unto the LORD, and their substance unto the LORD of the whole earth.

[a] In the last days.—This prophecy has been considered by some as a quotation from Is. 2. 2, with which it fully corresponds in meaning, though not exactly in words. There is no doubt that one prophet studied the predictions of others (Dan. 9. 2); still the difference between Isaiah and Micah is so considerable that the one cannot well be viewed as taken from the other. It is safer, therefore, to trace the similarity to the one Spirit in both, and the variation to some difference in the objects which the wisdom of God had in view by each prediction.—ED.

CHAP. IV.—Ver. 1—5. In the apostolic and millennial periods the gospel church, represented by Zion and the temple, shall, in all the kingdoms of the world, be most firmly and visibly established. Then shall multitudes of Gentiles everywhere earnestly excite one another to attend the ordinances, and embrace the doctrines of the gospel, issuing forth from Jerusalem in the ministration of the apostles, and other Jewish preachers, and, by his gracious influences and government, Jesus Christ shall introduce spiritual peace and holy conversation, and even civil concord, virtuous industry, and safety among the nations, where murderous wars, idleness, and danger, had long prevailed.—And though others should follow their idolatrous courses, in which they have been educated, we will constantly persevere in the faith, profession, worship, and obedience of the true God, in his strength, and according to the rule of his word. 6, 7. And not only shall the weak, dispirited, and scattered Jews, be preserved, brought back to, and happily re-established in their own land, as the people of God, but the most weak and wretched sinners shall be everywhere gathered to Christ, and the very weakest of saints encouraged by him. 8. And both in the apostolic and millennial periods, multitudes of Jews shall be among the first noted converts to the gospel church. 9, 10. There is therefore no ground of desperate sorrow amidst your distresses, by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, or Romans; for after ye have been reduced to the most miserable captivity, bondage, and dispersion, ye shall be marvellously delivered; and the deliverances of the gospel church from her heathen and Antichristian persecutors shall take place when her distress is at the greatest, and her case seemingly desperate. 11—13. And however the Gentiles may insult you, O Jewish church and nation, in your distress by the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Syro-grecians, and Romans, and rejoice in hopes of your utter destruction, God shall, in prosecution of his secret purposes, gather them together to be destroyed, even by your means, and their spoils shall be consecrated to pious uses, and many of themselves be turned to the Lord. And however the heathens, Antichristians, and Mahometans, insult the gospel church, she shall at last be exalted on their ruins, and true christians be enabled to destroy and tread under foot every opposer.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. IV.—Graciously has God set his promises and threatenings the one over against the other. And glorious is our New Testament church, and regularly and firmly founded. What profitable instruction, light and conviction, peace and love, faithfulness, vigour, harmony, holiness, and comfort, abound in her! God graciously issues forth comforting promises before distress takes place, that his consolations may be ready for his afflicted people. And the extremity of trouble always issues in marvellous deliverances to the church and her members. Yea, in all her harassments and oppressions, her enemies and her God have very different ends. They aim at ruining her, and exalting themselves; and God aims at purifying, enlarging, and enriching her, and ruining them.

CHAP. V.—Ver. 1, 2. Notwithstanding the Chaldeans, or others, who assemble themselves to destroy the cities, and afflict the rulers of Judah, the Messiah, who was, from eternity, begotten by the Father, and constituted the covenant-head of an elect world, shall, in due time, be born in the small city of Beth-lehem Judah, to be the great Ruler and Governor of the church. 3, 4. Nevertheless, the calamities of the Jewish nation shall be often repeated, till he be born of the Virgin, and multitudes of Gentile converts flow together unto him. Then, to his own and his Father's honour, he shall, in the most powerful manner, gather and govern, establish and perfect his gospel church. His kingdom shall be ex-abide:* for now shall he be great unto the ends of the earth.

5 And this man shall be the peace, when the Assyrian† shall come into our land: and when he shall tread in our palaces, then shall we raise against him seven‡ shepherds, and eight§ principal men.

6 And they shall ᵃ waste the land of Assyria with the sword, and the land of Nimrod † in the entrances thereof: thus shall he deliver us from the Assyrian, when he ᵇ cometh into our land, and when he treadeth within our borders.

7 And the remnant of Jacob shall be in the midst of many people as a dew from the LORD, as the showers upon the grass,‡ that tarrieth not for man, nor waiteth for the sons of men.

8 ¶ And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a lion among the beasts of the forest, as a young lion among the flocks of § sheep; who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver.

9 Thine hand ‖ shall be lifted up upon thine adversaries, and all thine enemies shall be cut off.*

10 And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the LORD, that ᶜ I will cut off thy horses out of the midst of thee, and I will destroy thy chariots:

11 And I will cut off the cities of thy land, and throw down all thy strong holds:

12 And I will cut off witchcrafts out of thine hand; and thou shalt have no more soothsayers:

13 Thy graven images also will I cut off, and thy † standing images out of the midst of thee; and thou shalt no more worship the work of thine hands.

14 And I will pluck up thy groves out of the midst of thee: so will I destroy thy ‡ cities.

15 And I will execute vengeance in anger and fury upon the heathen,§ such as they have not heard.

CHAPTER VI.

God's controversy for ingratitude, wilful ignorance, unjust dealing, and idolatry.

HEAR ye now what the LORD saith; Arise, contend thou * before the mountains, and let the hills hear thy voice.

2 Hear ye, O mountains,† the LORD's controversy, and ye strong foundations of the earth: ᵃ for the LORD hath a controversy with his people, and he will plead with Israel.

3 ᵇ O my people, what have I done unto thee? and wherein have I wearied thee? testify against me.

4 For ᶜ I brought thee up out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed thee out of the house of servants; and I sent before thee Moses, Aaron, and Miriam.

5 O my people, remember now ᵈ what Balak king of Moab consulted, and what Balaam the son of Beor answered him from Shittim unto Gilgal;* that ye may know the righteousness of the LORD.

6 ¶ ᵉ Wherewith shall I come† before the LORD, and bow myself before the high God? shall I come before him ᶠ with burnt-offerings, with calves ‡ of a year old?

7 ᵍ Will the LORD be pleased with thousands of rams, or with ten thousands of rivers of oil? ʰ shall I give my first-born for my transgression, the fruit of my § body for the sin of my soul?

8 He hath ⁱ showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the LORD require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to ‖ walk humbly with thy God?

9 The LORD's ᵏ voice crieth unto the city, and * the man of wisdom ˡ shall see thy name: hear ye ᵐ the rod, and who hath appointed it.

10 † Are there yet ⁿ the treasures of wickedness in the house of the wicked, and the ‡ scant measure that is abominable?

11 § Shall I count them pure with * the wicked balances, and with the bag of deceitful weights?

12 ᵖ For the rich men thereof are full of violence, and the inhabitants thereof have spoken lies, and their tongue is deceitful in their mouth.

13 Therefore also ᵠ will I make thee sick in smiting thee, in making thee desolate because of thy sins.

14 ʳ Thou shalt eat, but not be satisfied; and thy casting down ‖ shall be in the midst of thee; and * thou shalt take hold, but shalt not deliver; and that which thou deliverest will I give up to the sword.

15 Thou shalt ˢ sow, but thou shalt not reap; thou shalt tread the olives, but thou shalt not anoint thee with oil; and sweet wine, but shalt not drink wine.

† The Assyrian.—A general name for any northern invader, of whom the invasion of Sennacherib was but a mere type. Concerning this formidable enemy, the Jews are constantly warned by the prophets. tended, and his honour advanced over the world. And not only shall he protect Jerusalem from the Assyrian invaders, but, in every age, shall defend his church from heathen, Antichristian, or Mahometan enemies; and by proper instruments in church or state, shall punish them with a fearful destruction. 7—9. And as, at the return from Babylon, and their present dispersion, the Jews shall be exceedingly blessed, and imboldened by God, and made a blessing to multitudes around them, and a terror to their opposers, so shall their preachers, in the apostolic and millennial periods, be remarkably useful in converting the Gentiles to Christ, but a terrible curse, and mean of destruction, to their opposers. 10, 11. I will purge them from all their former corruptions; particularly their trusting in carnal confidences, horses, chariots, and fortifications; and from all divinations and idolatries: and terrible shall be the vengeance which I will execute upon the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Syro-grecians, Romans, Antichristians, and Mahometans, who shall have persecuted and murdered them.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. V.—Behold the miseries of Israel, and the disgrace of the family of David gloriously counterbalanced in the person, incarnation, mediation, and glory of Christ! And grievous distresses and troubles making way for the most glorious benefits of redemption! Behold how extensive, glorious, peaceful, safe, and lasting is his spiritual kingdom! They who attempt to ruin it but hasten their own destruction. Greatly useful were the Jews, and still shall be, in converting others to Christ, whom they have long so heartily hated. And with great readiness and boldness men act for God when animated by his Spirit. Yea, thrice happy are the churches when their enemies are destroyed, and their internal corruptions removed!

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VI.—With solemn earnestness ought ministers to speak on God's behalf; and to inculcate the warnings, threatenings, charges, and promises of God. In fearful controversies God pleads with his own people for their sins. And if he graciously bestow good magistrates and teachers, and disappoint the plots of our enemies, vile and provoking is our ingratitude. Deep convictions of guilt, or fondness of an enterprise, may occasion the most anxious inquiries after peace and pardon. And by the most costly expedients would men willingly procure these blessings. But not all the inventions of men can recommend us to God; and faith in Christ, and in God as our God in him, and a true repentance and real holiness are preferable to every ceremonial service. Infinite then is the kindness of God in teaching us both by his word and by his rod of afflictions. And great is the necessity of improving both, to promote our turning to God. Sinners, by their wickedness, infallibly bring multiplied calamities upon their own heads. And wicked rulers are awful plagues to nations and churches; for great multitudes will soon cleave to the very worst laws and customs.

CHAP. VII.—Ver. 1—6. Alas! few upright men are now left in the country with whom I can conscientiously associate; and early religion, and noted progress in holiness, are scarcely to be found. Good and upright men are almost entirely gone out of this world: and almost every one is ready, for self-interest, to murder or oppress the most innocent, or most nearly related. Bent upon doing as much mischief as they can, their very princes and judges even impudently demand bribes, and without sense of shame, they agree to perpetrate the most shocking mischiefs. The very best of them are mischievous and hurtful; therefore shall God quickly plunge them into just and most inextricable miseries. So terribly treacherous are they become, that no one is safe in trusting even his nearest relations; nay, none are more to be suspected. 7—10. Therefore will I, by faith and patience, wait on the Lord; and pray and look for deliverance and safety from him alone, as my God in Christ; nor shall mine enemies have any reason to rejoice over and insult me, for the all-sufficient JEHOVAH shall support, comfort, and deliver me in all my troubles. I will therefore justify God, and submit to his corrections, as procured by my own iniquity, until he revenge the injuries done to me, and publicly own me as his, and honour me to behold the exertions of his equity, mercy, and faithfulness,—and till the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Syro-grecians, Romans, Antichristians, and Mahometans, who have oppressed us, be altogether disgraced and ruined. 11—13. Though the country shall be desolated, on account of the sins of the inhabitants, yet, whenever the time fixed in God's purpose, for relieving the nation, rebuilding Jerusalem, or other cities, and for the re-establishment of the churches comes, all restraints and hinderances shall be entirely taken out of the way, and the gospel preached over all the world; and not only shall the Jews return from all lands, in which they have been dispersed, but Gentiles, from all parts of the world, shall be converted to Christ. 14. Lord, since thy peculiar people must be thus destroyed and scattered, do thou, as their Shepherd, care for, protect, direct, and provide for them, as a nation separated from the world; and bring them back to their wonted habitations and happiness. 15—17. I the Lord will do as great things for them as I did when I brought their fathers out of the land of Egypt. And the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Syro-grecians, Romans, Papists, or Mahometans, shall, in their turns, be astonished at the wonderful deliverance of my people, and be trampled under their feet, and with terror submit themselves to their power. 18—20. Who is a God like unto thee, in perfections, persons, purposes, relations, or works! Who so ready and abundant as thou art in pardoning the most aggravated iniquities of thy people? Thou wilt, in infinitely tender mercy, return to us, notwithstanding all our provocations, and wilt destroy the power of sin in us, and fully and irrevocably pardon all our iniquities: yea, thou wilt perform all thy ancient promises, which were graciously made to Abraham, and confirmed to Jacob, and other patriarchs, by thy solemn and inviolable oath.

REFLECTIONS UPON CHAP. VII.—Few are the eminently pious amidst the many notoriously wicked in times of general corruption. And where sin prevails, what unnatural monsters of violence, fraud, injustice, and everything horrid, are formed by it. But universal contempt and violation of relative duties is a fearful presage of God's awful judgments, and a sad proof of prevalent corruptions. And under divine rebukes nothing is more proper than to consider our ways, repent of our sins, justify God, and look to him alone. His deliverance of his people will quickly issue in the contempt and ruin of his enemies. And every impediment of his salvation is easily removed in the day of his power and time of his love. Even after the most desolating judgments, he can easily assemble and restore his favourites. Quickly and graciously he answers those prayers which are presented to him for their re-establishment and prosperity; and marvellous things he performs for their relief. Thrice happy then and pleasant is it when he gets the glory and men by faith take the comfort of his perfections, promises, and works.

CONCLUDING REMARKS ON THE BOOK OF MICAH.

The distinguishing peculiarity of the book of Micah is its discovery of the place where the Saviour should be born; which prediction may be said to lay the foundation of the New Testament. From this book Herod learned the place of Messiah's birth; and, by seeking his life, gave occasion to the flight into Egypt, and the fulfilment of another prophecy. But this prophecy is not less remarkable for the manner in which it delineates our Lord's character and office as Shepherd of his flocks on earth; while it equally reveals his eternal glory with the Father before the world was. That the ancient Jews understood this prophecy to apply to Messiah is certain from the decision of the chief priests and elders (Mat. 2. 6); while the Targum of Jonathan concurs with the Talmud in giving the same view. And if the modern Jews have been led, from their opposition to Christianity, to adopt any other interpretation, it only proves how far prejudice may blind the eyes against the clearest evidence, and induce us the more earnestly to pray, that when Moses and the prophets are read, the Lord would be mercifully pleased to remove the veil from their eyes.

THE PROPHECY OF NAHUM.

THIS prophet was a native of Elkosh, a city of Galilee, and appears to have prophesied about A. M. 3284, a little before Sennacherib invaded Judea, in order to comfort the Jews with the hopes of the approaching destruction of the Assyrian army before Jerusalem, and afterwards of their empire, and of Nineveh the capital. [See Introduction, chap. iv. sect. x.]

Josephus places Nahum in the reign of Jotham; others think him contemporary with Hezekiah; but, from chap. 2. 2, it is generally concluded that he prophesied after the captivity of the ten tribes. His principal subject is the downfal of the Assyrian monarchy, of which the capital was Nineveh. This prophecy was remarkably fulfilled about a century after the date assigned to its utterance, and thirty years previous to the destruction of Jerusalem. Chap. i. 15, is quoted Rom. x. 15. & chap. iii. 4, in Rev. xviii. 2, 3.—ED.]

CHAPTER I.

The majesty of God in goodness to his people, and severity to his enemies.

THE burden* of Nineveh. The book of the [a] vision of Nahum the Elkoshite.

2 [†] God is jealous,[‡] and the LORD revengeth;[§] the LORD revengeth, and [‖] is furious; the LORD will take vengeance on his adversaries, and he reserveth wrath for his enemies.

3 The LORD is [b] slow to anger, and great in power, and will not at all acquit the wicked: the LORD hath his way in the whirlwind and in the storm, and the clouds are the dust of his feet.

4 [c] He rebuketh the sea, and maketh it dry, and drieth up all the rivers: Bashan languisheth, and Carmel; and the flower of Lebanon languisheth.

5 [d] The mountains quake at him, and the hills melt, and the earth is burnt at his presence,[*] yea, the world, and all that dwell therein.

6 Who can stand before his indignation? and who can abide in the fierceness of his anger? his fury is poured out like fire, and the rocks are thrown down by him.

7 The LORD is good,[†] a strong hold in the day of trouble; and he knoweth them that trust in him.

8 But with an over-running flood[‡] he will make an utter end of the place thereof,[§] and darkness shall pursue his enemies.

9 What do ye imagine against the LORD? he will make an utter end: affliction shall not rise up the second time.

10 For while they be folden together as thorns, and while they are drunken as drunkards, they shall be devoured as stubble fully dry.
